There was to be a joint rally of both parties in the city hall that night. Mrs. Locke and Peter Hinman would be on the stage with all their satellites. The hall would be filled. At the psychological moment, the Youngest Reporter, besmeared with powder, rouge, lipstick and bedizened with a loud dress and earrings, would come screaming down the aisle and call upon Peter Hinman not to forsake her. She would moan that she was dying and poverty-stricken, that he must remember their love and not leave her to die in the gutter alone. The city of Mechanicsville would see, hear and draw its own conclusions.

"Peter Hinman will be the only man on the stage with a dinner jacket," said Mrs. Locke, "and you'll enter just as he gets up to speak."

"It's so melodramatic," protested the reporter weakly. "Suppose I get arrested for disturbing the peace?"

Mrs. Locke took a yellowback from her handbag and thrust it determinedly into the reporter's pocket.

"Oh, no!" she protested, "I can't take this!" But the bill was still in her pocket when she left the room. It made her feel strangely guilty. Criminal.

Feeling thoroughly soaked in sin, she entered the hall that night at 9. Every seat was filled. The flag-draped balcony surged with people. At one end of the hall was a broad stage and on the stage sat a line of solemn-faced Mechanicsville citizens. The reporter picked out the one man in a dinner jacket and fixed her eye on the second button on his waistcoat. She did not quite dare look him in the face.

Down the aisle she charged, the vision of one eye almost obscured by the rakish hat Mrs. Locke had insisted upon. The dangling earrings bit into her lobes. Her tight red dress caught her knees with every step. No more of this Sadie Thompson stuff for her, she thought, as her heart beat thickly in her throat. Never again would she take a dirty job at the crossroads. She was half tempted to cut and run anyway. Then she saw the white waistcoat advance to the centre of the stage and caught the urgency in Mrs. Locke's red-brown eye.

"Here goes!" muttered the reporter, tingling with nervousness, "Cross the ice, Eliza! Do or die!"

"Peter!" she moaned, falling to her knees with a hoarse sob. "Don't desert your little Nellie! I am sick and broke. Don't cast me off to die. Remember our love! Don't you care for me any more, Peter? Peteee . . ."

Her voice broke on a high squealing note, for she had lifted her eyes to the face above the white waistcoat. Peter Hinman was the glorious Apollo of the train! And his face was frozen into angry contemptuous lines. His hands clenched.

With a long loud cry that was neither forced not theatrical, the reporter rushed into the night. She fairly tore back to Mrs. Locke's, pulled off the hideous clothes and changed into her own plain tailored garments. The Boston train was pulling out as she jumped aboard. The one bit of luck in a horrible night!

She wiped little beads of perspiration from her brow as she slumped in her seat. Fumbling for her handkerchief, she drew out the yellowback. She would send it back in the morning. It gave her a horrid, crawly feeling just to touch it. Fumbling again, she brought out the yellow scratch paper with the "Road of the Transgressor" scrawled across it.

"The Road of the Transgressor," she muttered, her point of view clear as crystal, "is harder than nails. Gosh hanged if it isn't!"

Electricity Restores Life

A group of New York engineers described recently before the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, in Pasadena, a method for restoring life to victims of electric shock. Strangely enough the agent used in this method to cause the heart to once again take up its work is another electric shock more powerful than the first. This method which includes artificial respiration both before and after administration of the reviving shock has proved successful in about 60 per cent of the experiments conducted on animals, it was reported. It was also said that while current with intensities of one-tenth ampere may cause the heart to stop, reviving shocks may be as high as 25 amperes.

There Are Three Reasons for Lavish Indulgence in Vegetables

One Need Not Be Urged to Feast Upon Fresh Garden Produce.

Those of us who could and did take a hand at planting the vegetable garden early in the season are now enjoying the results of our labors.

When you have helped to dig the potatoes and helped to pick the young green cabbage, the yellow squash, the tender string beans, the tasselled corn and have had a hand in cooking them, they taste like no other vegetables, of course. What a salad ripe tomatoes, crisp cucumbers, lettuce and chicory with a few sweet onions make! It is not necessary for any one to urge vegetables "because they are good for you" upon you.

While we cannot all of us enjoy vegetables just out of the garden and in such large numbers every day, we can indulge in them lavishly at this season of the year when our markets are full of really fresh products not many hours away from the place of their production. They are reasonable in price and, when well cooked and dressed, are satisfying to the palate as well as an asset to nutrition. The minerals, vitamins and roughage which they provide are most important in a well rounded diet.

Tomato Goulash.

¼ cup salad oil.
2 onions (sliced).
2 green peppers (shredded).
2 cups of corn.
8 tomatoes (cut in eighths).
Salt.
Pepper.

Heat the oil. Add onion and cook until a delicate brown. Add peppers and corn and cook five minutes. Add tomatoes and seasoning and cook until soft.

Vegetable Salad.

1 cup shredded cabbage.
1 sliced cucumber.
1 cup diced beets or
2 sliced tomatoes.
½ cup French dressing.
1 bunch young onions.
1 bunch radishes.

Mix cabbage, cucumber and beets or tomatoes with dressing and let stand in refrigerator a half hour. Before serving garnish with radishes and onions.

Back to the Land For Contentment

A man went to the country to find contentment—and found only more unrest. It is the commonest of mistakes. People seek contentment in other places, not knowing that if they are to find contentment, here or there, they must first have the capacity for it in their own souls. For it is inner and not outer.

Nevertheless, I know well many cases in which men and women, returning to life in country places, simple living, a certain amount of manual labor (not to exhaustion) and, above all, stillness, have been able to reconstruct their lives.—David Grayson in Cosmopolitan.

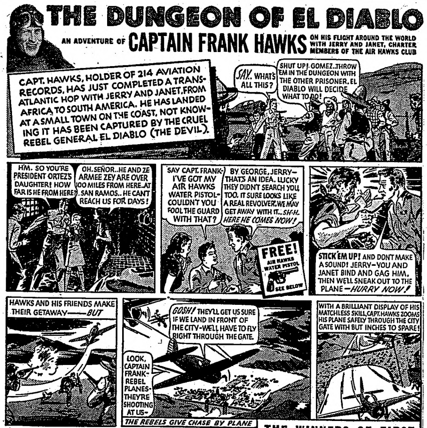
THE DUNGEON OF EL DIABLO
AN ADVENTURE OF CAPTAIN FRANK HAWKS ON HIS FLIGHT AROUND THE WORLD WITH JERRY AND JANET, CHARTER MEMBERS OF THE AIR HAWKS CLUB



CAPT. HAWKS, HOLDER OF 214 AVIATION RECORDS, HAS JUST COMPLETED A TRANS-ATLANTIC HOP WITH JERRY AND JANET, FROM AFRICA TO SOUTH AMERICA. HE HAS LANDED AT A SMALL TOWN ON THE COAST, NOT KNOWING IT HAS BEEN CAPTURED BY THE CRUEL REBEL GENERAL EL DIABLO (THE DEVIL).
SAY.. WHAT'S ALL THIS?
SHUT UP! GOMEZ..THROW 'EM IN THE DUNGEON WITH THE OTHER PRISONER. EL DIABLO WILL DECIDE WHAT TO DO!
H'M. SO YOU'RE PRESIDENT ORTEZ'S DAUGHTER! HOW FAR IS HE FROM HERE?
OH. SEÑOR..HE AND ZE ARMEE ZEY ARE OVER 100 MILES FROM HERE..AT SAN RAMOS.. HE CAN'T REACH US FOR DAYS!
SAY CAPT. FRANK- I'VE GOT MY AIR HAWKS WATER PISTOL- COULDN'T YOU FOOL THE GUARD WITH THAT?
BY GEORGE, JERRY- THAT'S AN IDEA. LUCKY THEY DIDN'T SEARCH YOU, TOO. IT SURE LOOKS LIKE A REAL REVOLVER. WE MAY GET AWAY WITH IT..SH-H. HERE HE COMES NOW!
FREE! AIR HAWKS WATER PISTOL SEE BELOW
STICK 'EM UP! AND DON'T MAKE A SOUND! JERRY-YOU AND JANET BIND AND GAG HIM, THEN WE'LL SNEAK OUT TO THE PLANE-HURRY NOW!
HAWKS AND HIS FRIENDS MAKE THEIR GETAWAY——BUT GOSH! THEY'LL GET US SURE IF WE LAND IN FRONT OF THE CITY-WE'LL HAVE TO FLY RIGHT THROUGH THE GATE.
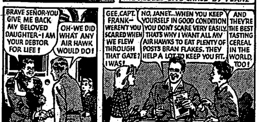
LOOK, CAPTAIN FRANK-REBEL PLANES-THEY'RE SHOOTING AT US-
THE REBELS GIVE CHASE BY PLANE
WITH A BRILLIANT DISPLAY OF HIS MATCHLESS SKILL, CAPT. HAWKS ZOOMS HIS PLANE SAFELY THROUGH THE CITY GATE WITH BUT INCHES TO SPARE!



BRAVE SEÑOR-YOU GIVE ME BACK MY BELOVED DAUGHTER-I AM YOUR DEBTOR FOR LIFE!
OH-WE DID WHAT ANY AIR HAWK WOULD DO!
GEE, CAPT. FRANK-WEREN'T YOU SCARED WHEN WE FLEW THROUGH THAT GATE? I WAS!
NO, JANET...WHEN YOU KEEP YOURSELF IN GOOD CONDITION YOU DON'T SCARE VERY EASILY. THAT'S WHY I WANT ALL MY AIR HAWKS TO EAT PLENTY OF POST'S BRAN FLAKES. THEY HELP A LOT TO KEEP YOU FIT.

Miss Helena Erdmann has returned to Brainerd where she was re-elected to teach in the city high school this year. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Erdmann, motored to Brainerd with her.

Thru misplacement of copy, nearly a column of locals missed getting into the news columns last week. Some of these items had been phoned in and others handed in. We regret exceedingly, that this happened, but are using as many of the items as possible for this issue.

Martin Gulseth and family have moved from the Anderson house on Minnesota avenue to the H. L. Hanson farm which they have leased for the coming year. Mr. and Mrs. Hanson and family have moved into their residence which was recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. H. Sande.

The two St. Hilaire groups of the Home Management project met regularly at the Norwegian Lutheran church parlors for a check-up meeting. Each member invited a guest, and a social hour followed the business meeting. Games and contests furnished diversion, and lunch was served.

Among out-of-town people here for the ball game a week ago Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Andy McNabb of Bemidji. During sawmill days in St. Hilaire, Mr. McNabb was lath sawyer, and he will be recalled by all who were here at that time. He has resided in Bemidji continuously since leaving this village.

A car belonging to Orville Gulseth collided with that of H. R. Allen last Sunday evening on the road in front of the old lumber yard site. Aside from minor cuts received by Mrs. Allen and one of the Gulseth party, no one was injured. Broken windshields, a bent axle, a mashed fender and a punctured tire was the sum of damage to the cars.

Miss Evelyn Gulseth returned last week from Austin, Minn., where she had spent ten days, having accompanied Mrs. Carl Johnson and daughters on their return trip to that city. While in Austin, Miss Gulseth went on a conducted tour thru the Hormel plant and other points of interest, and while enroute home she spent a day with relatives in Minneapolis.

Railroad Jim
THE COLUMN CONDUCTOR
Says . . .

Passengers in the smoking compartment on my train were arguing about why railroad business is picking up.

A factory owner said it was because of this new Free pick-up-and-delivery of less than carload freight. This is door-to-door service with no extra charge added to the freight bill.

A traveling salesman said it was because so many passenger and freight trains now run on faster schedules.

There was a school principal in the group and he said it was because train travel is so much cheaper for passengers. He said passenger fares are at the lowest point in history, with substantial reductions if you buy a round-trip ticket—and no more surcharge for riding in sleeping cars.

One man, a farmer, said he liked something he could depend on, that's why he was traveling by train.

Another man, a newspaper reporter, said people were in favor of railroad travel because it is by far the safest. He quoted a lot of statistics from a book called, "Live and Let Live."

A banker we all know by name said railroad tax payments mean a lot in this state.

We are proud of railroad achievements, appreciate the public's good will and increased patronage, and pledge continued progress.

Miss Helena Erdmann has returned to Brainerd where she was re-elected to teach in the city high school this year. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Erdmann, motored to Brainerd with her.

Thru misplacement of copy, nearly a column of locals missed getting into the news columns last week. Some of these items had been phoned in and others handed in. We regret exceedingly, that this happened, but are using as many of the items as possible for this issue.

Martin Gulseth and family have moved from the Anderson house on Minnesota avenue to the H. L. Hanson farm which they have leased for the coming year. Mr. and Mrs. Hanson and family have moved into their residence which was recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. H. Sande.

The two St. Hilaire groups of the Home Management project met regularly at the Norwegian Lutheran church parlors for a check-up meeting. Each member invited a guest, and a social hour followed the business meeting. Games and contests furnished diversion, and lunch was served.

Among out-of-town people here for the ball game a week ago Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Andy McNabb of Bemidji. During sawmill days in St. Hilaire, Mr. McNabb was lath sawyer, and he will be recalled by all who were here at that time. He has resided in Bemidji continuously since leaving this village.

A car belonging to Orville Gulseth collided with that of H. R. Allen last Sunday evening on the road in front of the old lumber yard site. Aside from minor cuts received by Mrs. Allen and one of the Gulseth party, no one was injured. Broken windshields, a bent axle, a mashed fender and a punctured tire was the sum of damage to the cars.

Miss Evelyn Gulseth returned last week from Austin, Minn., where she had spent ten days, having accompanied Mrs. Carl Johnson and daughters on their return trip to that city. While in Austin, Miss Gulseth went on a conducted tour thru the Hormel plant and other points of interest, and while enroute home she spent a day with relatives in Minneapolis.

Railroad Jim
THE COLUMN CONDUCTOR
Says . . .

Passengers in the smoking compartment on my train were arguing about why railroad business is picking up.

•

A factory owner said it was because of this new Free pick-up-and-delivery of less than carload freight. This is door-to-door service with no extra charge added to the freight bill.

•

A traveling salesman said it was because so many passenger and freight trains now run on faster schedules.

•

There was a school principal in the group and he said it was because train travel is so much cheaper for passengers. He said passenger fares are at the lowest point in history, with substantial reductions if you buy a round-trip ticket—and no more surcharge for riding in sleeping cars.

•

One man, a farmer, said he liked something he could depend on, that's why he was traveling by train.

•

Another man, a newspaper reporter, said people were in favor of railroad travel because it is by far the safest. He quoted a lot of statistics from a book called, "Live and Let Live."

•

A banker we all know by name said railroad tax payments mean a lot in this state.

•

We are proud of railroad achievements, appreciate the public's good will and increased patronage, and pledge continued progress.

MALAND-GIBEAU WEDDING MONDAY

Monday morning at Red Lake Falls, in the presence of relatives and close friends, occurred the marriage of Miss Adelia Maland of Howell, Mich., daughter of Mr. O. O. Maland of Duluth, to Mr. George J. Gibeau, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gibeau of Red Lake Falls.

Mr. Tracy Jeffers of St. Paul acted as best man, and the bride's attendant was her sister, Mrs. Myles Jackson of this village. The bride was beautifully gowned in white crepe and bridal satin trimmed with white fur and a shoulder corsage of Gardenias and lilies of the valley. For travelling, the bride wore a coral imported wool suit with brown accessories. Mrs. Jackson wore a crepe dress of dark Dubonnet with matching accessories.

The groom is a graduate of the College of Civil Engineering, University of Minnesota, and at present is Division Supervisor of the State Highway department. The bride has studied at Bemidji and Duluth State Teachers Colleges, and is a graduate of the Kalamazoo school of Occupational Therapy and has for the past three years been Director of Occupational Therapy in the Michigan State Sanatorium at Howell. Both bride and groom are well known here, and have a host of friends who will join in wishing them happiness.

They will be at home at Sauk Center, Minn., after October 10.

The Red River District of the Augustana Lutheran Church conducted a series of meetings in the Black River, Clara and St. Hilaire churches Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. Speakers at the meetings were Dr. S. W. Swenson, Rev. Robert Erickson, Rev. Aner Bloom, Ev. John Erickson and Students M. Swenson and P. Anderson.

Oscar Youngdahl, Republican candidate for Attorney General of Minnesota, spoke to a good sized crowd at the municipal auditorium at Thief River Falls Tuesday night. A number of people from St. Hilaire and vicinity went up to hear him. Mr. Youngdahl is considered one of the best public speakers in this state.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Satterberg, accompanied by their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Satterberg, motored Saturday to Minneapolis where they visited at the Gus Fellman and Sig Engh homes, and with other friends. They returned home Monday evening.

CARAVAN HERE TUESDAY

The Democratic Caravan, a motorized outfit travelling thru the state in the interest of Democratic candidates, stopped in the village for a short time Tuesday morning. Tom Gallagher, candidate for attorney general; Ray M. Lang, candidate for state treasurer, and Martin O. Brandon, candidate for congress, were the speakers accompanying the Cavaran.

ANOTHER HUGE BEET

"There is no beet that can't be beat" said Ed Aubol this week when he brought in a mangle beet for the Spectator display window. When pulled, this beet together with top, weighed fully sixteen pounds. At the same time, Mr. Aubol brot in a parsnip that measures nineteen inches in length. If anyone tops these two specimens, Ed says he will just have to look a bit closer among the giants in his patch for a new mark to shoot at.

KILLING FROST MONDAY

The first killing frost to occur here this fall was Monday night and Tuesday morning. Some late flax as well as late garden truck suffered the most damage. Altho a good share of the potato crop is still in the ground, the frost was not severe enough to do any damage to the spuds.

AUCTION SALE FRIDAY

An auction sale of horses, cattle, machinery and other chattels will be held Friday this week at the Leonard Holmes farm five miles southwest of here. Following the sale, Mr. and Mrs. Holmes will move in to occupy their residence property in the village.

REV. COOKE RETURNED

At the Northern Minnesota Conference of the M. E. Church held at Minneapolis recently, Rev. Cooke was renamed to serve the Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire churches for the coming year.

AUCTION SALE SATURDAY

A carload of horses, and some Shetland ponies, will be offered for sale at auction here Saturday this week. The sale will be held at the livery barn premises.

This county is making application to be included with other counties designated as drought area by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Red Lake county has been so designated. If granted, this county will be given a quota of jobs to be assigned to persons in need of relief because of crop damage resulting from dry weather conditions.

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Enrollment at the local school has reached the highest point in history of the school.

R. J. McKercher returned yesterday after a business trip to the southern part of the state.

Co. Commissioner Paul Roy presided at a special meeting of the county board held Monday at Thief River Falls.

Red Cross:—Next meeting of the local Red Cross will be at the home of Mrs. M. H. Jackson on Tuesday, October 6th.

Folden Bros. have leased the garage building from Erickson Bros. and will use it for storage of cars the coming winter.

The Dorcas Society will be entertained at the Norwegian Lutheran church Saturday at 2:30 by Elaine Pearson, Wanda Jacobson and May Lundberg.

Regular meeting of the B. M. Club was held Monday night at the club rooms. Among other matters taken up was that of getting a supply of community calendars for the coming year.

A 4-H Club party will be given at the school building at 8:00 Friday night of this week. A program will be given, and lunch will be served. All club members should plan to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Gibeau visited briefly Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Gibeau's sister, Mrs. M. H. Jackson, while returning from a trip to Winnipeg and while enroute to points in central Minnesota.

Marvin Olness commenced work this week at tracting of lands now being done at the county agent's office in connection with the soils conservation plan. He expects to be employed about three weeks.

Miss Alice Skottem who teaches at Climax, spent last week-end at her home here.

Come to the M. E. Aid on Friday afternoon for chicken and hot biscuits. Everybody welcome.

The M. E. Ladies' Aid will be entertained Friday afternoon this week at the church. Everybody welcome.

Some repairs are being made on the heating plant in the village building which is occupied by the postoffice.

Starting with this month, the creamery will take cream Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each week instead of daily.

Knute Jorgenson has made a deal for the Clint Martz eighty acre farm adjoining the Lundberg place west of the village.

Ole Skaar of Norden township, who is candidate for county commissioner from the Third district, was in the village yesterday attending to business affairs.

A crew of local men is being employed at cutting of weeds, brush and grass along the state and county aid roads so snow will not lodge on those roads the coming winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Carlson and family, who returned here this fall after some years of residence in Kansas, have bought a farm north of Plummer and are now settled in their new home.

Arthur Hanson, manager of the local Barzen elevator, has been confined to bed most of this week by a severe attack of pleurisy. He is considerably improved at this time, and hopes to be back at the elevator in a few days.

BORGENS COMING AGAIN

The Borgen Players show troupe, who make their home in St. Hilaire when not filling outside engagements, will present a new play entitled "Ole the Cave Man" at the local hall next Tuesday evening, Oct. 6th. Plays by the Borgen Players have always given satisfaction, and the show next Tuesday will be no exception. A dance for patrons will be given after the show.

SHIPPING CAR OF HONEY

Brink & Berglund, local apiarists, are busy making up crates in preparation for shipping a carload of honey the latter part of the week. The standard package for shipping contains two sixty pound cans. It is estimated this shipment will contain about thirty tons. Another shipment will be made later when balance of extracting is finished.

HEAVY SNOW IN WEST

Denver, Colorado and vicinity was blanketed by an eighteen inch snowfall the first of this week. Snow also fell in western Nebraska and other states east of the mountains. Heavy property damage is reported as a result of the heavy snow.

Andersen Bros., the road building contractors, have their outfit at work on the ditch grade leading west along the Mogen place in Sanders. As soon as this job is finished, they will begin work at grading of about three miles on the state road leading west from the Biskey corner north of town. This particular road, which usually blockades with snow every winter, will be raised so snow will not lodge on it.

BIG ATTENDANCE AT DISTRICT PTA HERE

Many towns in Northwestern Minnesota were represented at the Sixteenth District conference of the Minnesota Congress of Parents and Teachers held here last Friday. Following the morning session which was held at the high school, lunch was served at the Norwegian Lutheran church parlors. During the afternoon prominent speakers addressed the gathering bringing messages of inspiration and instruction. At four o'clock tea was served by members of the St. Hilaire P. T. A., which was followed by a banquet dinner at the Norwegian Lutheran church. A large number of people from the village and surrounding country attended the banquet and heard the brief talks given by out-of-town delegates to the conference. During the evening a very fine talk by Supt. Morris Bye of the Thief River Falls schools, and an excellent musical program brot the conference to a close. Many complimentary remarks were heard from the out of town visitors on the able manner in which the conference was conducted, and credit is due the local P. T. A. members and others who assisted in making the arrangements.

ERECTING NEW BUILDINGS

Christ Kruse has a crew at work erecting a set of new buildings on his land in Polk Center. The land is located along the state road west of the Kruse home place. Construction is being rushed so the buildings will be ready for use before winter sets in.

Campaign Issues

Washington.—It has been exceedingly interesting to watch the progress of the Democratic and Republican campaign committees in their efforts to shape and join the issues upon which the electorate will choose the next occupant of the White House. There has been a tremendous amount of hauling and filling, each side coming forth with trial balloons in an effort to find out what it is that will attract the most interest among the voters and to determine what particular matters afford the best vehicle on which they can ride into office.

From the beginning of this year, President Roosevelt has been trying to shape his issue on the basis of a single question—whether the American people in dollars and cents are better off then they were when he took office. I think admittedly that if Mr. Roosevelt could force that question into the center of the stage and make it the real issue, he would have very little campaigning to do. But the trouble is Mr. Roosevelt has been unable to accomplish his purpose and no little credit for his threat to force a joinder of issues on this point is due to the Republican leadership. The Republican managers simply will not be led into that trap. Thus, we must look elsewhere to see what the real issues are, or are likely to be, in this campaign decision.

It has nearly always been true that the issues prominent early in the campaign have proved not to be the issues at all near the end of a political battle. This year promises to be no exception. Political leaders attempt to figure out the proposition upon which their opponents are most vulnerable and obviously this figuring takes place in advance. It has to happen that way in order that methods of attack can be arranged in advance.

The New Dealers thought they could smoke out the Republicans by shouting far and wide that the people as a whole are better off than they were when Mr. Roosevelt took office. But, again, it was a case where political strategy did not work. Even though many hundred thousands of people are better off, the fact remains that there are some twenty million persons receiving relief in one form or another and the further fact remains that there are somewhere between nine million and ten million workers without jobs. Consequently, Mr. Roosevelt's question whether people were better off in dollars and cents did not quite click.

In the meantime, the Republicans have found what they believe to be a very vulnerable spot in the New Deal armor and they are shooting at it with machine-gun rapidity. This question, this spot, centers around taxation. The Republicans apparently thought at the start of the fight that Democratic waste of federal money and the vast debt that was piled up would force a revulsion of feeling against New Deal policies. So they started out on that campaign horse. But they found that the question of taxation over-shadowed the other, even though the taxation about which the Republicans are talking has been an offspring of the alleged waste of the party in power.

Err in Strategy

I doubt that the taxation issue would have been as important as it is proving to be had not the New Dealers made a mistake in political strategy. This mistake, it may be said in passing, illustrates how very minor things influence the ultimate result in politics to a greater extent perhaps than in any other activity of American national life. The mistake which I refer to was made by Attorney General Cummings.

The story of the circumstance chronologically is something like this: The Republicans from their headquarters in Chicago began calling attention to increased tax burdens in connection with their exposure of the increase of more than thirteen billion dollars in the country's debt. They pointed out how, if the Roosevelt administration had not wasted money, preparations would not have to be made for raising the taxes and how, if this waste had not occurred, tax increases which we already have had would not have taken place.

As a part of the demonstration of increased taxation the Republicans issued campaign literature itemizing the amount of taxes each and every one of us pays on the common every-day necessities of life. They showed how each loaf of bread, each pair of shoes, each pork-chop, among other things, bears so much tax which all of us pay in buying those necessities of life.

Probably the distribution of this campaign literature by the Republicans would not have stirred up so much fuss in and of itself had it not been for the action of Attorney General Cummings. The Attorney General made some public threats that he would seek to indict those who were responsible for distribution of this information, claiming that a federal law had been violated. Being attorney general of the United States, any statement from him got wide distribution.

But the Republicans, recognizing the potentialities of this situation, issued a challenge to Mr. Cummings to proceed with his threat of indictments. Their publicity statement on the point was just as virulent as that of any red-blooded American boy who says to his playmate, "I dare you to!"

Well, the rejoinder of the Republicans rather put Mr. Cummings on the spot.

I presume probably the threat and the resulting challenge still would have amounted to nothing except that the method employed by the Republicans capitalized on that threat by accusing the attorney general of seeking to prevent free speech and to prohibit discussion of campaign issues. If there is one thing that the American people resent, it is any attempt by a governmental agency of whatever character it may be that seeks to stifle discussion. They look upon it as a sign of dictatorship. Somewhere in their veins still courses the virus that overthrew King George in the birth of this nation.

That is why the Cummings threat is so important.

Too Many Agencies

President Roosevelt announced the other day that he is preparing to start reorganization of the federal administrative agencies. He said he had arrived at the conclusion that such a course was necessary because there has been overlapping in function and jurisdiction among the many agencies created by the New Deal. It is the second time that the President has proposed reorganization of the governmental units and his new announcement promises to attract as much attention as did his original announcement which was made when he was a candidate during the 1932 presidential campaign.

For a long time, it has been plainly evident to observers in Washington that New Deal agencies were literally falling over one another and that many of them were constantly in conflict with others because the laws or executive orders, chiefly the executive orders, by which these agencies were created, did not clarify their jurisdiction or their function.

A good deal of this trouble obviously had its origin in the haste that characterized the early efforts of the Roosevelt administration to establish machinery by which problems of the depression could be solved or alleviated. It always happens that when governmental agencies are created in such haste, ridiculous situations result. It was the case during the World war and it has been the case during the New Deal's efforts to solve depression problems under the emergency powers granted by congress. The truth seems to be that there is more overlapping, more conflict, now than there was during the World war.

Much Confusion

I have known of numerous instances where one agency, under authority given it by the President, has promulgated rules and regulations having the force of law that did not conform to rules and regulations dealing with the same matters but coming from another unit of government. In addition, I have seen different interpretations placed on the same statute or the same regulation by two different agencies. In consequence, the citizen whose business practices or personal affairs were touched by government edict found himself prohibited from doing a particular thing on the one hand and ordered to do it on the other.

Thus, it would seem that it is high time for something to be done about re-organization. It would seem equally to be high time for elimination of some of the extra red tape of government which has been wound about the private lives of American citizens by the New Deal. Goodness knows, there was plenty of red tape before the New Deal; it certainly is worse now than it was before.

The thing that seemed to interest most of the writing fraternity in Washington, however, was not so much the alleviation of the conditions which I have mentioned, but the political aspects of the presidential announcement that new reorganization plans were under consideration. Some of these writers who are critical of the New Deal went back to the 1932 campaign records and dragged out to public view Mr. Roosevelt's promises respecting governmental complexities.

Moorhead—Louis Benson, head coach at Concordia college here, refuses to acknowledge his team will be the dark horse in the Minnesota college conference this fall. The Cobbers have perhaps the toughest schedule of any school in the conference this fall, meeting Gustavos Adolphus, St. Thomas and St. John.

St. Paul—Every bump and soft shoulder in Minnesota's 115,000 miles of rural highways will be charted this fall by 40 engineers who will drive over every mile of roadway to gather information for a state highway planning survey conducted by the Minnesota highway department and the U. S. Bureau of public roads.

Monticello—The state supreme court upheld a Wright county district court decision holding the State Bank of Monticello broke a contract entered into with stockholders of the Farmers State Bank of Monticello, which it purchased and for that reason, the latter are not liable for a deficiency in assets involved in the transfer.

Northfield—At the opening convocation of the year at Carleton College, Dr. William Trufant Foster, economist, author, and lecturer, gave the address, "Alternatives to Freedom". Following the opening address to Carleton students Dr. Foster will remain at the college for a month in the capacity of visiting lecturer.

New Hope—New Hope township, which lies between Crystal village and Plymouth township, received its second divorce in two months. Hennepin county commissioners on petition of a majority of residents of the area signed a decree separating it from Plymouth township and setting it up as a township in itself. On August 3 by petition of its residents the area received a divorce from Crystal village and simultaneously attached itself to Plymouth township. Up until that time it had been the western half of Crystal village.

Winona—Winners in the one-act play contest sponsored by the Minnesota Congress of Parents and Teachers were announced by Mrs. M. L. Spencer, Winona, state chairman of the drama and pageantry section of the congress. The best child's plays entered, "Christmas at the Toyshop" and "Wind Over West Salem", will be presented by the Winona Community Players at the state convention of the Minnesota Congress of Parents and Teachers here October 22. Sixty-seven entries were received from all parts of the state.

Minneapolis—A new building for the Center for Continuation Study, at reorganized Institute of Technology and a proposed educational student union building were major points of interest at the University of Minnesota as the state's largest educational unit prepared to open for its sixty-eighth year. Beginning freshmen took over the campus with other students registering and taking advance examinations. New structures include an addition to the Women's gymnasium, the promenade, and training quarters that complete the Athletic building, a roof house on a wing of University hospital that will house a psychiatric unit and the hydraulic engineering laboratory on Hennepin island.

Minneapolis—The Minnesota football team, heading for Seattle, hardly expected to take on any tougher foe than Washington. But they did at Missoula Montana. Fire razed the hotel in which the boys were quartered during the night. As usual the boys were successful in escaping with their record unscathed. The nearest thing to a casualty was the collapse of Assistant Coach Bert Baston who was overcome by fumes, Bert rallied quickly following first aid. $2,000 loss in clothes and valuables was suffered by the team.

Sophistication Is Going Out—

Youth Doffing the Soiled Mantle of Those Embittered by Disappointment

A COLLEGE DEAN said recently that being sophisticated is going out of fashion.

Can it be true that the craze for sophistication—to appear blase, to seem worldly wise, to know it all, to be hard-boiled and contemptuous of the simple things—can it be true that modern youth is through with it?

And why? Is the advent of old fashioned hats and ruffles so influencing our point of view that modern youth now wants to throw sophistication into the discard?

I think I know the reason, says a woman writer of international reputation. Modern Youth must have found out the real meaning of the word. Poring over their dictionaries they must have accidently bumped into the derivation of "sophisticated."

For "sophisticated" means adulterated. Look it up and see if it doesn't!

And come to think of it, it couldn't have a better name. If the wisest of us had tried to put a fitting label on that loss of youth's natural and beautiful freshness — if a genius had tried to express that warping of standards, that tainting of taste, that souring of outlook, that premature aging of all the sensibilities he could have manufactured no better word than "sophisticated."

For sophistication is an adulteration of viewpoint, of judgment, of taste by the taint of frustration, the bitterness of disillusionment, the poison of disappointment, the dregs of the cup of poor experience. True, life is not all beauty or joy or perfection. Neither is it all bitter or sour or wrong.

One of the most powerful weapons in the hands of youth is its freshness, its faith to write on its own slate only beauty and perfection. And when youth prematurely dons the soiled and shabby mantle of those who have known disappointment and failure, it does right to call this by the name 'sophistication" — a synonym of adulteration.

England's Ruler

The Prince of Wales became King Edward VIII immediately after the death of his father, George V. On January 22 he was publicly proclaimed king with formal ceremonies when, standing in the Armory room at St. James' palace, he heard himself proclaimed: "Our only lawful and rightful Liege Lord, Edward VIII, by grace of God, King of Great Britain, Ireland and British dominions beyond the seas, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India."

The coronation, which is the ceremony of investing with the crown as an emblem of royal dignity, is scheduled for May 12, 1937, after the period of mourning. It is primarily a religious ceremony and does not add new titles.

Gas, Gas All the Time, Can't Eat or Sleep

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart seemed to hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never felt better." —Mrs. Jas. Filler.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli."

Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and constipation. Leading Druggists.

League of Nations Assembly Seats Ethiopians—American Legion Elects Colmery Commander—Japanese Marines Occupy Part of Shanghai.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

Haile Selassie

HAILE SELASSIE couldn't whip the Italians in the Ethiopian war, but the fugitive emperor won the battle of Geneva and put Benito Mussolini's nose out of joint. After an exciting debate, the League of Nations assembly voted, 39 to 4, to seat the Ethiopian delegation, now headed by the emperor's American adviser. The negative votes were cast by Hungary, Austria and Albania, all under the thumb of Italy, and Ecuador. Ethiopia, Portugal and four other countries refrained from voting. Rather surprisingly Great Britain and France espoused the cause of Ethiopia, though it had been thought they considered the co-operation of Italy in the league of more importance than justice to the African realm. The heated debate was closed when Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign minister, said:

"Enough of this nonsense! There never has been any sufficient ground to unseat the Ethiopian delegation."

The credentials committee in recommending the action taken said it applied to the present session only. Its report asserted that certain documents which had been received by the members alleged that Ethiopian governmental authority has been set up in sections of Ethiopia not occupied by the Italians.

Seating of the Ethiopians made it certain that no Italian delegation would attend this session, and it was believed by many that Mussolini might withdraw formally from the league. It was a victory not only for Ethiopia but also for the smaller European powers, which felt that league submission to Italy would be disastrous to their own security.

Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the British admiralty, added to Italian resentment against Great Britain by declaring in London that the British intended to maintain their supremacy in the Mediterranean and would modernize and consolidate their naval, military and air defenses between Gibraltar and the Suez canal "in the light of recent experience." Malta, he said, would remain the first and principal base of the British fleet in the Mediterranean and would be strengthened to meet conditions. Work on Cyprus as a military, naval and air base is being hurried to make that island a complement to Malta. Sir Samuel asserted that the development of Italian air power has not endangered the British position in the Mediterranean.

THREE members of the maritime commission authorized in the closing days of the last congress were appointed by President Roosevelt. They are: Rear Admiral Henry A. Wiley, U.S.N. retired; Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, coast guard; George Landick, Jr., chief of the planning section of the procurement division of the Treasury department.

The commission will administer the ship subsidy measure act as a regulatory body in conduct of merchant marine affairs, and operate generally in the nature of the interstate commerce commission.

Harry W. Colmery

VETERANS of two great conflicts, the World war and the Civil war, held their annual conventions, the American Legion meeting in Cleveland and the Grand Army of the Republic in Washington. The legion elected Harry W. Colmery, a lawyer of Topeka, Kan., as its national commander and awarded next year's convention to New York city. Mayor La Guardia personally led the Gotham delegation in the big parade. This delegation included an impressive display of police and fire department bands, motorcycle squads and mounted officers.

In its business sessions the legion adopted a resolution asking the United States government to withdraw its recognition of soviet Russia. Other resolutions approved called for a 90 per cent reduction in immigration quotas and deportation of all aliens who are anarchists, communists, or affiliated with the Third Internationale; the removal from public relief rolls of aliens who have not applied for citizenship; universal application of the fingerprinting system in this country, and an investigation of methods used in disseminating "subversive doctrines."

The legion band championship was won by the Musicians' post, No. 394, of St. Louis, Mo.; second place went to Franklin post band of Columbus, O., and third to Musicians' post of Los Angeles. The Commonwealth Edison post drum and bugle corps of Chicago won the drum corps tournament.

Only about nine hundred survivors of the Union army were able to attend the G. A. R. encampment, and many believe it will be the last to be held. The aged warriors, headed by Oley Nelson of Iowa, the national commander, began their proceedings with a service in Washington cathedral. The route of their parade was six blocks on Pennsylvania avenue, the scene of the grand review of the Union armies before President Andrew Johnson seventy-one years ago.

C. H. Williams Ruhe of Pittsburgh, who ran away from home 72 years ago to join the Union army when he was only a lad of fifteen, today was unanimously elected to be commander-in-chief, and Madison, Wis., was named as the encampment city for 1937.

W. R. Hearst

ASSERTIONS made by William Randolph Hearst and other opponents of the New Deal that the President "passively accepts" the support of the Communists have got under Mr. Roosevelt's skin. A statement issued through Stephen T. Early, his secretary, said:

"My attention has been called to a certain notorious newspaper owner to make it appear that the President passively accepts the support of alien organizations hostile to the American form of government.

"Such articles are conceived in malice and born of political spite. They are deliberately framed to give a false impression, in other words to 'frame' the American people.

"The President does not want and does not welcome the vote or support of any individual or group taking orders from alien sources.

"This simple fact is, of course, obvious.

"The American people will not permit their attention to be diverted from real issues to fake issues which no patriotic, honorable, decent citizen would purposely inject into American affairs."

Mr. Hearst, who was in Amsterdam, promptly replied by cable, saying in part:

"The President has issued a statement through a secretary. He has not had the frankness to say to whom he refers in the statement . . . I think I am justified in assuming that I am the object of the statement, and that I may courteously endeavor to correct Mr. Roosevelt's misstatements and to set him right . . .

"Let me say that I have not stated at any time whether the President willingly or unwillingly received the support of the Karl Marx Socialists, the Frankfurter radicals, communists and anarchists, the Tugwell bolsheviks, and the Richberg revolutionists, which constitute the bulk of his following.

"I have simply said and shown that he does receive the support of these enemies of the American system of government, and that he has done his best to deserve the support of all such disturbing and destructive elements."

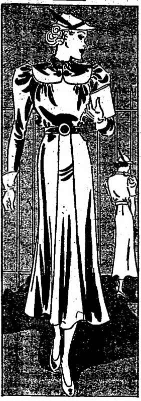
FOUR Chinese gunmen in Shanghai killed one Japanese marine and wounded two others, and within a few minutes a Japanese landing party more than 2,000 strong had occupied much of the Hongkew section of the international settlement. The Japanese naval commander declared martial law in that area and troops stopped buses and street cars in the search for the slayers. Tanks, armored cars, light artillery and machine gun squads poured through the streets and on into Chapei, the Chinese district that was the scene of furious fighting between the Japanese and the Chinese Nineteenth route army in 1932.

Stirling Fessenden, American chairman of the international settlement, was warned by Japanese officials to protect their nationals, and the White Russian volunteer regiment and special police in the French quarter were hurriedly mobilized.

Because of killings in Hankow and Pakhoi, Japanese marines already had been landed in those cities. Transports bearing reinforcements arrived from Japan.

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE'S senate committee on civil liberties, investigating the activities of strike breakers, was told that a preacher was hired as a spy, girls did undercover work, picketers were scalded by live steam and strikers were electrocuted by secretly strung wires on company property. Witnesses testified, also, that men who direct crews of ex-convicts, panhandlers and sluggers take a small fortune annually from industry to combat labor unrest.

Black Satin Frock for Autumn Wear



Introducing Autumn's smartest frock. Snug at the waistline and flared below, a youthful interpretation with snap and dash.

The blouse has a clever feminine touch in its soft gathers that peep cunningly from beneath the yoke, which is topped by a narrow standing collar that ties in a dainty knot. To please your whim, omit the necktie and substitute a neckerchief, or ascot tie; then again forget about the buttons, open the yoke, press down the sides forming a V and trim it with a bright bouttonaire. You may have your way about the sleeves, too, for the pattern offers both, long and short. A graduated gore reduces the sweep at the hipline and gives the much desired flare to the hem.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1949-B is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 14 (32) requires four and three-eighths yards of 39-inch material, four and one-fourth yards with short sleeves. Price of Pattern, 15 cents.

ENROLLMENT AT N. W. SCHOOL ON WAY TO NEW HIGH

The fall term of the Northwest School opened Monday, September 28 with one of the largest enrollments in the history of the school. All dormitories have been taxed beyond normal capacity and class and laboratory space is at a premium.

Activities opened with a meeting of the faculty on Saturday. Two new staff members were announced by Superintendent A. A. Dowell, Donald C. Streeter of Groton, S. D., succeeds C. H. Ritzman who resigned to accept a position on the staff of Oklahoma University. Mr. Howard Myster was appointed to fill a new position in the business training department. Mr. Myster is a graduate of the Department of Commerce at the University of North Dakota and has had one year's teaching experience in addition to five years service as a public accountant. Advanced office and secretarial training will be offered in the business department for the first time this year.

Other fall term activities will include the annual Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. reception on Saturday of this week followed by a concert recital by members of the Music and English faculty on Sunday. Home Coming will be celebrated October 24 when the local football team clashes with their ancient rivals, the Morris Aggies.

One of the highlights of the fall term will be the annual Parent's Day celebration on October 31, when parents from all parts of northwestern Minnesota will visit the school and experiment station.

The large stock barn being erected on the Erickson Bros. farm in Black River will be completed and ready for use in a few days. The new barn will be a fine improvement on the farm as a much-needed convenience for the owners.

When Art Swanson and Ferdie Swenson drove up to the creamery one day last week and pushed an eight gallon can thru the receiving door without giving their usual line of chatter, the creamery operator did not suspect a thing until he yanked the cover off and found himself looking at the head of a sixteen pound Great Northern pike which the boys had caught a couple days before at Lake Winnibigoshish. They later pulled the same trick on Ben Rosendahl at the cream station.

EXTENSION WORK FOR COMING YEAR DISCUSSED HERE

Under the guidance of C. L. McNelly, state county agent leader of Anoka and H. A. Pflughoeft, district club agent of Northwest Agricultural school of Crookston, a planning meeting was held in the Thief River Falls Auditorium Wednesday.

County agent R. M. Douglass states that the committees which functioned as planning groups were more optimistic about agricultural prospects than have been similar groups in previous years.

The recommendations made by these committees which are yet to be acted on by the County Farm Bureau, indicated increased interest in 4-H club work, livestock enterprises, co-operative marketing, and poultry production.

At the noon lunch the Farm Bureau organization acted as hosts. Further planning will be carried out next Wednesday, Oct. 7 by the Woman's Home Economics Projects groups.

The committees participating in planning day were:

Poultry: Mrs. R. F. Hayes, Mrs. Peter Lovely, Frank Johnson, John Swanson and Anton Jensen. 4-H Club: Mrs. Owen Weckwerth, Mrs. Lloyd Johnson and Henry Oen. Livestock: E. H. Pomerenke, Joe Patton, R. J. McKercher, Frank Hardisty, Ed Hanson, Waldie Christenson, Wm. McCrum. Co-Operative marketing: H. I. Finstad, Emil Larson, V. G. Brink, Carl Beiswenger and J. M. Theige, Allotment committee. Emil Larson, Carl Beiswenger, V. G. Brink, Ole Nesland, Alfred Longren and Hans Anton.

PLAN ORTHOPEDIC CLINIC SATURDAY

Physically handicapped children of Pennington and surrounding counties will have an opportunity to receive medical examinations and vocational advice at an orthopedic clinic to be held Saturday, October 3, in Thief River Falls. The clinic will be in the high school from 8:30 A. M. to 4 P. M. Mrs. Clara Paulson is in charge of local arrangements.

The clinic will be open to the physically handicapped under 21 years of age from Pennington, Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Red Lake and Lake of the Woods counties. This is one of a series of such clinics being held thruout the state this fall as part of the Social Security program conducted by the Division of Services for Crippled Children, State Board of Control, with the Minnesota Public Health Association co-operating. Dr. H. E. Hilleboe is director of the Division.

In addition to medical examinations by physicians, who specialize in the diagnosis and treatment of deformities, those attending the clinic will also be given vocational advice provided through the Division of Re-Education, Minnesota Department of Education.

Services will include consultation with the family physician, advice on hospitalization when it is needed, and arrangements for transportation to school of children unable to walk.

Follow-up of cases needing attention will be carried on after the clinic by the nursing staff of the Division of Service for Crippled Children.

Miss Elizabeth Goodrich, field nurse for the Division, has charge of preliminary and follow-up work for the clinic. Miss Mabel Johnson, Christmas Seal nurse of the Minnesota Public Health Association, is also assisting in arranging for the clinic.

The clinic here will be conducted by Dr. E. A. Meyerding of Rochester, and will be in progress Saturday from 8:30 in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, with Mrs. Clara Paulson, school nurse, in charge of local arrangements. Members of the Woman's club also are assisting, and the City Dairy will donate milk for lunch for the children attending the clinic.

TRANSIENT STEALS MONEY FROM CHURCH, GETS TERM

New Ulm—Not the extent but the nature of his crime was what sent Ralph Morgan, a transient, to a state penal institution for an indeterminate sentence. Morgan was arrested by Comfred police on the charge of breaking into and stealing pennies from two oil stations in that village and brought to New Ulm for trial. Although he admitted the theft of nickles and dimes from a collection box in the Comfrey Catholic church, he persistently refused to admit breaking into the stations.

Measure 489 Farms in County for Compliance

Trucks Must Carry 3 Flares, Patrol Warns

Officers of the state highway patrol have ordered a general tightening up of enforcement of flare laws affecting motor trucks, according to a highway department bulletin. Trunks and buses using trunk highways are required to carry as standard equipment three flares and three red flags, according to John P. Arnoldy, chief of the highway patrol. The only exception to this rule is that trucks carrying gasoline or other inflammable material need have only two flares. Either electric or oil burning flares of approved type may be used. The flares must be set out if a truck is left standing on a trunk highway after dark, while the flags are for daytime warnings.

FAIRMONT MAN IN ALASKA FOR 38 YEARS, LIKES IT

Fairmont.— Thirty-eight years ago Fred Wolter of Fairmont joined a party of 26 Martin county men in the rush to the Klondike for gold. Of the sixteen who got into the gold country, he was the only one who remained. Mr. Wolther, now living at Bethel on the Alaskan coast, has returned with his family to spend the winter. He says that Alaska is the only country to live in. "We never heard of hard times, never had a panic. All we need from the outside is a little coffee and sugar. All around us we have fish, moose, caribou, ducks, and all kinds of birds. That's all we need. It seldom gets colder than here, the there isn't much snow at Bethel. Sometimes there is two feet of snow on the ground, but winter rains appear periodically. In summer it hardly grows dark at all, while in winter the shortest days are about six hours."

HOT WEATHER POPS CORN

Lakefield—Popcorn growers at Lakefield are confronted with a problem when weather gets so hot that corn pops on the ear. John Plotz, banker, went to his corn patch to husk the ripened popcorn, but to his dismay found the hot weather had popped many of the kernels.

WYLIE MAN DIES IN TRAIN-AUTO CRASH

William Ketzrow, well known farmer residing south of Wylie, was killed and his wife seriously injured last Saturday night when their car was struck by the Great Northern passenger train on the crossing in street of Red Lake Falls. The accident occured at 9:30 as Mr. and Mrs. Ketzrow were returning home after attending a show. The Diesel engine car caught the auto and crushed it between the car and a switch, and dragged the wreckage about two hundred feet before the train could be brot to a stop. Mr. Ketzrow died before aid could be summoned, and Mrs. Ketzrow was taken to a Thief River Falls hospital suffering from serious injuries.

Witnesses of the tragic affair believe Mr. Ketzrow did not hear the approaching train because of deafness, until too late, and his car rolled into path of the train.

Deceased is survived by a family of six children, three sons and three daughters, all grown. He was a member of the Evangelical Lutheran church near Wylie, and moved to that district from New Ulm about 15 years ago.

CHICKEN DINNER

A chicken dinner will be served at the Norwegian Lutheran church Friday, October 16. The menu will be fried chicken, meat loaf, escalloped potatoes, baked beans, cranberry salad, bread and butter, pickles, apple pie and coffee. The charge is 35 cents for adults and 20 cents for school children. Everybody welcome.

Mesdames L. F. Olson, E. D. Jensen and O. Gunstad attended a meeting of the executive board of the Pennington County Red Cross at Thief River Falls last Monday. Plans were outlined for a Red Cross drive to take place Nov. 11-26.

RETURN TO COLORADO

After spending about three weeks at the home of his brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Satterberg left Tuesday enroute to their home at Denver, Colo. They were accompanied as far as Fargo by Mrs. Satterberg's sister, Mrs. Gust Fellman, who returned from there to her home at Minneapolis after having spent a week here.

YULE SEAL HEALTH SURVEY IS MADE

A total of 136 children were inspected in the local school last week during the Christmas Seal School Health Survey conducted here by Miss Mabel Johnson, certified public health nurse. Permanent health record cards were filled out for each pupil by Miss Johnson and they will be kept on file at the school. Dental conditions were also noted in the survey, and only one out of four were found with attention needed. It was also found that practically all pupils had immunized against diphtheria and vaccinated against smallpox. Smallpox vaccination should be given the first year, and repeated at the ages of seven and fourteen, Miss Johnson said. High praise for the excellent co-operation of the school staff was given by Miss Johnson.

WPA CREW ON RIVER

A crew of WPA workers have been employed this week at clearing in the river channel. Rocks, weeds and other obstructions are being taken out and a channel made to facilitate flow of water which will be greater later in the season when gates in the dam at Red Lakes are opened.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Eid and son, Allen, motored up Sunday from Gary and spent the day at the home of Mrs. Eid's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lars A. Loberg.

Lee E. Beebe submitted to an operation yesterday morning at a Crookston hospital for relief of an ailment of long standing. He withstood the operation well and is getting along nicely.

Fredrick Erdmann, Jr., accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Fred Miller of Red Lake Falls last Friday when they went for a three day fishing trip to Gull lake. Miss Helena Erdmann joined them at Brainerd.

Edgar Johnson, principal of schools at Lancaster, is enjoying a vacation here this week because of the Lancaster school being closed to permit pupils to engage in potato picking.

FORMER GOVERNOR VAN SANT IS DEAD

Former Governor Samuel Van Sant, age 92, died suddenly Saturday at Attica, Ind., while enroute to his winter home in Florida. A colorful figure in Minnesota history, the state's as well as some of the nation's highest honors have been his during his lifetime. He was Past Commander of the G. A. R., and was highly honored by other organizations. During early years, Mr. Van Sant was engaged in building boats, and in towing of logs on the Mississippi when the lumbering industry was the main activity in the state. Simple funeral services were held Tuesday at Minneapolis, and that evening the body was taken to his old home, the little town of LeClaire, Iowa, on the banks of the Mississippi where members of his family are buried.

Ardell Olson, who is employed in the Journal office at Fertile, came up Saturday evening and spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ordean Olson.

Rev. and Mrs. M. L. Dahle, accompanied by Mrs. S. Olness and Mildred Hanson, motored yesterday to Karlstad to attend a Woman's Federation meeting, the two latter going as delegates.

The Borgen Players showed to a packed house here Tuesday night. Because of insistent request, the Players put on another show last night which went over as well as the first one. The troupe leaves soon for their annual winter tour and will not be back until spring.

TECHNICAL EDITOR HERE

Miss Pearl Young, technical editor for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics at Langley Field, Va., came this week for a visit at the home of her sister, Mrs. Chas. Huff, and at the home of her brother, Ray Young at Red Lake Falls. She is enroute to visit relatives and friends at different points in North Dakota and other states west to the coast. Miss Young, who is recognized as one of the country's leading women experts on technical aeronautics, having made a special study of that subject for years, returned to this country in June on the German dirigible, Hindenberg, after spending a month visiting leading aeronautical plants in Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Hanson of St. Paul, stopped here for a short time Monday morning while enroute to Kenora, Ont., Can., to visit with his father, Martin Hanson, and his sister, Mrs. Stuart Richards. While here they looked after matters in connection with Mr. Hanson's farm southeast of the village.

Pennington County 4-H Achievement Day Will be Held Saturday, Oct. 17

The annual Pennington county 4-H fall achievement day will be held at the county fair grounds Saturday, October 17, beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning, it was announced today. At that time ten 4-H club members will be awarded free trips to the Junior Livestock show to be held in South St. Paul in November. At the local achievement day 4-H workers will display their projects in market classes of poultry, fat lambs, pens of lambs, fat barrows, baby beeves and potatoes. Cash prizes also will be awarded to exhibitors.

DEMOCRATS WITHDRAW

Fred A. Curtis, candidate for governor, and Patrick J. Delaney, candidate for U. S. Senator on the Democratic ticket, have withdrawn from the race in favor of Benson, Lundeen, the Farmer-Labor candidates. This means the latter will have active support of at least one wing of the Democrats, and that the Farmer-Laborites will favor re-election of President Roosevelt in return.

CANADIAN MAN TO ADDRESS DAIRYMEN

Dairymen attending the annual convention of the Red River Valley Dairymen's association in Crookston October 15 will have an opportunity to hear an address by the Honorable J. H. Evans, deputy minister of agriculture for the province of Manitoba.

Mr. Evans received his appointment to that position 21 years ago and since that time has served under nine different ministers of agriculture.

He came to western Canada from Wales in March, 1906, and farmed for nine years prior to receiving the appointment as deputy minister. During this time he spent the winter months of three years at the University of Manitoba from which he was graduated in agricultural science. He had been three years at the University of Wales before coming to Canada.

In the past 15 years Mr. Evans has addressed countless meetings on agricultural topics.

His topic here will be "Agricultural Progress in Canada", and his address will be the principal feature of the program for the closing evening of the dairymen's convention.

Seek to Have County Included in Federal Drouth Relief Region

The county board at an adjourned meeting Wednesday afternoon of last week adopted a resolution requesting that Pennington county be included in the federal drouth area and thus be entitled to a grant of government funds for relief purposes. At present this is the only county in the northern part not designated as a drouth area. Citing poor crop returns in the county this fall, the resolution declares that 250 county farmers will need work relief and that 154 farmers will require feed loans.

MARTIN HAUPT WEDS LAURA M. DUCHARME

Martin H. Haupt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Haupt of River township, and Miss Laura Marie Ducharme, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Ducharme of Red Lake Falls were united in marriage Wednesday, Oct. 7th, at St. Joseph's Catholic church at Red Lake Falls, Rev. E. J. Lemire officiating. The bride wore a navy blue velvet gown with hat, gloves and slippers to match. She was attended by her sister, Beatrice, who wore a gown of dark green crepe with accessories. The groomsman was Edward Haupt, brother of the groom. The wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents for relatives and friends, while the wedding supper was served to some thirty guests at the home of the groom's parents. In the evening, a wedding dance was held at the Aragon ball room at Plummer for some 400 invited friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Haupt left for a short wedding trip, and upon return will make their home on his farm, the former Gust Larson place. Numerous friends in the community will join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Haupt lifelong happiness.

WOMEN'S PROJECT CHECKUP MEETING

The county chairman, township and group chairmen and leaders of the Home Management project met yesterday with Miss Kirchner at the municipal auditorium at Thief River for a check-up of the past season's activities and to plan for next season. About sixty persons were present for the noon luncheon and for the program which followed. New officers selected were Mrs. V. C. Noper, county chairman, and Mrs. Toomey, secretary-treasurer. Subjects chosen for the next meetings which will start in the spring, are: 1. Home made rugs and table mats. 2. Furniture and refinishing. 3. Home made furniture. 4. Accessories for the home.

YANKS WIN SERIES

Dumb Animals Once Were Liable to Prosecution

Trial for Crimes Common Centuries Ago.

Washington, D. C.—"Woof, woof," was all the prisoner could say for himself in a recent sensational trial. For the prisoner was a dog.

"The trial of animals for murder and mayhem was fairly common several centuries ago," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society. "Primitive civilizations assumed that animals were man's equals in intelligence and moral responsibility, and held them equally liable before the law. Today it is more usual to file suits against owners instead of their animal property.

"European countries have a centuries-long record of hailing animals into court. Rumor has it that storks were brought to punishment in 666. In the Fifteenth century especially, prosecutions by the score were brought against rats, insects, and domestic animals.

"It was in France, Switzerland and Germany that beasts most frequently locked horns with the law, and occasionally in Italy and Belgium. History tells of trials also in Spain, Russia, Denmark, England, and Scotland. Even at that, is is doubtful whether history tells all.

Murder Usual Charge.

"Murder was the usual charge. Pigs figured prominently among the dumb criminals, no doubt because they mingled with their human neighbors in streets and peasant homes with little restriction.

"Domestic animals were booked for charges before civil courts like human offenders, but wild animals were committed to the judicial branch of the church. Ecclesiastical courts handled suits even against snails, snakes, caterpillars, horseflies, grasshoppers, dolphins, locusts, eels, and most frequently, rats. The accused, being dumb, would be assigned a glib human advocate, would have charges read loudly before their haunts or holes, and were usually punished with anathema and banishment.

"This procedure was followed in the new world with a Canadian suit against turtledoves.

"Murder was not the sole crime which brought beasts before the bar. Domestic animals in the house where crime had been committed were condemned as accessories and executed in accordance with an old South German law. Oxen could be killed in early Rome for serving a farmer in plowing up a boundary marker. Certain ants were convicted, two centuries ago in Brazil, of undermining the cellars of a monastery and stealing flour. In Basel, Switzerland, in 1474, an aged rooster was solemnly tried and burned at the stake for laying an egg.

"A dog found guilty of biting without first barking a warning was to be punished as for willful murder, according to an ancient Persian law.

"Beasts in the jungles of law meet various fates. Most, when condemned to pay the extreme penalty, have been hanged on special gallows, hanged by the hind legs to a bent tree, or ceremoniously knocked in the head. Some were buried alive, some burned alive, others singed alive and mercifully throttled before being burned. Their legal prosecution has been known to include torture on the rack, although no confessions were forthcoming.

"Whatever may be an animal's legal end, great care has been taken to guarantee due process of law in reaching it. Appeals and new trials were granted to condemned brutes.

"Either codified law or primitive tribal law has passed judgment on nearly everything on Noah's passenger list.

"The United States has given dumb brutes the right of trial. Puritan New England took legal toll of the animal kingdom to the extent of eight in New Haven and two in Salem, the latter being dogs hanged for witchcraft. Elephants have been formally sentenced to be shot for slaying their keepers. One was acquitted when circus employees testified to its sweet disposition. Once, however, when a circus elephant ran murderously amuck among spectators, the keeper and not the beast was tried for second degree manslaughter."

Wheat From Field to Table in One Day

Owosso, Mich. — W. F. Alexander, Rush township farmer, believes he set a record when he ate wheat for supper that had been growing in the morning. He harvested his wheat in the morning with a combine which cuts and threshes in a single operation; ground some of the wheat in the afternoon and his wife made wheat gems for supper.

'36 Urban Home Building Already Leads '35 Total

Washington.—Construction of city homes in the United States in the first seven months of 1936 already exceeds the entire volume of urban home building for 1935, according to the forthcoming September issue of "The Federal Home Loan Bank Review." The report is based on building permit reports from all cities of 10,000 or more population, compiled by the bureau of labor statistics.

The volume of residential building activity, already at its highest point in June since 1929, rose still further in July to 37.9 per cent of the 19.6 index level. The number of dwellings authorized in July was 158.4 per cent greater than in July, 1935. Total cost of this construction exceeded the 1935 total by 182.3 per cent.

While smaller homes of the one and two-family class continued to predominate, representing 51 per cent of the total number of July permits, the 49 per cent of multi-family homes is the highest figure for this type of dwelling recorded in recent years. The latter class of home led all other residential building in New York, Massachusetts, Ohio, Illinois, South Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee and Oklahoma.

As in June, New York remained far in the lead in the number of dwellings authorized during July. California continued in second place, followed by Ohio, Massachusetts and Illinois in that order.

Drouth-Proof Farms by Practical Use of Powe

Chicago. — "Drouth-proof farms" can be made a practical reality in the future by the harnessing of cheaply generated diesel power to pump water to parched areas, according to Ralph Hemphill, president of a system of diesel schools in an address here before a conference of engineers.

Mr. Hemphill urged the adoption by the federal government of a program to finance the purchase by farmers in the "dust bowl" of small diesel engine units and the installation of adequate wells and pumping facilities.

"The tragedy of drouth is not lack of water, but lack of the means of obtaining it," he said. "Water flows underground. It passes farmsteads in streams and creeks, yet crops perish. At a cost of but a few cents per acre, a diesel engine can provide water for sections of stricken farms.

"By this means complete loss of crops can be obviated and the average farmer can be enabled to raise at least enough to feed himself and family and provide fodder for his stock."

JAVITS HAS A PLAN

Benjamin A. Javits, New York lawyer-economist, co-author of NRA and representative of many important trade groups, has drafted a substitute plan for NRA that will be the basis of a broad movement to remedy many industrial, agricultural and social ailments. The plan is described in a book by Mr. Javits, "The Commonwealth of Industry," that has been studied by many important national leaders.

Parental Guidance—

Don't Expect a Child to Grasp Ideas Mother Finds Difficult to Understand

THERE is such a thing as expecting too much of your children. This does not mean that a child should be excused for disobedience, provided, of course, rules. Nor does it apply to impertinence, nor any of the regulations for the kindly development that it is clear in the child's mind that his or her action is against and up-bringing of a child.

However, the demands of child study sometimes make mothers expect as much of a child as would be expected of an adult. And, should their youngsters fail to come up to the standard set for them, mothers especially get a distressed apprehension that their beloved offspring are not quite up to normal mentally, although they may be in robust health. To have such fears is a serious matter for parents, and the reaction of such thoughts on a child is detrimental. Individuality in children is pronounced, and all children do not respond in like manner to suggestions, many of which are accepted by the parents themselves, only after much child study.

It is a mistake to attempt to force ideas, too deep for it, into a child's mind, or to probe it with a dessecting scrutiny that embarrasses or offends the child. It is an inherent right of childhood to think its own thoughts, and see with its own mind just as much as it is an adult privilege to do these things.

To guide children with love that is strong enough to be reasonably lenient and reasonably strict in dealing out deserved punishments, not severe but corrective—this is expected of parents. Fortunately there is intuition to aid them, and the intent to fit their offspring to cope with the world in a conquering way.

It must be realized that the theory and practice of bringing up children are as widely divergent as these two things are in every field. There is ever a happy medium, a balanced combination of the two that must prevail for the best results. There is no substitute for fine practical experience. Theory must be swayed by parental experience in the upbringing of children for it to be an aid in the building of their characters.

GROUND GRIP TIRES

SAVE time and money and get greater efficiency by equipping the rear of your car and truck with a pair of Firestone Ground Grip Tires. They will give you the super-traction needed to pull through mud and unimproved roads and will save you the time, trouble and money of applying chains.

Harvey S. Firestone was born and raised on a farm in Columbiana County, Ohio, which he has operated ever since 1904. It was here on this farm that Mr. Firestone conceived the idea and worked with his tire engineers in developing a practical tire for farm use. Mr. Firestone's experience in farming gave him the realization of the need for a pneumatic tire with lugs of rubber that would increase the drawbar pull, roll easier, save time, and speed up farm operations on cars, trucks, tractors and all wheeled farm implements.

Firestone engineers are continually working with Mr. Firestone on his farm to secure greater farm efficiency. They developed the Ground Grip Tire which is so designed that in soft mud roads it cleans itself and the bars of rubber are so placed that they will not bump on paved roads. The design of this tire is so unusual and its performance so amazing that a patent has been granted by the United States Patent Office covering its exclusive features. The secret of the extra traction of Firestone Ground Grip Tires is the scientifically designed rubber lug of the tread. Under this extraordinary super-traction tread are placed two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords. This is a patented Firestone construction feature which makes it possible to weld this heavy tread to the Gum-Dipped cord body, making it one inseparable unit.

Go to your nearest Firestone Tire Dealer or Implement Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store today and ask to see these money-saving tires. And when you order a new tractor or implement, specify Firestone Ground Grip Tires.

WOULD YOU SAY LIFE OR DEATH?

Whole Nation Pondered the Problem of Baby Julian Tafel, Born With Malformation Which Might Cause Life of Suffering.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

WHAT would you do? If your baby was born with a malformation of his little "insides" which would doom him to possible lifelong invalidism if an operation saved his life, what would you tell the doctor? To operate? Or to let the baby die a "merciful" death?

That is the mortal dilemma that faced twenty-four-year-old Julian R. Tafel of Chicago and his pretty young wife.

Julian R. Tafel, Jr., is dead now. His span of life here on this earth was only five days. But in those five days Baby Julian received more attention than most people ever do in an entire lifetime.

He was born September 17 in the Danish-American hospital in Chicago. He seemed normal enough at first. Indeed he was a beautiful baby. His mother said, "Have you seen my baby? Isn't he lovely?"

But it was not long until it was known that tiny Julian was not the perfect child he appeared. Part of his colon, the last stage of the intestinal tract, was missing. Without this channel for elimination he was bound to die.

Mother and Father Disagree.

Dr. Lewis K. Eastman, proprietor of the hospital, wanted to operate on the baby, to form an artificial opening. He said there was a "50-50" chance of recovery. It was probable that the child would have to have several more operations later.

Mrs. Eva Tafel, the mother said:

"I am the mother of the baby and I want him to live. He must not be allowed to die. That would not be right. Medical science is progressing yearly, and in time my boy could be made completely normal. I'm sure of that."

Julian Tafel, Sr., said:

"I am the father of the baby and I think it would be unfair to let him live. He would be a hopeless invalid and some day he would hate us . . . his mother and father . . . for giving him that horrible chance."

Dr. Eastman said:

"I am the doctor in charge of the case and I think an operation should be performed. That is my personal as well as professional feeling. The baby may die, anyway, but the off chance must not be overlooked."

Age-Old Problem.

Here was a problem as old as the Biblical story of King Solomon and the two women, each of whom claimed to be the mother of the same child. Dr. Isaac Abt, noted child specialist, admitted that it would take a Solomon to decide the Tafel case justly. He said:

"Whether Baby Tafel should live or die is not for me to say. It is a question that would require the wisdom of Solomon to answer.

"The parents seem to be the only ones who can give the answer, since under the law they must agree to the operation before it is performed."

That was one of the problems facing Dr. Eastman. Counsel at first told him that the operation could not be made without the consent of both parents. For some time this delayed him. . . . Then he found it could be done with the consent of only one parent.

Baby Tafel, Whose Life Medical Science Could Not Save.

Meanwhile every minute counted. Because of the colon circumstance the baby could not eliminate body waste. His system was becoming poisoned—uremia, they called it. And because they could give him no food, he was slowly starving to death.

Nation Gives Advice.

The operation would provide the outlet needed. An incision in the side would be made to the large intestine, and a drain would be installed which would protrude over the hip.

Meanwhile medical and sociological experts throughout the country were sought for advise. Their comments were eagerly awaited and are still food for thought.

For instance there was Anton J. Carlson, noted physiologist of the University of Chicago. He said: "I think society should change its attitude toward the incurable. If he faces a life of suffering he should have the privilege of disposing of himself."

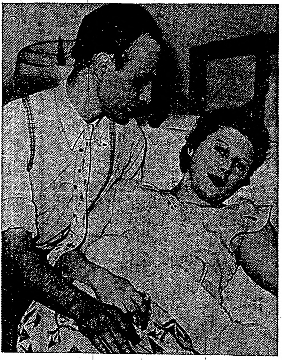
Dr. Joseph B. De Lee, chief consultant of the Lying-In, Chicago maternity hospital, had a suggestion to make:

"Legal, moral and religious issues enter, but primarily the question of medical profession ethics interests me. A doctor's duty is to save life. It is our rule, our job. A doctor must invariably recommend that lives he saved.

"Lawyers must decide the legal question, ministers and sociologists the religious and moral ones. I recommend that there should be a committee to decide such matters as this."

Dr. Dafoe's Philosophy.

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, the kindly little Canadian who miraculously brought the Dionne quintuplets into healthy life, had been known to say, not long ago:



Julian Tafel and His Wife Console Each Other After the Loss of Their Child.

"I don't think any doctor has the right to destroy life. We can never be sure we can't get a life back, and often we can make life easier."

Dr. Noble Sprout Heaney, chief obstetrician at another large hospital, agreed:

"The child ought to be given a chance to live. A competent surgeon should proceed to operate with the benefits of our present knowledge.

"In surgery no one knows what progress will be made in our knowledge within a very few years. And the mother in this case is right when she says that everything that can be done now should be done.

"There may be things remediable in the future that this child can benefit by if his life is saved now."

Dr. John E. Jennings, chairman of the press reference bureau, Kings County (N. Y.) Medical society, declared: "No one is able to decide the value of an hour's life to any human being."

What a Cardinal Thought.

Dr. Hugh S. Cummings, surgeon-general of the United States public health service, said: "Human beings, subject to error, may make mistakes in diagnosis or judgment which death would make irreparable. Such a power would give an advantage to the unscrupulous who wished to do away with an individual for their own gain."

The Roman Catholic attitude to such a case as that of Baby Tafel had been outlined by William Cardinal O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, during an earlier discussion:

"The doctor is called into the sickroom to restore health and not take away life. Under no circumstances should he do other than attempt to bring health back to his patient.

"God is the creator of life. He gives life and He alone has the power to take it. Suffering is the discipline of humanity."

The Tafel case recalled a statement of Lord Moynihan, famed British surgeon. He is leader of the Voluntary Euthanasia society. This was formed to legalize euthanasia, which is voluntary death at a patient's own behest. He said:

Cripples Get More Attention.

"It is our moral as well as our ethical duty to keep every patient alive so long as ever we can. And every humane person must naturally suppose that it is a bounden obligation upon us to relieve suffering wherever we can. But if we cannot cure disease then we want to relieve its manifestations. Our object is to bring about voluntary euthanasia. There is nothing compulsory about our proposal.

"We want a patient to be able to say to a competent legal authority that he desires release.

"We propose that there should be several interests working in concord, namely, the patient, the law and the doctors.

"It is a curious trait in human nature that if a child is a cripple, an invalid or deformed, that child receives far more devotion and attention than a normal child. We would not desire to interfere in such cases. But if the child is born an idiot and there is not the slightest chance of recovery, then the question might be considered."

Dr. Louis Moorhead, dean of the Loyola university (Chicago) medical school, opposes euthanasia, and declares:

"No individual has the right to end his own life, since he has no jurisdiction over it. It is the generally accepted practice of the medical profession to preserve life as long as possible."

Mrs. Tafel had no difficulty in making up her mind.

"I want him," she said. "I have had one normal baby. I could have others. That doesn't make any difference. This baby's here. He should be helped."

"He Would Curse Us."

But the baby's father didn't think so. It was the first disagreement on a major issue between the couple since they were married in 1933.

"He would curse us for letting him live under this handicap," said Julian Tafel, Sr.

But the mother argued, "Who knows what science will be able to do in another five years — if we only can keep the baby alive now?"

In this Dr. Eastman backed her up, saying, "Surgeons know more now than they did five years ago. If we operate on the baby now, and he lives, we may be able to do more for him later and the world will be better off for this experience."

Mrs. Tafel was upheld by another mother, Mrs. Harold Lefler, twenty-eight, of Congress Park, Ill. Her four-year-old son, Dickie, survived an operation similar to that eventually performed upon Baby Julian. He has had five operations in all, and others may have to follow. From infancy until this spring he carried an incision in his side. But his mother said:

"I'd rather have Dickie than a million normal children. His father and I have been well recompensed for whatever anxiety he has caused us."

Hundreds of Successful Operations.

Another mother, Mrs. Pilar Abrairia, of Chicago, told a similar story.

"The condition of the baby born to me," she said, "was just like that of Mrs. Tafel's baby. It had no rectal opening. The doctor performed a successful operation to correct the condition. My boy would have been normal if he hadn't died later of a heart attack."

Hundreds of operations on babies having malformations similar to that of the Tafel baby have been successful, said Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"One out of 5,000 babies is so malformed," he said. "The first case on record occurred in the Seventh century and an operation performed by Paulus was successful.

"Whether the operation succeeds or fails depends largely upon the extent of the surgery. If the intestines are near the point where the incision is made the operation is easy; if they are a foot away the operation is more dangerous."

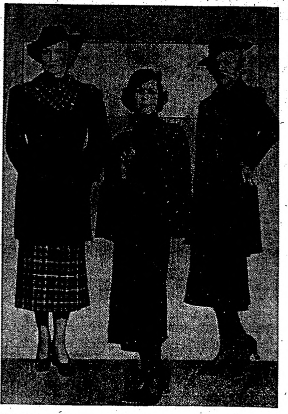
It's Season of Intriguing Woolens

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



THE new woolens are having their day and a grand and glorious day it is, marked with new triumphs in color, in designfulness and versatile weave. They are grand and glorious beyond description and they have taken on a sheerness and featherweight texture that adds much to their lure. With the college girls the thought of a back-to-school wardrobe that does not include a costume suit fashioned of handsome wool is inconceivable. And so it's wool-gathering these fair collegians are going with all the enthusiasm of youth that sets forth to get what it wants.

Not that college-faring girls are the only ones engaged in the wild scramble to be first in fashion by going stepping in a brand new autumn ensemble styled of chic and handsome wool weave. Fact is every woman who is fashion-wise is making one grand dash in the direction of the glamorous wool fabric sections, which is exactly what she should be doing to be smartly apparelled in the days to follow.

Among the woolens to meet the rapturous gaze of the woman in quest of modish materials for her fall costume are the most enticing jacquard-patterned weaves fancy could possibly picture. These are that new you will get all the thrills that come with having a forward look into fashion futures. In these jacquard wool weaves the patternings are woven right into the material. Then there are the cunningly embroidered woolens which promise to be quite the rage. These make up ever so smartly in tunics, and waistcoats. They come in pretty florals and bold coin dots and other clever motifs mostly wide-spaced but not infrequently all-over designed. As to wool plaids and stripes and checks their name is legion. The big idea right now is a gay plaid skirt with monotone blouse or sweater. The flaring plaid tunic is also outstanding in the new stylings. As to the fantastically nubbed tweeds that are so important this season, everyone who sees falls prey to their wiles at first glance.

Designers are playing up the new woolens for all they are worth, using them by the two's and three's in combinations that stress striking contrast both in color and weave. The costume made up of two or more woolens is the "hit" of the season.

Two of the three models in the picture make contrast their theme, in use of versatile woolens. The ensemble to the left can be worn from early fall to early spring in perfect comfort, with or without its matching coat. Here a plaid rabbit's woolen dress in pencil silhouette with a high surplice bodice and a bright velveteen ascot has a plain rabbit's hair tunic coat with double-breasted front and wide revers of the plaid. The new "swing" effect is achieved with unpressed box pleats that start from the waist.

To the right in the trio a striped rabbit's woolen plays a duet with a plain rabbit's wool weave. The dress in pencil silhouette has as complement a flared tunic coat of the plain wool with tuxedo fronts of the stripe. A bright velveteen ascot and belt buckle match the color in the stripes. The dress is ideal to wear under a separate winter coat later on.

Centered is a cape outfit of jacquard tweed. It is this sort of novelty woolens that is glorifying the fabric style picture just now. The raised shoulder line which is the much-talked-of new silhouette is carried out in sunray tucks. The long sleeved dress has a flared skirt. The popular stand-up collar adds a keen touch, also a patent leather belt to match the patent leather shoes.

NEW-STYLE BAGS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Alert manufacturers of bags have set to work to devise distinctive openings, out of the ordinary, yet practical. Perfect with all sorts of tailored clothes, football togs and travel costumes is the new double-zippered transatlantic handbag (top picture) the unusual opening of which resembles a suitcase fastening and a roomy interior that provides ample space for anything from a passport and travel papers to a pocket-size novel. With a smart fall dress of nubby homespun as pictured below it is the very essence of good style to wear washable kid gloves matching the leather of an underarm bag.

ROSE DECORATIVE THEME FOR AUTUMN

Newest feature of this season's costume flowers is the American beauty rose. Singly, or in clusters, it is worn with full-length stem almost to the knee. The flower, flatteringly soft and graceful, is posed just below the shoulder.

The rose motif is also prominent on printed and blocked scarfs and in formal chiffon evening handkerchiefs. Rich evening brocades follow the romantic mode in large all-over rose or leaf designs. Rose patterns have all the old-world air so typical of the Victorian and Edwardian revivals that are dominating the fall modes.

Accents of rose on black are a leading theme for fall: copper-rose buckles, necklaces of rosy crystal, touches of lace in a faint blush-rose, nail polish in old rose with faintly smoke-blue undertone. Polish this autumn is going romantic, along with everything else. Soft shades of old rose, coral, mauve—or if you're wearing gold or autumn-leaf red, a new light rust polish—faintly echo the undertone of the gown or its accessories.

Knitted Reading Jackets

Novel nightdresses and matching reading jackets in pale blue, loosely-knit fine wool are featured in the fall collections.

Those Swiss!

Hand-painted buttons, decorated in the Swiss peasant style, are now to be had, and are strongly advised for the ski suit.

Taupe Felt Models

In felts for early fall there is an increasing trend toward taupe models.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

JERRY MEETS WITH AN ACCIDENT

IF JERRY MUSKRAT had not still been suspicious of Farmer Brown's Boy the accident might not have happened. Then again it might, if not at that particular time at some other and less fortunate time. Anyway, it happened, and Jerry will not soon forget it.

He was a little way up the Laughing Brook that morning when he heard some one coming down the Laughing Brook. By the sound he knew that it was one of those two-legged human creatures and at once Jerry started pell-mell back toward the Smiling Pool.

Jerry's First Though' Was That He Had Stepped Into Another of Those Dreadful Traps.

Now the water in the Laughing Brook was low. In many places it was too low for swimming, so Jerry ran along the shore just under the edge of the bank. There were many roots of trees and bushes from which the water had washed away the earth, and they crossed and recrossed each other. Sometimes Jerry ran under them and sometimes he jumped over them, whichever seemed easiest and best.

Now Jerry was in such a hurry to get back to the Smiling Pool that he didn't watch his steps as he should have. Perhaps it was because at the same time he was trying to watch behind him to see who it was that was coming. Anyway, in jumping over some of those tangled roots he didn't jump quite far enough and one hind foot slipped down between them. It went in easy enough, but when Jerry tried to pull it out it didn't come. It was held fast. You see his weight had forced two roots apart just enough to allow his leg to slip down between, and now they pinched it tight.

Jerry's first thought was that he had stepped in another of those dreadful traps. He hadn't a doubt of it. He was quite frantic with fear, and he tugged and wrenched with all his might. It was a wonder that he didn't break his leg. But the more he struggled the tighter he was held. You see, that leg began to swell at once where it was caught, and, of course, the more it swelled the more impossible it was to get it free.

Poor Jerry! Hope died as he heard the footsteps coming nearer and nearer. He twisted around, so as to get a good look at the trap, and when he discovered that it wasn't a trap at all that held him he could hardly believe his eyes. The discovery would have been a great relief had it not been for those footsteps coming nearer and nearer.

"If I had time I could gnaw those roots off," thought Jerry as he wrenched and twisted and pulled. But there wasn't time, and so he continued to struggle, hoping to get free before he should be discovered.

LUNCHEON DISHES

FOR a most tasty luncheon dish, try the following when it is convenient:

Casserole of Noodles and Tuna Fish.

Take two cupfuls of uncooked noodles, one pound can of tuna fish, one-fourth cupful of chopped pimiento, two cupfuls of drained, canned peas, two cupfuls of thin white sauce and buttered crumbs. Cook the noodles until tender in three quarts of boiling water to which one tablespoonful of salt has been added. Drain and place a layer of noodles in the bottom of a buttered baking dish, then a layer of fish, pimiento and peas. Season well and repeat until all the ingredients are used. Pour over the white sauce and top with a thick layer of buttered crumbs. Bake until brown.

Chicken Pie Supreme.

Cut up a cooked chicken and arrange in a large casserole in layers with uncooked rice, add small onions, broken mushrooms and a few peas. Dot each layer with butter, using two layers of chicken. Pour over well-seasoned chicken broth, season well, cover and cook until the rice is done. Uncover and place very small baking powder biscuits over the top or well-browned croutons.

Orange Tapioca.

Take four tablespoonfuls of quick cooking tapioca, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one and one-third cupfuls of boiling water and cook in a double boiler for 15 minutes, or until the tapioca is transparent, stirring frequently. Add one-half cupful of sugar, and when well mixed a cupful of orange juice and the grated rind of half an orange. Stir until cool. When cool fold in one-half cupful of whipped cream. Pile in sherbet glasses and serve.

Spanish Sandwich.

Chop enough green pepper and onion to make two tablespoonfuls each. Cook until a light brown, in one tablespoonful of butter. Add a cupful of thick tomato pulp and simmer five minutes. Stir in one cupful of soft grated cheese, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a few dashes of paprika and one well-beaten egg. Cook just a moment and serve spread on finely buttered toast—cover with another slice.

They Took Their Annual Sky Outing

Every year the Hicks family of Detroit goes on a sort of aerial junket, and this season was no exception. Fred Hicks, a restaurant owner, Mrs. Hicks and the ten Hicks kids chartered a big transport plane, flew to Cleveland, circled the city a few times, and then returned, satisfied for another year. It all started in 1927 when one of the little Hickses promoted himself an airplane ride. Hicks, Sr., decided to take the whole family, and they liked it so well they've been doing it every year since.

I'll Pay My Way

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I'LL pay my way along life's road,
However heavy is the load
I'll pay my way for what I find,
With kindness try to pay the kind,
I'll pay my way to ev'ry child
That ever looked at me and smiled,
I'll pay my way—not take men's aid
And go my way, my debt unpaid.

I'll pay my way, pay God above
For His, by giving others love,
I'll pay my way, for ev'ry tear
That sorrow sheds give someone cheer,
I'll pay my way, not walk alone,
My lamp unlit, my light unshown,
I'll pay my way—and, if forgot,
I'll pay my way if blest or not.

THE HINDU RICE MYSTERY

HERE is a trick in which the magician duplicates one of the celebrated mysteries of the Hindu fakirs. A small bowl, a bag of rice and a table knife are the items used.

The magician fills the bowl with rice. He takes the knife, thrusts its blade deep into the rice grains; then raises the knife by the handle.

In uncanny fashion, the bowl of rice comes up with the knife blade and remains suspended until the magician grips the bowl with his left hand and removes the knife with his right.

The whole secret lies in the shape of the bowl. It must be of a type which bulges at the sides with a narrow mouth. In this type of bowl, the knife forces rice to the sides and the tight grains cause sufficient pressure to raise bowl and all when the knife is lifted.

GET TRACE OF RACE OLDER THAN MAYANS

Football Credited With Find in Central America.

Washington. — The American game of football is credited by scientists of the Carnegie Institution of Washington for the discovery of one of the most important archaeological sites of Central America.

Dr. A. V. Kidder, head of the institution's division of historical research, reported that a group of mounds which promise to provide a link between the pre-historic Maya Indians and those who met the Spaniards in 1542 were uncovered by a group of schoolboys of Guatemala City.

In attempting to lay out a football field just outside the city, the boys were forced to dig into two of the mounds which dot the area. Until then the mounds had been believed to consist only of earth, but the digging revealed ancient masonry covered with fine white stucco.

Carnegie Institution archaeologists, headed by Dr. Kidder, were called in, and before the onset of the rainy season, they had found four pyramidal buildings, one within another, containing four tombs of ancient priests or chiefs, in which were discovered human skeletons, jewelry and other ornaments, cooking utensils and war weapons of the ancient Indians.

Attained High Culture.

Dr. Kidder said that the people represented by these artifacts were believed to have laid the foundations for the late Mayan and other cultures which reached a high stage of civilization long before the coming of the Spaniards.

Excavations to date, Dr. Kidder said, had shown that the area, now known as "Kaminaljuyu," or "Hills of the Dead," was "very much more important archeologically than had previously been thought, for it is now clear that it was occupied during a far longer period than had been considered probable."

"Hitherto the area was valued chiefly because it produced objects of the so-called 'archaic' type, a type to which have been assigned similar products from the Valley of Mexico, from San Salvador, and from the lowest levels of Uaxactun," he explained.

"Objects of this type, such as human effigies of clay and pottery vessels having certain designated characteristics, are thought to have been the work of primitive agricultural peoples who are believed to have occupied the Middle American highlands well before the opening of the Christian era, and whose culture, it is generally supposed, gave rise to that of the Maya, the Toltec and the other higher civilizations of the region."

Finds Very Important

The high culture, expressed in fine carving and weaving and skillful use of tools and implements of war as well as finely organized system of government, which the Spaniards found flourishing among the Mayans, was obviously the result of a "long line of developmental stages, reaching back into the far-distant past," Dr. Kidder said.

"It is these sequent stages in the rise or the great Maya race that archaeologists are seeking to establish," he added.

"Inasmuch as it is possible that the solution is to be found in the Kaminaljuyu ruins, it is understandable why the results of the season's work have suddenly elevated the area into position of first importance."

Flight Around World in Two Days Now Foreseen

Johannesburg. — Predictions that it would be possible for an airplane to fly from Croydon to Cape Town in one day at a speed of 500 miles an hour, and to go around the world in two days, were made by Selig Brodetsky, professor of applied mathematics at Leeds university, England, in an address at Rand university here.

Brodetsky, an authority on aeronautics, said proper organization and night flying would be essential to a flight around the world in two days. He alluded to the possibility of following the sun so as to have permanent day in certain latitudes.

In the future, he said, it would be possible to fly from England to the Cape of Good Hope in a day at 500 miles an hour.

A speed of 400 miles an hour had been reached in the Schneider cup race, he pointed out. The obstacle in the way of increasing airplane speeds indefinitely, he said, was that the span of the wings had to remain finite. The greatest speed it seemed possible to achieve, unless something fundamental were changed, was something about 500 miles an hour.

Paris.—The air ministry has decided to promote a blue ribbon air race from New York to Paris, open to fliers of the world, in commemoration of the tenth anniversary next year of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's New York-to-Paris solo flight.

Prince George Bibesco, president of the International Aeronautic federation, accepted the task of organizing the race.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Scarlet Countenance: A gentleman whose acquaintance is vast and who prides himself on never forgetting a face, stood at the curb while his wife went into a bakery establishment to make some purchases for the family dinner. After waiting what seemed to him an eternity, he followed her inside. The store was doing an excellent business and the entire counter was lined with women each intent on getting service from the harassed sales force. Surveying the line and picking out his wife, the gentleman stole softly up behind her and with a playful spank, whispered, "Don't spend all your money, dear." Whereupon the lady turned and revealed a face he had never seen before. And in his hasty retreat, whom should he meet only a few feet away but a lady who glared at him with all storm signals set. That was his wife of course, and she, having witnessed the whole proceeding, is still mentioning it on the most embarrassing occasions.

Signs of the Times: Quite often in trips here and there underground, I've noticed persons conversing with their fingers. It struck me that New York has an extraordinarily large population of mutes so, by means of pencil and paper, I took the matter up with a speechless friend. He informed me that many of those whom I saw communicating by signals in the subway were not using the official sign language but were merely saving wear and tear on their voices by using their hands and thus making themselves understood over the rattle and roar of the trains. Also some who use the real language have all their faculties and use the signs of mutes to communicate confidential matters when among others. Some beggars who pretend to be deaf and dumb learn the signs as a matter of self-protection. Alert cops are quick to detect fake signs and the fakers go to the workhouse.

* * *

Changing of the Guard: The other afternoon in the lobby of the Waldorf-Astoria, two full platoons of page and bell boys appeared from nowhere, marched along with the precision of Roxy ushers, wheeled, saluted, fell out and took up posts in various nooks and corners. Inquiry developed the fact that the ceremony is a regular thing occurring daily at 7 a. m. and 3 p. m. and attracting many states from guests and others. The march of the trimly uniformed lads begins at the Lexington avenue foyer and ends at the Park avenue entrance of the hotel. It is all over in a few minutes but attracts a lot of attention nevertheless.

* * *

Modern Maze: The new Triboro bridge is a great time-saver for motorists who go to Long Island from the Bronx or the other way around, as it makes it unnecessary for them to get into downtown traffic and cuts the mileage no little. But a young man from Detroit, who desired to travel from Washington Heights to Jones Beach, discovered that even a $64,000,000 short cut may prove otherwise. After paying 25 cents toll, he drove gayly onto the bridge and finally reached the end. A little farther on, he asked how to get to the beach and was told to take the Triboro bridge. Not until then did he discover that he was back to where he started from. The reason was that he had made a wrong turn and hadn't noted a sign. But no matter the reason, the bridge receipts were increased 25 cents since, in order to get back on, he had to part with another quarter.

City Scene: The decrepit horse of a junkman collapsing just after it has been speeded across lower Broadway to beat the change of a light. . . . The usual crowd collecting. . . . An officious policeman taking charge, forcing back the spectators and making notes. . . . The junkman answering in a choking voice.... It wasn't much of a horse. . . . But it brought him a living. . . . At home were a wife and six kids . . . and he couldn't figure out the future.

Hunter for Zoo Finds Capturing Easiest Task

St. Louis.—Capturing a wild animal is not so difficult, according to Christoph Schulz, veteran East African hunter, who delivered a consignment of animals to the local zoo.

But animals are hard to keep and deliver after capture, Schulz says. In support of this he pointed out that a giraffe, delivered here, was separated from a herd and roped from a horse in about five minutes.

After the capture, however, it was necessary to move the animal 300 miles overland from East Africa, place it on a ship for a voyage of thirty-seven days to Boston, after which the beast still faced a fifteen day quarantine.

And despite the long journey the animals must be delivered in good health or they will not be accepted.

Madeira Night

By ELIZABETH C. FORREST

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

PRISCILLA PORTER looked up from the fat purse in her hand to gaze gratefully after Great Aunt Agatha rustling down the tree-bordered alameda on her way back to the steamer. Then with a thrill of anticipation she turned to the beauty of Madeira. Narrow streets that mounted steeply in steps of pebbled mosaics. Brilliant flowers spilling their perfume over gray walls that hid mysterious gardens. Carros drawn by wide-horned bullocks.

In a nearby booth gorgeous embroideries caught her eye, drew her from purchase to purchase. When she emerged again onto the alameda which all afternoon had been thronged with crowds of tourists from the steamer, the street was almost deserted. Mantillaed women and sleek dark men alone were visible.

She glanced swiftly sideways and an evil-looking Portuguese with stiffly waxed mustache, leered at her. Terrified, she whirled and confronted broad tweed shoulders, a smooth blond head. A clipped voice asked, "Need any help?"

She steadied her voice. "Yes . . . please."

He turned a torrent of Portuguese upon her annoyer and the man slunk off.

"Traveling alone?" he asked.

"No. I promised Aunt Agatha I'd stay with the other passengers; but they've all disappeared."

"Tourists always take in the Casino," he remarked casually, and added, "Shall I call a carro?"

That settled it. To slide through the perfumed dusk in a quaint basket-carriage drawn by bullocks. . . . With hot cheeks and thudding heart Priscilla found herself being helped into the low wicker seat. The runners slipped away over the polished pebbles.

They slid on through narrow twisting streets. Suddenly they halted in a confusion of shouting drivers and carros disgorging black-haired senoritas and swarthy men. In the garden beyond the gaming tables they sat at a little table, surrounded by couples sipping ruby liquid from shining glasses.

"Wine?" he asked.

"Oh, no!" She was genuinely shocked.

"In Rome—" he suggested, a hint of mockery in his eyes.

What a little greenhorn he must think her! Recklessly Priscilla flung inhibitions to the wind: sipped a glass of liquid sunshine; puffed daringly at a cigarette; placed a timid shilling at the roulette table—and won enormously. It was past midnight when her companion scooped her winnings into her bulging purse and led her, starry-eyed, from the Casino.

In silence they slid downward toward the waterfront, Priscilla thinking: "And they warned me not to trust a stranger!"

At the pier she held out her hand. "You mustn't come out with me."

She slipped into a tender in the shadow of the pier and named her steamer. The boat had chugged out of the blackness of the bay into a path of the steamer's light, before she saw her boatmen. Then her heart missed a beat. The man in the stern was her mustached annoyer of the alameda.

Abruptly the engine coughed and stopped. A voice whined, "La-dee, I am vera poor man. Give money, please."

"Not one cent!" Priscilla's voice was sharp with hidden fear.

The tones were suddenly heavy with menace. "You are alone. It is vera dark."

"Here!" cried Priscilla wildly. Her purse fell with a thud on the boat's bottom.

The man picked it up and hefted it. "Bueno," he grunted.

The engine sputtered and recommenced its steady chugging. The boat slid in against the steamer's side. Trembling, Priscilla mounted the ship's ladder. One thought consoled her. Her companion would never know that their perfect evening had been spoiled.

• • •

Back at the shore the tender slid in against the pier. Broad tweed shoulders emerged from the shadows to meet it.

"Get it?" asked a crisp voice.

"Si, Boss," the boatman answered.

Together they moved over beneath a lamp. There was the clink of money changing hands.

Lithuania

Lithuania has been described as the Ireland of the Baltic, and the two countries have much in common. It is even possible that they may be racially akin. The origin of the Lithuanian race is lost in the mists of prehistory, but many anthropologists believe that they are a Celtic tribe left behind on the Baltic in the great trek of the Celts from east to west. They were the only Druids and tree worshipers in eastern Europe, and their music and folk songs and tales bear a strong resemblance to those of the Irish.

Bob Davis Reveals

Annals of Kauai, the Garden Island—Mother Rice.

HONOLULU.

TODAY the Hawaiian islands are among our richest possessions, one of the world's finest playgrounds; the most prolific semi-tropical spot under the flag, a center of culture, educational facilities, industry and natural beauty; the halting spot for luxury ships touring the globe in search of earthly splendors—a Pacific ocean oasis between the Far East and the West and a fruit and floral kingdom second to none on the two hemispheres.

Midst this archipelago of riches, Kauai, in which pineapple and sugar reign as twin monarchs, is known as the Garden Island, upon which 37,000 industrious and prosperous people live contented lives.

It was on Kauai that Captain Cook first landed 1778 to meet death the following year. It was 40 years before this group of islands began to attract world attention. Missionaries arrived 1820; recognition by the United States 1842; provisional cession to Great Britain 1843; protectorate offered United States 1851; reign of kings and queens up to 1893; republic established 1894; American annexation secured 1898; territorial government began 1900. The first English newspaper was established 100 years ago.

Rice Family Distinguished.

Lacking space in which to do justice to even the smallest percentage of those countless noble and outstanding figures identified with the development of Kauai, what remains of this column I dedicate to that benign character, Mary Waterhouse, born in Tasmania in July, 1847, died in June, 1933, beloved of every man, woman and child, native and otherwise, living on Kauai. To all of these she was known affectionately as "Mother Rice." She was the granddaughter of a superintendent of the Wesleyan Missions in the South Seas, from which she came with her father in 1851 to Honolulu, where in the course of events Mary Waterhouse in her twenty-fifth year met and married William Hyde Rice, two years her senior, the son of William Harrison Rice, teacher of the American Protestant mission to the then Sandwich Islands.

Not in all the history of Hawaiians, since the arrival of peoples from the outer world, had there been a more profound student of Polynesian life, manners and characteristics, or one more highly esteemed among them than William Hyde Rice. He died in 1924. His wife survived him nine years.

William and Mary brought up eight children—five sons and three daughters—all save one daughter living. There are twenty grandchildren and twenty-three great-grandchildren, with three or four exceptions, all residing in the Hawaiian group. The adult progeny adorn the professions, while the younger generation prove the adage that "blood will tell." Blessed is the union responsible for the Rice posterity. Kauai, to its eternal credit, has at least a dozen families equally distinctive.

Believed in Work.

"Satan finds work for idle hands to do," was the text upon which she fashioned the course of her life and those about her. She kept everybody busy. With the true instinct of a pioneer woman she recognized the worth of labor. In her opinion honest toil, self-sacrifice and the doctrine summed up in the golden rule was the road to attainment. She was mother to all. To her came the lame, the halt and the blind; the rich and poor, when in extremes, certain that Mother Rice would not turn a deaf ear, nor withhold counsel. When the telephone came to Kauai she turned it into a voice and an ear to widen the scope of her action. Possessing a Napoleonic passion for detail, an insatiate yearning for particulars, minor and major, always with the single idea of serving others, she became an impelling force among the people.

Her purse, her heart and her mind, always open to the needs of others, seemed never to be drained to emptiness. She founded schools, libraries, hospitals, playgrounds, kindergartens, when and where needed. She discovered before it was too late every weak link in the moral and economic fabric of the island, coming to the rescue without waiting to be called.

In her later years, stricken by blindness, Mother Rice, accorded the franking privilege over all lines of communication throughout the islands, telephone, telegraph, radio, with every inhabitant a willing messenger, subject to her beck and call, directed the movements of an army trained and anxious to take orders for the common good.

A birth or death occurring on Kauai at any hour of the day or night was first recorded in the ear of Mother Rice, who at once related the news, good or bad, over the grape-vine system where she sat in control.

Floyd Gibbons Adventurers' Club Hello Everybody!

"The Death That Saved"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Famous Headline Hunter

"HANGING by the neck," as it's spoken of in the law books, is generally considered fatal. In fact, the only man I ever heard of who was hanged by the neck to save his life is Harry J. Perry of New York City. It just goes to show how a difference in circumstance will change the whole picture for you. For most people hanging is tough luck. But Harry is not only alive and kicking, but a Distinguished Adventurer.

A lot of people out front are clamoring to know what Harry was hanged for. Well, I'll tell you—it was this way. Harry was hanged for being accommodating. It was about the middle of February, 1915, and the city of Boston was just getting over a bad snowstorm. A freezing spell had followed the storm, turning the snow to ice. It collected on the streets and on the housetops. Big icicles hung down from the roofs, threatening to fall on the crowded sidewalks below. And before that cold snap was over, there were icicles on Harry Perry's heart that threatened to fall down and punch holes in the soles of his shoes.

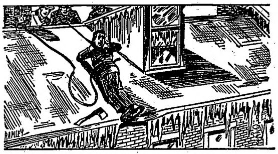
Harry was living in Boston in those days, and working in a store on Boylston street. The store roof, like a lot of other roofs in the neighborhood, was fringed with icicles a foot long. They had to be cut down before they fell and hurt somebody, but when the foreman suggested it to the handymen, none of them wanted to do it. "That slanted slate roof is coated with ice," they told him, "and it's so slippery that it would be suicide to try and get out on it."

The foreman was disgusted. He called the handymen a bunch of sissies, and he went through the store telling the world that if they'd give him just one man with nerve enough to try it, he'd go up there and do it himself.

"So I decided to be the little tin hero," says Harry, "and volunteered for the job."

Wished He Had Been Less Hasty in Taking Job.

Harry says he was young in those days. He didn't know much about roofs, and he didn't realize the danger until he got up there. Then he took a look at the prospect and wished he hadn't been so hasty. He was eight stories up, on the ridge of a roof that was steeply slanted. It fell away on both sides of him, a smooth, slippery sheet of ice, with nothing to get a hold on, and nothing at the edge of the roof but an ice-filled gutter. That was what he was going to have to stand on while he chopped away those big, thick icicles.



So He Strung the Noose Around His Neck.

The foreman had a rope with him, to lower Harry down to the roof's edge. He looked around for something to snub it on and found nothing but the chimney. The chimney was square, with sharp corners, and he knew the rope wouldn't slide around it very easily, but there was nothing else in sight, so the chimney it had to be. He looped the rope around it and began lowering Harry toward the edge.

The rope was hard to maneuver. It stuck and jammed against the sharp corners of the chimney. It let Harry down in a series of short jerks that scared the life out of him. The ice was so slippery that nearly all Harry's weight was on the rope—and that rope wasn't a new one, either. In fact, it was pretty old. Harry began to wonder if it wasn't going to break, and as he did, beads of perspiration began popping out on his forehead—beads of perspiration that froze before Harry could wipe them off. By the time he reached the edge of the roof he was trembling like a leaf. But the worst was yet to come!

All at Once Things Began to Go Wrong.

The gutter was full of ice, and Harry couldn't depend on that rope to hold him if he ever slipped over the edge. He chopped out a place to rest his foot and, standing on the gutter, began to cut away icicles. Then everything went wrong all at once. Suddenly he felt the gutter crack under him and drew back. But no sooner had he shifted his weight to the rope than he heard the foreman's warning cry: "Don't move, Harry. Don't move till we get another rope! THE EDGE OF THE CHIMNEY'S ALMOST CUT THIS ONE THROUGH!"

Harry looked up at the foreman. "His face," he says, "was deathly white. I looked down at the ground, eight stories below. Then I realized what a fix I was in. My senses were becoming paralyzed, and I felt as if I couldn't support myself any longer. The leg braced against the gutter began to get numb. The rotten gutter itself would slip from under me at the least pressure. I could see the old rope now—badly frayed and holding by only a few strands. I never felt so weak in my life. I wanted to move and relieve my numb leg, but I didn't have the strength.

"I began to hear voices below me. A crowd had collected in the street. I had been persiring freely, and now my underwear felt as if it were coated with ice. I felt some slight jars as the strands of the rope broke one after another, and I could see the foreman, sick to his stomach now, and his face green. My nose began to bleed, and the blood froze as fast as it came out. But at last the boys arrived with another rope. They made a noose and slid it to me."

But still the worst moment hadn't arrived.

Too Frightened to Put Rope Around His Waist.

They yelled to Harry to put the rope around his waist, but he was too weak and too frightened. If he moved that much, he knew, the old rope and the gutter would break and he'd go hurtling to the street below. So he strung that noose AROUND HIS NECK. And then, with his two hands he did his best to relieve the pressure while they hauled him, choking, to the ridge.

Harry says no torture could ever be worse than that trip up the side of the roof. He says he'd rather be shot than go through it again. They got him up safely, but he was more dead than alive when he arrived. And volunteer for any more heroic stunts? Harry will be hanged if he does.

Vowel Sounds

Prof. R. G. Kent, secretary of the Linguistic Society of America, says: "All languages have vowel sounds. Some forms of writing do not indicate the vowel sounds, but in actual speech the vowels are necessary to support the consonants. The Egyptian hieroglyphics did not indicate the vowels; and neither did the written form of Hebrew until the invention of the so-called masoretic points. The relation of speech to writing is a very complex one which cannot be answered in a few sentences."

Everyone Can Be Hypnotized

Practically everyone can be hypnotized, although some succumb much more readily than others, states a writer in the Los Angeles Times. Because a person can be easily hypnotized does not imply that he is of low mentality, or has a weak will. Instead, he seems to have the ability to fix, to concentrate the attention upon a particular point. "Scatter-brained" persons, those whose minds are continually wandering, or jumping from one problem to another, are usually hard to hypnotize

Here's Early Slant on Major Eastern Grid Alma Momsies

YOUR scribe may as well put his neck out among the celebrated gentlemen who boast how they can handicap a most humanly erratic sport with prim statistics. Herewith is the dope concerning the 1936 prospects of the East's leading gridiron alma momsies.

YALE—After two years of probation Bob Beckwith is back at center and the line seems likely to be the strongest since Pond and Neale took over the coaching assignment. Bob Train will be missed at end but, if Scott passes his exams and teams up with Wright at tackle, they'll make a strong combination.

HARVARD — Fair enough line, especially at the tackles, where Gaffney and Kerkovian perform. Offense seems woefully weak, though, and, unless some sophomore back surprises, Prof. Harlow may need to call out some of those marines who used to perform for him at Western Maryland.

PRINCETON—When Gil Lea, last and greatest of the football Leas, graduated in June, Princeton took stock and found three other first-string ends also were missing. This is the only spot causing Coach Crisler much concern now and the Sophs insist he really has nothing to worry about. Charley Toll, who may go down in Nassau history as another such tackle as Ceppi, Barfield, Keck, Cooney, Hart, Hillebrand, Biffey Lea and Hector Cowan, is the one to watch in the line. Although there is no fullback quite as good as the departed Pepper Constable, Chick Kaufman and Ken Sandbach are dashing ball-carriers and it is difficult for neutrals to believe the Tigers will not be as good as last year.

Fritz Crisler

PENN—Veteran, mostly seniors, team which should be one of the best but which probably will encounter the customary Penn political reverses. Gisburne is the key tackle.

COLUMBIA—Far better than last fall. Sid Luckman, triple-threat back, and Art Radvilas, a fine end, are the best of some unusually strong sophs, while Tackle Bateman is the ace of the line.

DARTMOUTH—Weak at guards and none too sure Mutt Ray will recover sufficiently to resume starring at center. Hollingsworth, late 1935 discovery, may star as a triple threat along with several other fleet backs.

CORNELL—Several teams will find the Big Red tough to take but Cornell is at least a year away from what old grads hoped for when they hired Coach Snavely. Very good sophomores and Captain Jack Batten, already celebrated as a defensive star, may be the season's best kicker.

FORDHAM—Spies insist Jimmy Crowley is working with numerous rugged and powerful candidates, but that the Rams are by no means as strong as touted. There may be some trouble filling the tackle gaps left by Sarno and Sabo.

MANHATTAN—Line is certainly big and fast and probably dumb. Tuckey could be the best fullback in the East. Chick Meehan is optimistic as usual and he may be right about several of those surprises he promises to spring.

N. Y. U.—Not as strong as last year and definitely misses the kicking and passing of Big Ed Smith.

PITT—A fine big bunch of boys with just one weakness, the lack of a Nick Klisky at center. Jock Sutherland, ordinarily very good at developing pivots, now is working on that problem.

ARMY—Gar Davidson says the Cadets are big and strong with more reserves than last year but that they lack speed. Monk Meyer, of course, is the pigskin toting star and Bob Kasper seems to be doing all right, so far, at the difficult job of replacing Quarterback Grohs.

NAVY—Another possible dark horse inspired by the revenge motif. Still sore over that first half runaway last December, and even now more concerned with the Army contest than with early season affairs. Whisperers confide that so far it shapes up as one of the weaker Middy teams.

HOLY CROSS—Big, strong and fast with a nice smattering of sophs headed by Hank Ouellette, former Haverhill high star. This crack ball carrier may shove Rex Kidd, ace pilot for the past two seasons, right out of the lineup.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

FOLKS are mumbling about the way the Yankees are handling their World Series ticket sale . . . Babe Ruth says his only batting practice this year came when he swung at an indoor baseball. He missed on the first three cuts and broke the bat when he finally connected . . . Is a celebrated sports hero, rather new to the turf and reported to be winning and losing vast sums at the tracks, really betting for one of the best educated books? . . . Adolfo Luque, the very able coach of the Giants is one of the most accomplished rhumba dancers of the generation . . . Cards and Dodgers picked Fred Fitzsimmons to give Carl Hubbell the most pitching help in the World Series. They say the big fellow is almost as fast as he was five years ago.

What celebrated college is squawking about letting its basketball team add to the Garden profits this winter? The reason seems to be that the front for the Garden's court activities is too closely and actively connected with a track bookmaking minor politician . . . Tom Laird, the celebrated sports editor who flew in from California a day or two ago, says that Joe Marty, latest high - priced Pacific Coast league sensation, is by no means a DiMaggio. Dan Morgan, who used to manage him, says that Trainer Bill Schaefer of the Giants was the best gymnasium fighter he ever saw . . . Frankie Frisch's legs are black and blue from hip to ankle due to the beatings he took while attempting to rally the Cards by personal appearances at second base.

If it is true what they say about Dixie, Georgia will have the best football team down that way this season. Spec Towns, the Olympic hurdling ace who plays end, and Tommy Haygood, 200-pound junior tackle, are the keymen of a really great line . . . Also you might keep an eye on Gintoff, Boston college's 197-pound sophomore. When Gil Dobie gets a back that big and fast he usually goes places.

Lefty O'Doul, the former Yankee, Dodger and Giant, who now manages the San Francisco club, will witness the World Series . . . If New York state racing officials ever get time to wander from the betting ring into the paddock they might notice something which could be changed to the benefit of unwary taxpayers. Under the present layout sharpshooters have too much access, or, at least, ways of getting in touch with jockeys at local tracks . . . Watty Clarke says that Leo Durocher, once a woeful hitter, now drives a ball back at a pitcher harder than any other National league batter.

Lefty O'Doul

Olympic Stars May Turn Pro If Real Money Goes on Line

If some of those babbling promoters lay some real money on the line a flock of track stars immediately will turn pro. Several Olympic stars admit frankly that they are much interested in open meets but do not wish to lose their amateur standing until they are guaranteed a better proposition . . . Frank Graham, the famous sports columnist, started writing baseball twenty years ago. In his first week he saw Jim Lavender pitch a no-hit game for the Cubs against the Giants and watched Bancroft and Stock make a triple play (it really could have been completed by Bancroft alone) in a Philly-Giant contest . . . Bill Farnsworth and Toney Betts, the eminent sports writers, were sending it in in such huge chunks that Aqueduct clubhouse bookies had the jitters while paying off recently . . . Doc Morris, the famous fight publicist, has been picked as press agent for the Rev. (Share the Wealth) Smith who soon will speak at the New York Hippodrome.

Coach Clair Bee says his Long Island U. quintet, undefeated last year, will be very good again this winter but that it is a senior combination and will lose three or four games . . . Dutch Bergman, Catholic U. coach, has prepared a book called "Fifty Football Plays," . . . International leaguers say that McCarthy and Koy of the Newark Bears were almost ruined by the night baseball played on the Yankee farm this summer . . . The Yankees made 26 home runs off Philadelphia pitchers this season . . . Wade Killefer of Indianapolis and Donie Bush of Minneapolis manage their ball clubs without signing contracts . . . Harold Lloyd of the movies owns a private golf course . . . Billy Sullivan, Cleveland catcher, returns to his job as salesman for a Chicago tailoring company after the baseball season.

Don Budge uses the heaviest racket in tennis . . . It weighs 15¼ ounces . . . Ellsworth Vines uses a 13½ ounce racket . . . Southern California has a Japanese quarter back on its freshman football squad. University of Texas is not issuing No. 33 on its football jerseys . . . That was the number worn by Bohn Hilliard, who scored the touchdown that beat Notre Dame in 1934 . . . "Whenever a back comes along who shows he is worthy to wear it, we'll let him have the jersey," Coach Jack Chevigny told his squad, "but until then the number is in the trophy room."

Tired Shark

Of all the articles that have been found upon and imbedded in fishes, one of the most unusual was an automobile tire which encircled the body of a shark discovered floundering on the coast of Cuba near Havana. Owing to its extreme fatigue from trying to free itself of this tight and cutting encumbrance, the shark was easily lassoed and dragged ashore by two boys.—Collier's Weekly.

POULTRY

PULLETS REQUIRE EARLY ATTENTION

Time to Select Layers and Move Off Range.

By C. M. Ferguson, Poultry Specialist, Ohio State University.—WNU Service.

With approach of the time of year for moving pullets in off of range to laying houses fall management practices have been found to give satisfaction.

Let the first group to be moved in include those pullets which are most advanced, are showing considerable comb development and are about ready to begin laying. Of the pullets left on range, it will become evident in a couple of weeks that possibly half of them are then also ready to be moved in.

That will leave on range only the slower maturing, less thrifty pullets, which without competition from the stronger, thriftier pullets will generally show a surprising development. In this last group there will be pullets not making a satisfactory growth, which pullets it is usually good economy to finish off for the market.

If the pullets are to be used in the second year as breeders, different colored leg bands put on as they are brought in off of range will be of considerable value in selecting the earlier maturing birds as breeders.

Most farm poultrymen realize the importance of thoroughly cleaning and disinfecting their poultry houses against red mite infestation before moving the pullets in from range. If any body lice are found on the pullets, sodium fluoride sprinkled well into the pullet's feathers will kill the lice. Or nicotine sulfate applied to the roosts late in the afternoon will give off fumes, which will exterminate the lice while the pullets are roosting.

Good ventilation, without too much draft on real cool nights is especially important for a few weeks after the pullets are housed in off range. In this connection, insulated houses are much cooler in the summer and also much warmer in the winter. Elaborate insulation is not necessary. Straw lofts will often provide sufficient insulation at very low cost.

It is always wise to have the pullets switched over to their complete laying rations before they are brought in from the range.

Have House Ready as Pullets Begin to Lay

The ideal place for the pullets is out on range—preferably in range shelters. It is possible to keep the pullets on range too long. If over 10 per cent are laying they should be taken to the laying house. This is especially true if the other pullets commence to redden up.

With early-hatched birds, properly fed, there comes a time when they have to lay. In that case prepare for them. The laying house should be cleaned and disinfected. There should be clean litter. Have plenty of feed hoppers and it helps if they are similar to the type the pullets are used to eating from while on range. Be careful to have all the nests, droppings boards and roosts fixed. The windows, ventilators, etc., should be fixed before moving the pullets into their new quarters. Move the pullets as quietly as possible.

Many bloody eggs are caused because of undue excitement and rough handling. If one has considerable room and a large flock of pullets he should place similar pullets together. If all the pullets in one house mature about the same time they can all be handled alike. Pullets should be sorted.—Indiana Farmer's Guide.

Strain on Hens

It takes vigorous birds to stand the strains of high egg production, says Dr. W. A. Hagan of New York State Veterinary college, who states: "A 200-egg hen, for instance, produces at least five times her own weight in eggs in a single year, and this is perhaps ten times as much as she would produce without domestication."

Grain Ration for Poultry

Higher egg production is secured by feeding only a small amount of grain in the morning and the remainder at night. The morning feed should be in clean litter about four to six inches deep. There is a growing tendency among poultrymen to make the afternoon feeding in troughs and this is a good practice, especially where infectious diseases or internal parasites are present. A flock of 100 hens will ordinarily consume 10 to 12 pounds of grain a day.

Cleanliness Important

Regardless of how it is done, removal of droppings and floor litter from the poultry house is the biggest cleaning problem. Yet this operation can be made time-saving, says the Farm Journal. To insure easier cleaning, have the right tools—a regular scraper for droppings and a straight shanked hoe for cleaning and scraping the floor. Droppings boards and floor (wood or concrete) ought to be kept well soaked with oil.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Praising California.

VERNALIS, CALIF. — They used to say that California flowers had no real smell, and that California birds had no song—and that's a lie because the resident mocking bird feels it his Christian duty to get right under my bedroom window and sing all night—and that California grown foods had no flavor.

Irvin S. Cobb

It's true California still produces one pear which suggests a low grade of damp cotton batting, and one variety of fig which could pass for library paste, and a certain tropical pawpaw which makes you think you've been licking postage stamps. And there's a special breed of mushrooms which is about the size of a derby hat and tastes like one.

But we can grow apricots and cherries and nectarines and peaches as toothsome as you'd ask for; and noble berries and luscious prunes and delectable grapes; and, on this great ranch, about the finest melons I ever ate. There's likewise a red onion which has a taste all right—eat it raw and you taste it for days and days.

And if you think our flowers don't smell enough, try our politics.

Troubles of a Pioneer.

LIFE in these parts is just one thing after another, and sometimes it's several things after another, all at once—such as the rush of the autograph collectors upon a poor, shy movie star, or the yelping onslaught of our estate beagles when a visiting nobleman incautiously intimates that he might sell his trailer and buy a lot.

But complications also pile up for a life-long resident who has been here, as I have, nearly two years now and so is qualified to join the Early Pioneers' California society. Here I go and take on a radio program—and I did so hope to fly east to see what Mrs. Harrison Williams will be wearing this fall. At times the temptation just to drop everything and start has been well-nigh overpowering.

* * *

Reducing Motor Accidents.

WE'RE great people at starting something, but, just then, along comes a new crusade or a new movement or a new style in divided skirts and we trail off after that, forgetting the issue which had seemed so passionately important.

Last January we were all enlisting to make 1936 a safer year on the highroad. With the year nearly three-fourths gone, what have we done to reduce the appalling mortality? And what are we going to do before all of us, except the idiots and drunkards, who are supposed to be the special ward of providence, have been mowed down?

I'm reminded of the colored man in Mississippi who was convicted of murder, and his lawyer forgot to file an appeal, and finally the condemned man sat down and wrote this letter: "Dear Guvnor: Please, suh, I is on the middle of a purticular fix and onlessen you do somethin' right away, they hang me Friday—here 'tis Wednesday already!"

* * *

Saving Your Teeth.

THOUGH thy teeth be but stately ruins, with English ivy growing all over them and bullbats nesting in the hollows, fight off for as long as possible those who think the root of all evil is the bottom of your remaining bicuspid. Don't let 'em be too fast about photographing your jaw either.

No man ever yet had an X-ray picture that flattered him. Particularly is that true when it's an interior view of the human face.

Because, the next thing you know, a gentleman in a white smock is testing some forceps and saying, "This may hurt—just a little." And then the next thing after that, your uppers are as false as Judas.

I did so and the result is that, no matter what else is on the menu, I go in for the Cobb pink plate special. A fellow does get tired of having everything he eats taste like rubber.

Sea Horse Is a Fish

The sea horse is a fish, but a very strange kind of fish. It spends almost all the time in an upright position, with its head up and its tail down. With the tail it can do something which the common fish can't do. It can cling to a weed. A sea horse swims while in upright position. A fin on the back is moved to give forward motion, and this fin has been compared to a propeller. It does not look or turn just like a propeller, but it gives about the same result. An air sac, or "swim bladder," helps the sea horse keep in balance. Most of the time, however, the fish holds tightly to a seaweed, wrapping its tail around in spiral fashion.

Attractive Cakes to Serve at Parties, and How to Make Them

Recipes for Old-Fashioned Sponge, Queen and Mocha Cakes.

The season for parties and entertainments is now in full swing, and delectable dishes are wanted on menus. Chief among these are cakes, so here are some recipes to help the hostesses.

Old-Time Sponge Cake.

1 cup flour
1 cup of granulated sugar
5 eggs
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon lemon extract
A dash of salt

Add sugar a little at a time to the well-beaten whites of the eggs. Beat yolks separately and add to above. Sift the flour twice after adding the salt and baking powder. Mix this lightly with first mixture. Add flavoring. Pour into square pan and bake in a moderate oven 350 degrees.

Hints.

Lemon is a flavoring particularly well suited to sponge cake. Do not remove cake from pan until cold, but let it cool in inverted pan, as this prevents shrinkage and makes cake easier to remove.

Queen Cake.

¾ cup butter
1¼ cups sugar
¾ cup milk
4 eggs
1¾ cups flour
8 level teaspoons baking powder
⅛ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon almond extract

Cream the butter and then add the sugar gradually, the milk, almond extract and well beaten eggs. Beat flour into cake, when flour has been sifted twice after salt and baking powder have been added. One-half cup of candied or maraschino cherries cut into pieces supplies an attractive note of color to cake. If used, add the last thing.

Fancy Cakes From Either Batter. Cut cakes into diamonds, finger strips, and squares. Frost with different colored icings or chocolate frosting, letting the icing cover sides as well as top of pieces. Dot tops with bits of cherries, halves of English walnuts, or blanched almonds, pistachio nuts, tiny triangles of candied citron, etc. Sprinkle some tops with coconut shreds.

Layer Cakes.

Either kind of cake can be made into chocolate layer cake, or any preferred layer cake. Ornament the tops with any of the things suggested for small cakes. The batter of the above cakes is so good that no frosting is needed, although it is decorative.

Individual Mocha Cakes.

⅓ can sweetened condensed milk (caramelized)
¼ cup hot coffee
½ cup walnut meats, finely chopped
24 large chocolate wafers
½ cup whipped cream

Blend caramelized sweetened condensed milk and hot coffee, beating until smooth. Chop walnut meats and add. Spread prepared mixture on chocolate wafers. Pile four wafers on top of each other for each individual portion. Chill in refrigerator three hours or longer. Garnish with whipped cream if desired. Serves six.

Truth Telling

TRUTH telling is an achievement, a mark of strong mind and character. It requires accurate observation of facts, a reliable memory, a sense of justice towards others, and courage to tell the truth to our own hurt. So often lying is due to sheer cowardice. The fight is harder for some than for others, but those who start the day praying to the god of truth to make them honest discover that more and more they succeed in "putting away lying."

You can build no tomorrow without today's foundation.

Household Questions

Sour milk beaten into mayonnaise dressing gives it a delicious flavor.

* * *

When buying fish see that the eyes are not sunken in and dull. A fresh fish has clear eyes and the flesh is firm to the touch.

* * *

Drain all juices from fresh or canned fruits, store in ice box and use for fruit cocktails or sherbets.

* * *

In the fall pack plenty of oak leaves around the roots of acid soil plants, such as daphnes, azaleas and rhododendrons. These leaves rot and make an excellent fertilizer. They may be mixed with the soil in the spring.

* * *

Hard cooked eggs, sliced, are made a tasty dish when added to a thickened tomato sauce and the whole sprinkled with cheese and baked 20 minutes. This is good for evening refreshments or Sunday supper on a rainy night.

Marks on painted walls which have been caused by carelessly striking matches on them will disappear if rubbed first with the cut surface of a lemon, then with a clean cloth dipped in whitening. Afterward wash the surface with warm water and soap, and then quickly wipe with a clean cloth wrung out of clear water.

William J. Bryan's Famous Ode to Water

At a banquet given in his honor in Japan, Wm. J. Bryan declined wine, and using water instead, gave the following toast: "Water — the daily need of every living thing. It rises from the earth obedient to the summons of the sun and descends in showers of blessings. It gives of its beauty to the fragrant flowers. It is the alchemy that transmutes base clay into golden grain. It is the canvas on which the finger of the Infinite traces the radiant bow of promise. It is the drink that cheers and brings no sorrow with it. Jehovah looked upon it at Creation's dawn and said, 'It is good'."

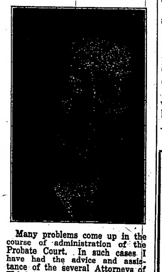
Probate Judge

OF PENNINGTON COUNTY



Many problems come up in the course of administration of the Probate Court. In such cases I have had the advice and assistance of the several Attorneys of Thief River Falls. At this, the close of my first term as Probate Judge, I stand ready to testify that no finer advisors to a new judge in office could be found anywhere. I am indebted to all of them.

It is not possible for me to make a canvass of the voters of the county. The office requires my presence during hours.

May I hope that my conduct of affairs of the office will merit the confidence of the voters of our county at the next General Election, November 3, 1936.

Very truly yours,

Proposed Amendments to the Constitution of Minnesota

To be submitted at 1936 General Election

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
LEGAL DEPARTMENT

HARRY H. PETERSON
Attorney General

St. Paul, Minnesota, April 29, 1936

Honorable Mike Holm,
Secretary of State,

Dear Sir:

In compliance with the provisions of Section 46 of Mason's Minnesota Statutes of 1927, I herewith furnish you a statement of the purpose and effect of all proposed amendments to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota which are to be submitted to the electors of said state at the general election in 1936, in accordance with certain acts adopted by the 1935 legislature.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT NO. 1.

By the adoption of Chapter 393 of the Laws of 1935 the legislature has proposed an amendment to Article 8 of the State Constitution. The proposed amendment, if adopted, will not alter the form of any existing section of the Constitution, but will add a new section to be known as Section 8 of said Article 8.

The proposed amendment reads as follows:

"Any of the public lands of the state, including lands held in trust for any purpose, may, with the approval of a commission consisting of the governor, the attorney general and the state auditor, be exchanged for lands of the United States and other privately owned lands as the legislature may provide, and the lands so acquired shall be subject to the trust, if any, to which the lands exchanged therefor were subject, and the state shall reserve all mineral and water and water power rights in lands so transferred by the state."

The Purpose and Effect of the Proposed Amendment.

The purpose and effect of this proposed amendment is to authorize the legislature to provide for exchanging any of the public lands of the state for lands of the United States and land privately owned, such exchanges to be made with the approval of a commission consisting of the governor, the attorney general and the state auditor. Such exchanges of land cannot now be made because the State Constitution does not permit the legislature to authorize the sale of school lands, state swamp lands and state internal improvement lands except by public sale. One immediate purpose in granting such authority is to make it possible for the state to acquire compact areas of land for forestry and other conservation purposes by exchanging land outside of such conservation areas for lands of the United States and privately owned lands within such areas.

The proposed amendment requires that all mineral rights, water rights and water power rights in lands so transferred by the state shall be reserved. The land so acquired will become subject to the same trust, if any, as the land disposed of. For example, if school land is given in exchange, the land received will become school land.

By the adoption of Chapter 394 of the Laws of 1935, the legislature proposed an amendment to Section 1 of Article 9 of the State Constitution.

This section now reads as follows:

"The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away. Taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, and shall be levied and collected for public purposes, but public burying grounds, public school houses, public hospitals, academies, colleges, universities, and all seminaries of learning, all churches, church property and houses of worship, institutions of purely public charity, public property used exclusively for any public purpose, shall be exempt from taxation, and there may be exempted from taxation personal property not exceeding in value $200, for each household, individual or head of a family, and household goods and farm machinery, as the legislature may determine:

"Provided, that the legislature may authorize municipal corporations to levy and collect assessments for local improvements upon property benefited thereby without regard to a cash valuation, and provided further, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect, modify or repeal any existing law providing for the taxation of the gross earnings of railroads."

If amended as proposed by the legislature, this section will read as follows:

"The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away. Taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, and shall be levied and collected for public purposes, but public burying grounds, public school houses, public hospitals, academies, colleges, universities, and all seminaries of learning, all churches, church property and houses of worship, institutions of purely public charity, and public property used exclusively for any public purpose, shall be exempt from taxation, and there may be exempted from taxation personal property not exceeding in value $200.00 for each household, individual or head of a family, and household goods and farm machinery, as the legislature may determine:

"Provided, that the legislature may authorize municipal corporations to levy and collect assessments for local improvements upon property benefited thereby without regard to a cash valuation, and provided further, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect, modify or repeal any existing law providing for the taxation of the gross earnings of railroads.

"Provided further, that after January 1, 1937, no tax shall be imposed on any real or tangible personal property for any state purpose, except that authorized by Section 16 of Article 9 of this Constitution, and/or for the payment of indebtedness of the state incurred prior to January 1, 1937; but this proviso shall not limit, but the state shall have, the right to impose taxes upon royalties, occupations, sales, receipts, incomes, inheritances, gifts, privileges, franchises, or licenses, or upon property on the basis of gross earnings or tonnage, or upon intangibles of every kind."

The Purpose and Effect of the Proposed Amendment.

The purpose and effect of the proposed amendment is to prohibit the imposition of any taxes on real or tangible personal property after January 1, 1937 for any state purpose, except as hereinafter stated, without limiting the right of the state to impose taxes upon royalties, occupations, sales, receipts, incomes, inheritances, gifts, privileges, franchises or licenses, or upon property on the basis of gross earnings or tonnage, or upon intangibles of every kind, said proposed amendment declaring that the state shall have the right to impose such taxes.

If the said amendment is adopted the state will retain the right to impose taxes on real or tangible personal property for either or both of the following purposes:

(1) To provide funds to be used to construct or improve roads and bridges in this state, as authorized by Section 16 of Article 9 of the State Constitution, for which purpose, under Section 16 of said Article 9, the legislature in its discretion is authorized to provide for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state, of not to exceed in any year one mill on all the taxable property within the state; and

(2) To raise money to pay indebtedness of the state incurred prior to January 1, 1937.

Respectfully yours,
HARRY H. PETERSON,
Attorney General.

NEWS ITEMS FROM THE LOCAL SCHOOL

The Youth Project under the sponsorship of Supt. Graham has added the volleyball meets of the business men on Thursday evenings. Harvey Nyland has been working in this program maintaining equipment and caring for materials.

The NYA has furnished two volleyballs, one for the business men and one for a group of girls over 16 years who will have a separate net in H. S. physical education.

We appreciate the aid given these community functions by the NYA.

Basketball practice was begun last Monday by Coach Nelson, with Jacobsen, Prestby and Carter in there as usual. A strong team is predicted and with the interest in basketball among the boys we will have more trying out for the squad. There is fine material coming up in the lower classes and some will find regular places this year.

New suits are to be purchased from fund accumulated in the athletic fund. The team does very well to finance basketball with no local games to fill the coffers. The community has shown loyal support in support of carnivals and other means of raising money.

ORDERS FISHING PROBE AT LAKE OF THE WOODS

The Conservation Commission last week directed Commissioner E. V. Willard of the conservation department to conduct a complete investigation of commercial fishing in Lake of the Woods.

The action was taken following reports that game fish in the lake were rapidly disappearing as a result of commercial fishing operations. The Commission plans to adopt a definite policy for Lake of the Woods on the basis of the investigation.

SNOW AT HALLOCK

Hallock is the first town in Minnesota to report having a snowfall for this fall. About a quarter inch of snow fell there Monday. Temperatures all over the northern part of the state fell to uncomfortable depths at the same time.

HALLOWE'EN SOCIAL

A necktie and Hallowe'en Social combined, will be given at Eastside School, Dist. 133J, seven and one half miles southeast of St. Hilaire, on Friday evening, October 23rd. A good program is planned, and a blanket will be given away. Ladies, please bring a necktie. Everybody welcome. Evelyn Thyren, teacher. Oct. 15-22c.

PTA MEETING SET FOR FRIDAY NIGHT

Next meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association will be held at the school assembly Friday night this week. Numbers on the program include talks on Physical Education by Mr. Floyd Nelson and Miss Haugen; singing by P. T. A. mothers or members, and instrumental numbers. Each adult member or visitor is requested to bring a pencil. Lunch will be served following the program.

ELMER HAUGEN HERE

Elmer Haugen of Pelican Rapids, Republican candidate for Congress from this district, accompanied by Martin Widsten of Bemidji, stopped in the village for a short time yesterday. The gentlemen are making a trip thru the northwestern part of the state.

HERE FROM SEATTLE

Carl Englund of Seattle, Wash., a former resident of this community, was a visitor at the Adolph Satterberg home last Sunday.

Mr. Englund, who resided at one time on the old Brevik farm southeast of here, left this section thirty years ago. Needless to say, he saw many changes while on a trip to the outlaying districts last Sunday.

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Don't forget to be present at the chicken dinner at the Norwegian Lutheran church, Friday, Oct. 16.

Rawlins Novak was winner of his choice of a new battery or tire which was given away last Friday at the Cities Service Station.

Supt. Cash Cartier of the Red River Power Co. at Red Lake Falls, and his son, Leo, were up Monday to read the electric meters for the month.

A new family from North Dakota moved into the Nohre house last week. They recently purchased the place, and will use part of it for a shoe and harness repair shop.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Giese of East Grand Forks, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hauge of Bagley, Mr. and Mrs. Karl B. Johnson and son of Lancaster spent Sunday here at the H. O. and Myles Jackson homes.

August Berglund, Harry Winter and Albert Brink motored Friday to Crookston and attended the Northwestern Minnesota Beekeepers' convention. A banquet given at the Crookston Hotel was very well attended.

At a recent meeting of the village council, it was decided to abandon the Austrailian system of balloting in village elections, and to return to the caucus system. It is believed more interest will be shown in village affairs by using the latter plan.

A new outlet is being constructed at the village well to take care of the overflow from the fire cistern, and also from the watering trough. The old outlet has given trouble in recent years, and it is expected the new arrangement will remedy that defect.

Billy Holmes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Holmes, underwent an operation last week at the Bethesda hospital at Crookston. He withstood the operation well and is rapidly regaining his strength, and will be allowed to return home in a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Jones and family of Bemidji, visited briefly here Sunday while enroute to Thief River to spend the day with friends. Both Mr. and Mrs. Jones were residents of St. Hilaire back in sawmill days. At present Mr. Jones operates a grocery store in Bemidji.

An Odd River

The Indian river in Florida begins in the same ocean as that in which it ends, for it is a long, narrow arm of the sea running parallel with the East coast and stretching from Daytona to Fort Pierce. It is, however, not strictly a river, in spite of its name.

Melvin Nohre and family moved last week to the John Hansen residence in the southwest part of the village.

Mr. and Mrs. K. B. Johnson and son motored here Saturday from Lancaster and spent Sunday at the H. O. Jackson home.

After spending a week here, Edgar Johnson left Sunday to resume his work as principal of the village school at Lancaster.

With only a few scattered fields remaining, flax threshing is about completed in this locality. Considerable plowing also has been done.

Friends of Lee Beebe will be pleased to know he is convalescing at satisfactory rate at a Crookston hospital following his recent operation, and expects to be able to return home soon.

Anderson Bros., the road building contractors, have commenced work on regrading of the state road from the Biskey corner west to county ditch No. 1. It is expected the work will be completed in a week or ten days.

Earl Carpenter of Saco, Mont., visited here last weekend at the home of his brother, Leo. Mr. Carpenter left this part of the country about thirty years ago, and has since been engaged in sheep and stock raising in Montana.

The crew of WPA workers has been employed here this week opening sandbars in the river channel south of the old dam.

FAREWELL PARTY

Some over thirty members of the M. E. Church and Womens' Club met Thursday evening at the club rooms and tendered a farewell party to Mrs. L. E. Beebe who expects to leave soon to spend the winter months at Minneapolis. A very enjoyable evening was spent by the ladies, and Mrs. Beebe was presented a supply of linen as a token of remembrance by her friends. A delicious lunch was served at a late hour.

11 DAY DEER SEASON APPROVED IN STATE

An 11-day deer season for 16 northern Minnesota counties and parts of four others was designated by the state Conservation Commission last week. The season will be open from Nov. 15 to Nov. 25, inclusive.

Fawns are not included in the deer season and will remain protected in all counties. The deer season will be fully open in Koochiching, Lake of the Woods, Roseau, Lake, Cook, St. Louis, Beltrami, Hubbard, Cass, Clearwater, Itasca, Crow Wing, Aitkin, Kanabec, Pine and Carlton counties. Deer may be taken in Becker county, east of the Soo Line railroad; in Marshall and Kittson counties east of the old Pembina trail; and in Mille Lacs county north of the Great Northern railroad thru Milaca.

ANTI-SALES TAX LEAGUE

A county unit of the Consumers and Merchants Anti-Sales Tax League has been set up in Pennington County. W. C. Kregel, prominent St. Paul druggist, president of the state organization announces the selection of the following officers in this county organization:

THIEF RIVER GIRL ACCIDENT VICTIM

Miss Thora Bjornaraa, employed in a beauty shop at Thief River Falls, was killed Monday evening near Strandquist when the car in which she was a passenger, crashed into a ditch and overturned. Two other occupants of the car were uninjured.

Miss Bjornaraa was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bj. Bjornaraa of Trail, Minn., and had worked at Thief River the past year. She had gone to Middle River the previous week to work for a short time in a beauty shop there. She died from a fractured skull a few minutes after the accident.

DAIRYMEN AT CROOKSTON

Dairymen from all parts of the Red River Valley attended the annual convention of the Red River Valley Dairymen's Association at Crookston yesterday and today. On the program today was the Honorable J. H. Evans, deputy minister of agriculture of Manitoba. Other speakers of prominence thruout the state brot inspiring messages to the dairymen during the two days of the convention.

COURT TERM ENDS

The fall term of district court in this county, with Judge Brattland presiding, ended abruptly Monday. Following a week of hearing court cases, the petit jury reported for duty Monday and was discharged without hearing a case.

Bitsy Grant Alone Supplies Thrills to Modern Tennis

PERHAPS it is because little guys must stick together or get stuck by an unappreciative world. Anyhow the word picture that was to be painted here is all jumbled up. Every time I try to daub the paper with some pretty phrase concerning the flame-tipped racquets of such tennis genii as Helen Jacobs and Fred Perry the result somehow comes out differently. Somehow I always come up with the sharp outlines of a fighting gentleman from Georgia—Bitsy Grant.

It is a most distressing situation. After witnessing the national championship at Forest Hills, a while back, I got loaded with all sorts of other information. I know that the tall, blonde Alice Marble has enough strokes to win a title, but that she has not yet achieved the proper match temperament. I can gab with the best of the experts about Donald Budge's equipment.

Bitsy Grant

I can tip off one of those anti-perspiration companies that they have a good prospect in Perry. I can argue why the worst tournament in years brought out the best crowds. I can suggest that was because the celebrated gentleman conducting the affair introduced some new performers for a change. I know that Mrs. Molla Mallory is almost as active as a spectator as she was as a player and that she tried sitting on nine different chairs in the course of 75 minutes during one afternoon. But still there's the gent from Georgia.

I can wise up the gents who don't go to tennis matches, too, that they are missing something. That — although tennis no longer seems to turn out such excitable sisters as Mlle. Lenglen—the girls are far prettier than they were a few seasons ago.

It's Polite to Applaud Other Fellow's Error

I know that tennis still is the only sport where the polite thing to do is to applaud some unfortunate fellow's error. I suspect that if I were a linesman and one of the boys or girls tossed a point just to show what he or she thought of my bad judgment, I'd hand him or her a couple of the best where it would do the most good.

I know that Helen Jacobs wears a gold chain on her left wrist while playing and that Miss Marble is adorned with a wrist watch. If I were Miss Pedersen I would wear shorts that did not bag around my knees. If I were one of those khaki-clad stalwarts who seem to do nothing all day long save take down nets, and then put them up again, I'd come out swinging a racquet some day just to see what would happen to the frozen faces of the elect.

I know that Frankie Parker needs a long rest so that he can get in such physical shape that he no longer needs to waft over those soft serves. I know that the ball boys get paid 75 cents a match and that some of them make as high as $25 during the tournament. I suspect that nose specialists, who see the way Perry keeps his mouth open while playing, immediately begin squirming because they want to operate on that long beak for adenoids.

I—but, as has been mentioned before, such items leave me cold. Until waning strength and Big Bill Tilden finally took the play away from him, and he retired, I used to go to tennis affairs to watch a frail little guy named Bill Johnston. Tennis did not seem then—as too often since—a dead-panned comedy of manners. Instead pulses ever strummed faster while that blazing inner urge with which few humans are blessed made Little Bill's scrawny muscles perform the impossible.

Now—for all that I would not give one Dodger double-header for all the tennis of the season—I again am willing to pay to get into the park. Tennis is a game where tall, strong and rangy men ever will meet with most success and Bitsy Grant probably would have to stand on tiptoes to look Rabbit Maranville in the eyes.

Yet—but come to think of it, maybe that really is why I like to watch this tiny gee.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

NOT a soul seems to have noted that Princeton Football Professor Fritz Crisler is wearing specs for the first time this autumn . . . Could there be any McCoy to the gossip that Pie Traynor will be elevated to an office berth and Rogers Hornsby will become manager of the Pirates?

That World Series gold will be appreciated by Joe Glenn of the Yankee catching department. A little Joe is due almost any day now . . . Jack Ogden, the former Swarthmore collegian who has business-managed the Orioles so capably that Baltimore again is a good baseball town, would bear watching by big time basketball promoters. The University of Baltimore five, which he coaches during the winter, is composed mainly of New York boys and might make a very good Garden or Hippodrome attraction . . . Yale undergraduates, who were very vexed a few springs ago because Johnny Broaca (now of the Yankees) would not wear out his arm for the Alma Momsie, now have a similar peeve. His coach at Andover said that Prec Little was the best schoolboy end he had ever seen. But Prec just can't be bothered with coming out for the Eli squad.

Ball players say the real reason why that "young" Cincinnati team did so well this year is that most of the hitting, fielding and pitching was supplied by Kiki Cuyler, Ernie Lombardi, Tommy Thevenow, Babe Herman, Paul Derringer and one or two others who just missed voting for Lincoln . . . One of Giant Secretary Eddie Brannick's proudest memories is that in 1918 he won $27 from various Giants by betting he could stand on the left field foul line at Baker Bowl and throw a ball over the center field fence. The heave traveled more than 300 feet and cleared the high wall of the Philly park with plenty to spare.

Why Shakespeare Isn't Heaving Pro Passes

Bill Shakespeare

Bill Shakespeare is not heaving pro passes this year because he has too swell a job as assistant to the secretary of a railroad . . . That celebrated weekly magazine which last year fell for the bookie blarney that the pari mutuels are unbeatable should look up a citizen named Horace Paul. Whisperers have it that he would run a mile before investing a nickel in a track book. But that he reaps a fortune each season playing against the machines . . . Although his football teams do not always elate Syracuse old grads, Coach Vic Hanson is tops with the town kids. That is because he operates a children's summer camp on the lake outside the city . . . Lou Ambers believes that one reason why he performed so capably while winning the lightweight title recently is that he finally learned to relax before a bout. He used to be so restless that he would wander about town or go from movie to movie on the afternoon when he had an important bout coming up. This time he went to bed and really slept.

Luck has played a miserable trick on a Fordham youngster. The boy is the best passer on the Ram football squad but his eyes have failed so badly that he cannot pick out his targets and has even worse luck on pass defense . . . Frank Crosetti and Arndt Jorgens of the Yankees do their best to see that Mr. Rockefeller gets along all right. Each fair evening they can be found eating in style, and out of doors, in his Radio City sunken gardens . . . Cardinal First Baseman Rip Collins is one of the most diligent of autograph signers. He never refuses . . . Although he has been one of the most successful photographers of race horses for 35 years, C. C. Cook seldom bets on the ponies.

A thought that should be preserved was uttered long ago by Rudolph Spreckels, the multi-millionaire turfman and sugar king. Talking to a young bettor who had more hopes than money, he inquired "How can you expect to bring up a family on horses' noses?" . . . It is somewhat out of line with the quoted statement of Mr. Herbert Bayard Swope in a town where 2 to 5 favorites so often meet with misfortune. The racing commission chairman is quoted as saying that the races never ruined anybody.

Players say the real trouble with Babe Dahlgren, the nifty fielder who will get another chance at the Red Sox first sack next season, is not weak hitting. He thinks wrong and not often enough, they testify . . . A very pretty feud will have some more innings if Jocko Conlon is added to the American league umpiring staff next year. He and Lou Gehrig never could get along . . . If Jack Dobson, son of the Maryland coach, did not have a knee injury which probably will prevent him from playing again, Army might be displaying another All-America back.

Pampero seems to be a lucky name for Argentine ponies. Jack Nelson, who sold a big brown with that name to Winston Guest in 1931, now has a similarly lagged small chestnut he expects to peddle for plenty.

Expert Offers Hint for Soothing Snakes

Dallas, Texas. — Best method of winning a rattlesnake's friendship—if his friendship is desired—is to treat him gently and even scratch the back of his neck, Jack Raymon, Chicago herpetologist, advises.

There is nothing that annoys a rattler more than quick movements, the reptile authority said. By easy, gentle handling the snake can be made into a friend in three or four weeks.

As for the nonpoisonous snakes, they are companionable creatures, he said, and writhe contentedly in the hands of a handler after 30 minutes.

NARCOTIC DRIVE IS STARTED BY T-MEN

Custom Agency Men Will Be Reorganized.

Washington. — The Treasury department, flush with its success against rum smugglers, has now opened a drive against narcotic smugglers. To this end, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau announced that customs border patrols would be reorganized into one centrally headed unit.

The custom agency service, numbering 570 men, will be divided into four districts encompassing the nation's land and water boundaries. District chiefs will be placed under the immediate supervision of Harvery A. Benner, deputy commissioner of customs. Benner's offices are in Washington. In the past the border patrols have been under the jurisdiction of the various customs collectors in a large number of districts.

"We are going to hit narcotics smuggling as hard as we hit liquor smuggling," said Mr. Morgenthau, "particularly on the Pacific coast where it is most prevalent."

The new patrol will be divided into the following districts:

Northeast patrol, headquarters, Buffalo, N. Y., to include the present customs collection districts of Michigan, Ohio, Buffalo, Rochester, St. Lawrence, Vermont, Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Philadelphia, Maryland and Virginia.

Southeast patrol, headquarters, Jacksonville, Fla., to take in the present districts of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mobile and New Orleans.

Southwest patrol, headquarters, El Paso, Texas, to take in the districts of Sabine, Galveston, San Antonio, El Paso, Arizona, San Diego, Los Angeles, and San Francisco.

Northwest patrol headquarters, Havre, Mont., to include the districts of Oregon, Washington, Montana, Idaho, North Dakota, Duluth, Superior and Wisconsin.

Boys Menaced by Sharks; Capture One as Proof

Frisco, N. C.—Two thirteen-year-old boys related a tale of how they battled a school of maddened sharks from a rowboat, bagged one, escaped, and displayed the big fish to prove their story.

The boys, James Mitchell-Hedges, son of F. A. Mitchell-Hedges, an explorer and big game fisherman, and Raymond McHenry, set out in the shallow waters of Pamlico sound off Hatters island towing a rowboat. They waded out to a net they had set about 100 yards off shore.

One boy spied a triangular fin cutting through the water toward them. They hopped into the boat. They said the fish smashed the bow of the boat and tore the beading off the sides.

The shark left but soon came back with ten others which swam around the boat. One shark finally became enmeshed in the net. The boys rowed for shore, towing the imprisoned shark. It measured 11 feet and weighed approximately 700 pounds.

Tipsy Chipmunk Chases Fox Squirrel Up Tree

Spokane, Wash.—Deputies raiding a moonshine still on Mount Spokane found a colony of chipmunks quaffing of the dumped mash, chirruping, and chattering merrily. The officers were amazed, however, when one chipmunk broke from the party suddenly and chased a fox squirrel up a tree.

Pig Gets Jail Home

Steubenville, Ohio.—Sergt. Mat Phillips, keeper of the jail here, had a pig for an inmate. The 540-pound porker toppled from a livestock truck, and the only place the police sergeant had to keep the animal, until someone came to claim it, was in a cell.

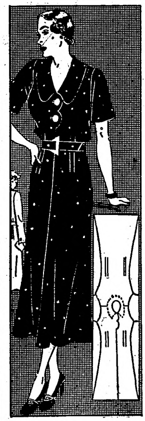
Pheasant Hitches Ride

Farmington, Conn.—Now comes the hitch-hiking pheasant. This bird hopped into George Shaw's automobile on New Park avenue and rode blithely to the next stop, much to the amusement of the family dog who had a reserved seat in front.

Opossum Has Keen Scent

The opossum's keen scent tells where to look for the kind of food it likes. This mammal, a marsupial, is numerous in some sections of the country.

Flattering Matron Frock



1841-B

This frock is the eighth wonder of the world. Just imagine only four major pieces to cut and sew and you've completed a frock that renders a becoming, chic, and flattering appearance to a size 34 or 46.

It has clever short sleeves, that can be supplanted by long ones, scalloped blouse opening and the kind of collar that echoes the admiring "ahs" of your neighbors. The dress is dart fitted at the waist and shoulders for ease and a slimming effect, while a self-fabric belt adds its contribution too. You want to own this thoroughly young style and attractive model that's as easy to make as to look at, don't you? Here's your opportunity, order this debonair model today. It's irresistible indeed.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1841-B is available for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires four and one-eighth yards with long sleeves; and three and three-fourths yards of 39 inch material with short sleeves. Price of pattern, 15 cents.

Send for the Barbara Bell Fall Pattern Book containing 100 well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send fifteen cents for your copy.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 367 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill. Patterns 15 cents each.

Fish Fills 1,000 Cans

A single sturgeon which has been caught in the Kerch Strait, the narrow strip of water connecting the Black sea with the Sea of Azov, filled nearly 1,000 cans. The sturgeon was 13 feet long and weighed 1,540 pounds. It was the biggest caught there.

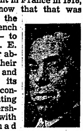
what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Lloyd George Vs. Pershing.

VERNALIS, CALIF. — That shell of a once great mentality which is David Lloyd George may be right when he says in his latest book that Gen. John Pershing "was quivering with suspicion that the British and French meant to rob him of his army."

A correspondent in France in 1918, I happen to know that that was exactly what the British and French did try to do — to break up the A. E. F.'s divisions for absorption into their own commands and thereby destroy its integrity as a consolidated fighting force, and if Pershing "quivered with suspicion" he had ample grounds for his suspicion. But he didn't quiver from any other emotions—not so as you'd notice it.



Irvin S. Cobb

After all our bragging about efficiency, we did slip in the matters of ordnance; airplanes, tanks, and, during the first few months, in transport service at the front. But there were certain elements in which we never failed — in man power and manhood and manly courage.

Uncle Sam in the Lion's Den.

EXCLUDING Britons and Scandinavians, ours remains almost the only important white race that hasn't a dictatorship or worse. And the high tide of communism laps these shores, which once we thought were insulated by time and distance against evil alien contacts.

We still stand aloof from entangling foreign alliances despite pressure from within and without, but no longer may we bar treasonable foreign propaganda — not with science making duck-ponds out of oceans. Moreover, sundry great powers work to turn out warplanes capable of spanning a sea or a continent on a single hostile dash.

Isn't it about time we realized—we, the foolish virgin amongst the nations, we who once fondly fancied this land was protected by its hemispheric isolation — that we're just about as isolated as Daniel was in the lion's den?

And Daniel had a miracle to fall back on!

Benevolence in Reverse.

BY EDICT Japan has deleted from her dictionary all mention of the "war." To the Koreans and the Chinese and the Manchurians these should indeed be tidings of great joy— to find out what's been violently happening to them was merely a benevolent brand of peace.

Even so, it's barely possible that some of the survivors of this neighborly friendship may still be like the distinguished American actor—I think it was Jack Barrymore—who went to a luncheon where the guest of honor, a notable from foreign parts, was, as the saying goes, rather chucking his weight about.

So Barrymore leaned over to a tablemate and whispered: "The gentleman seems to be something of a formidable ass, doesn't he?"

"Oh, oh, I wouldn't go so far as to say that," said the other.

"Well, at least," murmured Barrymore, "he'll do till one comes."

Great American Pests.

WHEN he's not working at his regular trade, I know now what becomes of the gentleman with the brainpan development of a Potomac shad who makes a business of sitting at the ringside and yelling to some poor dub of a pugilist, while the latter is being whipped into a custard, "Go on, kid—he can't hurt you."

To show the other side of his nature, this party attends picture theaters and hisses madly as the likeness of the opposition presidential candidate is flashed on the screen.

Statistics show that his breed already numbers nearly two millions and is constantly increasing because, owing to a regrettable oversight of nature, this species spawns close to shore and the hatch all live.

Bodily Requirements

Our bodily requirements call for very much larger quantities of air than of food or water. The average food consumption is three pounds of food per person and water consumption four pounds, while the air we breathe in the course of a day weighs thirty-four pounds. This vast amount of air we breathe contains much more than the principal constituent gases, oxygen and nitrogen. It carries germs, mineral dust, smoke, pollen, organic particles.

Fort Knox, Maine

Fort Knox is in the town of Prospect, Me., across the river from Bucksport. It was started in 1846 but was not completed until 1886. Its purpose was to protect the headwaters of the Penobscot river. During the Spanish-American war the fort was used as a training camp for soldiers. It is the property of the state of Maine, by a gift deed from the government.

FAMOUS HEADLINE HUNTER

FLOYD GIBBONS' ADVENTURERS' CLUB

Hello Everybody

"Thunder on the Track"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

"HERE'S one for you," says Edward Green of New York city. And then he unwinds the story of an experience that befell him while he was captain, first-mate, chief steward and crew of a one-man trolley car—a yarn that makes him a Distinguished Adventurer.

Now a one-man car is a gadget that was invented so there'd be something that would keep a man busier than that well known one-armed paper-hanger with the hives.

You run them with both hands and both feet like an old-fashioned parlor organ. Ed Green thought he knew what it meant to be busy, after just a few hours operating one of those cars, but he admits now he didn't have any idea of the true meaning of the word until he tried to take care of TWO OF THE CONTRAPTIONS AT THE SAME TIME.

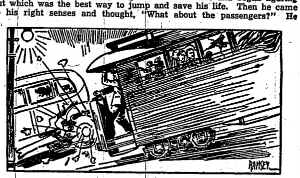
Ed was working on the night shift of the New York & Harlem Railroad company's old Fourth and Madison avenue line. It was Christmas Eve, of the year 1924. He got to the car-barn on time that night, but the man he was to relieve brought the car in late, so Ed had to hurry to make up time.

Runaway Trolley Car Threatens Death to Passengers.

He left the barn going at a pretty fast clip, got as far as Madison and Ninety-seventh street and stopped to pick up a passenger. The passenger got on and Ed shut the door with the foot lever while he made change with one hand, rang up the fare with the other and started the car going with—well—I guess it must have been his nose. Then, as the car began moving, and Ed got a spare second, he looked up—and saw something that didn't look altogether right to him.

The car was on a fairly steep grade. Farther on up that grade, at the Ninety-sixth street corner was another one-man trolley, and it was rolling back toward Ed's car at a fast clip! It was mid-winter and a nasty night. The rails were slippery, and it didn't take Ed long to figure out what had happened to that car ahead. It was out of control. Due to crash into his own car in about thirty seconds!

Ed says he forgot everything else for a minute and began figuring out which was the best way to jump and save his life. Then he came to his right senses and thought, "What about the passengers?" He might save his own life, but a whole bunch of other people would be killed if he did. No—he had to be a regular guy and stick to his post. He reached up, threw off his overhead switch, and turned to the crowd behind him. "Back to the rear of the car," he shouted. "Run for your lives. There's a runaway car heading straight for us!"



The Trolley Hit the Taxicab With a Crash.

Panic-Stricken Riders Stampede at Crash.

In a second, pandemonium was on the loose. Screaming—shoving, the passengers stampeded for the rear of the car. At that moment the crash came. The car ahead struck—with such force that it wrecked the whole front compartment of the one Ed was operating. A sheet of flame shot up between the two vehicles. In the fleeting glimpse Ed got of the crash, he saw that the other car had no motorman aboard. He had jumped for his life shortly after he had lost control.

The first car crashed—and stopped. The impact had given it a pause and given its set brakes a chance to catch hold. But at the same time Ed's car started moving. Ed had thrown off the juice when he saw the other car coming, and now, his own vehicle without any power to control it, was running away on its own.

Ed says that, through some miracle, he managed to keep his head. Something had to stop that car. He turned to the rear again and began fighting his way through the screaming, milling herd of panic-stricken passengers.

Berserk Street Car Butts Automobile Out of Its Path.

The passengers, frantic now, were breaking windows and jumping out. Those who didn't were fighting their way back down the aisle. Ed pushed through the mob to the rear platform. It was the front platform now, for the car was speeding backward down the hill. By the time he got there, the trolley was traveling at breakneck speed. He grabbed for the emergency brake—jammed it on with all his might.

He might as well have saved the effort. The car still careened ahead along the slippery tracks. Behind him, fire flared up again while the crowd screamed and broke more windows. Ahead of him was a street crowded with traffic.

A taxicab shot out ahead of him. The trolley hit it with a crash and tossed it over to the gutter. Another car got in the way and was butted away with a crumpled fender and a broken wheel. Ed says he must have hit half a dozen automobiles during that wild ride, but he was too excited to keep count of them.

Ed's Heroism Is Commended by the Big Boss.

But now the car was nearing the bottom of the hill. It was slowing down. Still blazing at the rear, it ground to a stop, and Ed began getting his passengers out.

Some of them walked out by themselves—and others had to be carried. Ed doesn't remember how many were hurt. He says there must have been plenty, for inside of ten minues there were at least a dozen ambulances on the scene. When all the injured were being taken care of, the fire put out, and the excitement all over, Ed was sitting on the step of the smouldering trolley, a disconsolate figure, wondering whether this business was going to cost him his job.

But Ed didn't have to worry about that. Later on that night, the big boss did come down to the car barn, but not to fire Ed. Instead he came to thank him personally and commend his courage for sticking to his car and thinking of his passengers at a time when the rest of them were thinking only of saving their own skins.

Indians Cruel to Dogs

The burning of a white dog was an annual religious festival of the Indian tribes of Ohio. After a pure white dog was found, his legs were tied together so that he could be hung onto a pole that stretched between two forked posts stuck in the ground. Underneath the dog was built a fire, and while the redskins yelled and danced around the primitive altar, the animal would be lowered to and then raised from the blaze. It was slowly tortured until life was gone.

Value of Guinea Pigs

The guinea pig or cavy is commonly kept as a pet, possessing the advantages of being clean, harmless and without offensive odor. From a commercial point of view, his value is for laboratory and experimental purposes. The original ancestors of the domestic guinea pig are thought to have lived in the highlands of Peru, where they were domesticated by the Incas. They were allowed to run freely about the homes of their owners and were probably bred for their food value.

Scientist-Sleuths View Indian City Visited by De Soto

Ancient Louisiana Site Was Capital of Tribes

New Orleans.—A great Indian capital in Louisiana, visited by Hernando de Soto in 1542 in his weary quest for gold, has been explored to its depths by scientific excavators.

The modern archaeologists, seeking prehistory rather than gold, have better success to report than the Spaniards had.

Digging has revealed the career of one of the largest Indian "cities" east of the Mississippi. The great mound which has been explored was once built to a height of 80 feet, making it perhaps the highest Indian mound in the South.

A number of technical reasons for believing that this site is most probably the important Indian capital of Anilco, are found by Winslow M. Walker who explored the mound for the Smithsonian institution.

Was Thriving Community.

Accounts from Spanish conquest times describe this city as having about 400 good houses, with a beautiful square in the middle. The corn fields bore abundantly, and there were good stores of beans, maize, walnuts, and dried persimmons in this and surrounding towns. The Indian chief drew up before the town with a battalion of 1,500 picked men, but when De Soto's army advanced, the barbarian horde fled without shooting an arrow.

This Indian capital is now shown to have been an old, old settlement even then. The first settlers who started the great mound carried masses of clay in skin sacks and dumped and packed down the clay to build a platform. The detective science of archaeology infers from their broken pottery that these unknown Indian pioneers were very much like the famous Mound Building Indians of the Ohio valley.

Story of Mound Building.

Their mound building was interrupted when the platform was only a few feet high, and the raised place remained a camping site, littered by ashes, charcoal, bones and broken dishes while two little pecan trees grew up to mark the passing of time.

Then, Mr. Walker found, building was resumed by these people or others. With logs and cane layers and sand, a group of mounds were raised, and the whole was finally combined into one great terraced platform with ramps.

Whether this platform mound, perhaps 45 feet high in De Soto's time, was the high place on which the temple or the chief's house stood, is not certain. Lesser heights were raised for other structures about the town. The temple is described by the Spaniards as containing bones of the chiefs of Anilco in coffin baskets, and around the building were pikes on which the heads of captured enemies were stuck.

Invisible "Keep Out" Sign Makes Roots Stay Apart

Washington.—"No trespassing" signs are written in some kind of unexplored chemical language by growing roots, to keep other roots from invading territory which they have taken for their own.

Indications of this are graphically shown in a device invented by Prof. M. A. Raines of Howard university.

Professor Raines' new method makes the root system of plants visible throughout their entire growth. Against a slightly sloping sheet of glass he lays a sheet of dark paper or other absorbent material, kept moist by a series of wicks dipped into a supply of water. The roots sprouting from seeds placed at the top edge of the sheet grow down the moist paper, and can be studied in detail.

Ancient Roman Empire Is Being Surveyed

London. — Countries of the world that once formed part of the ancient empire of Rome are now making a survey of that one-time empire.

The French have completed their survey of the frontier in Syria, says a report to the British scientific journal Nature. A great part of the survey is necessarily being carried out by airplane, as many sites are in the desert and can only be spotted from the air.

Universe Growing Larger, Belief of French Astronomer

Reckons Milky Way's Age in Billions of Years

NEW scientific evidence has been produced that the universe is expanding, thus allaying the fears of those who worry because the sun and the stars are destroying themselves by turning their masses into the radiation they emit.

This evidence is presented in an article in the Astrophysical Journal published in Chicago.

M. Henri Mineur, astronomer at the Observatory of Paris, reports calculations showing that the stars of the Milky Way, despite their age of tens of thousands of millions of years, have only radiated away about one hundredth of their mass.

Thus if one takes M. Mineur's estimate that Milky Way stars are from ten to twenty billion years old, the apparent age of the universe, before all the mass is radiated away, would be about a trillion years. Compared to the life of a man who lives to be seventy-five years old, the star galaxy which contains the earth and the Milky Way is only a baby, about nine months old, and cutting its first teeth.

Upsets Other Theories.

Significant to astronomers is M. Mineur's calculations showing that the stars in the Milky Way must have been formed in the beginning with almost the same mass which they have today. Present-held theories of star evolution, therefore, must go by the board if the French astronomer's calculations and the observations on which they are based are correct.

Says the French astronomer:

"The upper limit we have found for the age of the stars is so small that, in so brief a time, the great majority of the stars cannot have lost more than a hundredth part of their mass. We must therefore believe that the stars were formed with nearly the same masses as they have now, and that the difference in temperature and spectral type actually observed are due to the fact that the stellar masses were already different at the time of their formation.

Evolution Not Likely.

"An evolution of the stars such as has been generally accepted is, then, impossible. Our result is, however, in perfect agreement with the theory of the expansion of the universe.

"G. Lemaitre has suggested a hypothesis for the formation of the extragalactic nebulae based upon his theory of the expansion of the universe, according to which the age of the Milky Way would not exceed ten thousand million years."

"Eat Eggs," Doctors Advise Sufferers With Arthritis

Richmond.—"Eat eggs" is the message of five doctors of the Medical College of Virginia to people who suffer from arthritis.

Drs. J. C. Forbes, R. C. Neale, O. L. Hite, D. B. Armistead and S. L. Rucker have found that diets which contain a great deal of sulphur and little carbohydrate are beneficial to sufferers from the painful disease.

Arthritis, these doctors find, is accompanied by the presence of indole in the blood. This is a chemical produced by the decomposition of body products. It has long been known to be deleterious.

Value of Sulphur.

To remove this indole the body needs sulphur. The Virginia doctors therefore feed their arthritis patients on diets which have such sulphur, such as is found in meat and eggs. To aid in preventing indole production in the body only very little carbohydrate is fed. Such foods as potatoes and rice are entirely eliminated from the diet.

The results of this diet, the doctors find, are promising. In one case the patient was kept on an ordinary diet for a month. There was a good deal of indole in his blood, and he suffered considerably.

After a month on the special diet there were only traces of indole in his blood, and he felt stronger, suffered less. At the end of another month there was no indole in the blood, and the patient was considerably improved.

Lapland Revealed as Warm in Stone Age

Stockholm.—More than 30 settlements of human beings dating from the Stone Age, or about the year 3000 B. C., have been unearthed in Swedish Lapland by Kurt Tinnberg, Stockholm, archeologist.

In a few months he has gathered some 3,000 flint tools, weapons, and utensils, said to be the most northerly ever found in Sweden.

Disproportionate Votes

One of the executives of King Features, who is putting out a new voting test called the Crossley Poll, explains the apportionment variation in election returns in the following language: "Each voter in Nevada counts more than 16 times as much in deciding who shall be the next President as the individual voter in the state of New York. Nevada has only 23,000 families, yet it has three electoral votes; while New York, with 138 times as many families, has but 47 electoral votes. A similar disproportion runs through the entire list of states."—Washington Star.

If You're Told to "Alkalize"

Try This Remarkable "Phillips" Way Thousands are Adopting

On every side today people are being urged to alkalize their stomach. And thus ease symptoms of "acid indigestion," nausea and stomach upsets.

To gain quick alkalization, just do this: Take two teaspoons of PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA 30 minutes after eating. OR — take two Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets, which have the same antacid effect.

Relief comes almost at once — usually in a few minutes. Nausea, "gas" — fullness after eating and "acid indigestion" pains leave. You feel like a new person.

Try this way. You'll be surprised at results. Get either the liquid "Phillips" or the remarkable, new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets. Delightful to take and easy to carry with you. Only 25¢ a box at all drug stores.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Why Laxatives Fail In Stubborn Constipation

Twelve to 24 hours is too long to wait when relief from clogged bowels and constipation is needed, for then enormous quantities of bacteria accumulate, causing GAS, indigestion and many restless, sleepless nights.

If you want REAL, QUICK RELIEF, take a liquid compound such as Adlerika. Adlerika contains SEVEN cathartic and carminative ingredients that act on the stomach and BOTH bowels. Most "overnight" laxatives contain one ingredient that acts on the lower bowel only.

Adlerika's DOUBLE ACTION gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old poisonous waste matter that may have caused GAS pains, sour stomach, headaches and sleepless nights for months.

Adlerika relieves stomach GAS at once and usually removes bowel congestion in less than two hours. No waiting for overnight results. This famous treatment has been recommended by many doctors and druggists for 35 years. Take Adlerika one-half hour before breakfast or one hour before bedtime and in a short while you will feel marvelously refreshed. Leading Druggists.

Salute From the New to Old in Transportation

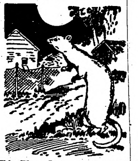
This remarkable photograph was obtained at Pendleton, Ore., as a high-speed twin-engined transport plane of United Air Lines soared over a mule-freighter bound for the Pendleton Round Up. The plane, with its 1100 "horses," has a top speed of 202 miles an hour; the freighter, pulled by 12 mules, does well to cover four miles an hour. Planes operating between the Pacific Northwest, Midwest, and East follow the old historic Oregon Trail formerly used by covered wagons, stage-coaches and freighters.

BEDTIME STORY by Thornton W. Burgess

BILLY MINK POSSESSES THE WANDERING FOOT

WHEN a person becomes uneasy and cannot settle in one place for any length of time, but wants to keep traveling, he is said to be possessed of the wandering foot. This means that he wants to wander about in search of new scenes and new adventures. To put it very plainly, he becomes a sort of tramp.

You remember that when Billy Mink discovered the traps along the Laughing Brook he decided that he would go visiting for a while. For some time he had felt a desire to go visiting. These traps gave him a real excuse for so doing. So Billy had turned his back on the Laughing Brook and started for another brook some distance away. He had not intended to go farther than this brook. But when he got there he found that the fishing was not as good as he had hoped it would be, so he decided to keep on moving until he found a place where food was plentiful, and he would be contented for a while.



"This Place Looks Good To Me," Said Billy.

Now, while Billy Mink is a great lover of the water and is almost as much at home in it as Jerry Muskrat, he is equally at home on land. In fact, Billy often wanders long distances from water. He believes in variety and there are times when he would rather hunt than fish. He is a very good hunter, as many a mouse and bird has found out too late.

So, leaving the brook where the fishing was poor, Billy started off across country for nowhere in particular. He is one of the most independent of all the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows. He never worries over where the next meal is coming from. He feels quite capable of taking care of himself wherever he may be. No one understands the art of hiding any better than does Billy Mink. He is quick as a flash, and the way he can disappear when apparently there is nothing to hide under is astonishing.

So Billy wandered about aimlessly just having a good time. He traveled mostly at night, though occasionally he became restless during the day and continued his journey then. In the Green Forest he hunted wood mice and grouse. In the open meadow land he hunted meadow mice. When he came to a brook he went fishing. So, at last, his wanderings brought him to a farmyard. There was a big barn there. Also there was a henhouse containing many hens. Between the henhouse and the barn was a big woodpile. At the sight of that woodpile Billy grinned. That was just the sort of a place he liked. You know he is so slim that he can slip through very small places, and he would be quite safe.

"This place looks good to me," said Billy, "I think I'll stay a while."

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

WHEN buying meat see that it it is of good color and well mottled with fat.

A fresh fish will be bright of eye and firm of flesh with the odor sweet.

Use nuts in a loaf to take the place of meat. They are highly nourishing and are fine for all sorts of dishes.

If you have a neighbor who is using cake at about the same rate that your family does, why not exchange halves of cakes as two neighborly women do. Thus having a fresh half of cake with no work and no leftover to disturb the conscience.

When making mush for supper, prepare enough for frying for breakfast; everybody likes fried mush with sirup. Pour the hot mush into greased baking powder cans, kept for the purpose. When cold it slices without waste or crumbling.

When food scorches while cooking, set the dish in another of cold water—the steam rising from the food will dissipate the scorched flavor if it is not really burned.

To remove burned food from a dish without scratching, add soda to cold water and simmer until the food is softened.

Aluminum dishes which have been scraped will always have rough spots to catch food and cause burning. They should be rebuffed or they will always burn easily.

Lettuce, endive and such crisp green foods should be served at once after the dressing is added as they wilt readily. Keep lettuce well washed, in a thin bag of cheesecloth in the ice chest. It will be ready at a moment's notice to supply the salad.

With raw fruits and vegetables so popular, did you ever try using fresh young turnips cut on the coarse grater or shredder, also young uncooked beets, served on lettuce with a snappy dressing, either french or boiled? Sprinkle with fresh grated coconut, add a bit of sugar and you will have one of the prettiest of salads and it will taste very good, too.

THE UPWARD LOOK

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

SEEING the rose, I saw a vine
About a mighty trunk entwine,
And found the trunk to be a pine.

And looking up, to see how high
The tree above me, then my eye
Beheld beyond the tree the sky.

And yet we think some holy deed
Of ours the world will never heed,
So small the matter, great the need.

Yet I, who first beheld the rose,
The vine, and then the tree that grows,
Saw Heaven itself its gates unclose.

So has some little deed sufficed
To lift some soul by sin enticed,
Until it looked, and saw the Christ.

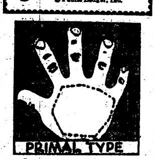
THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis

© Public Ledger, Inc.



PRIMAL TYPE

WHEN beginning an analysis of a hand to place its type, be sure to note all the characteristics which make it a distinct type. Note the general shape and conformation, whether short, thick-set, wide or narrow. Note the width of palm, the length and formation of fingers and thumb, whether they are straight, knotted or tapered. The first of the seven types of hands follows:

First. The Primal Type of Hand.

The outstanding characteristic of this type is its short, thick-set appearance. The fingers are stubby and rather clumsy looking. The thumb is extremely short, low set, heavy and often "Clubbed" on the side opposite the nail. The nail joint is often abnormally short and wide.

The palm and underside portions of fingers of this type are always heavily fleshed and when partially folded become pillowed by broad, deep creases.

One would be quite safe in placing the possessor of a hand of true primal type as one who is apt to find more satisfaction in material affairs than in the spiritual, esthetic or sentimental aspects of life.

All things being equal, a primal type of hand indicates pretty surely that the occupation chosen by its owner should be of a kind that calls for manual dexterity rather than concentration or analysis.

A stiff thumb on the primal type of hand is positive indication of a stubborn and overbearing will that is apt to have its own way without counting the costs or the feelings of others. If, however, the thumb may be bent backward with little tension, there is equally positive indication that its owner is very much inclined toward indolence, irresponsibility and extravagance.

HAIL CAUSES HEAVY LOSSES EVERY YEAR

"Ice From the Sky" Described by Authority.

New York.—That hail causes damage running into millions of dollars annually, many people may know. That it has sometimes changed the course of history, others may know. But what is hail! That few know the correct answer to this question, is safe to assert. To most people, anything that descends from the skies in icy form is hail. But is it!

"The biggest hailstone thus far on record for the United States fell at Potter, Cheyenne County, Nebraska, July 6, 1928. It was 17 inches in circumference and weighed a pound and a half," according to Charles Fitzhugh Talman, who, in "Natural History," published by the American Museum, writes about ice from the skies.

Big Ones in India.

"India is the home of big hailstorms and of big tales concerning them. Many of these storms have cost from half a dozen to a dozen human lives, one is supposed to have killed 84 people, and another is known to have killed three times that number." Mr. Talman adds that Indian hailstones assume remarkable sizes, but he does not take too seriously the report of one said to have been the size of an elephant, which took three days to melt.

"Judging from the meager data we possess concerning the maximum violence of thunderstorm updrafts, it would seem that something less than five pounds is the extreme possible weight of a hailstone, while a two-pound hailstone would deserve a place in a museum if it could be preserved there.

"A hailstorm is always confined to a relatively small area — much smaller than that of the thunderstorm of which it is an episode—though its narrow track may be hundreds of miles in length. Thus it happens that although a great many destructive hailstorms occur every year, the majority of human beings never experience one in the course of their lives.

Heavy Damage Yearly.

"According to an estimate that has become rooted in statistical literature, though it is probably much too small, hail causes throughout the world losses averaging about $200,000,000 a year. In the United States an estimate by V. N. Valgren, of the Department of Agriculture, based upon an 11 year record, indicates that the losses on the ten leading agricultural crops of this country average $47,500,000 a year."

Mr. Talman also gives an account of a great hailstorm in April, 1360, which assailed the army of Edward II, then in France attempting to take Paris, and forced him to make peace. "The chronicles of the time," says Mr. Talman, "place the English losses at 1,000 men and 6,000 horses; probably an exaggeration." In any event, Edward sued for peace and so the course of human history was changed by a hailstorm.

Big Boom Is Started in Australia Gold Fields

Sydney.—Australia again is enjoying a slight recrudescence of her early gold rush and gold finding days.

The most recent and important development has been on the famous Cape York peninsula, which was once the center of Australian gold fields. A single return there recently brought $28,000 from forty tons of stone.

Present indications are that the old fields will be worked over again, due to the increased value of gold.

In other parts of Australia nuggets of considerable value are being found. Stuart Hurnall, on his father's ranch near Ararat, Victoria, plowed up a 100 ounce nugget valued at $4,250.

It was on the same field that an 82 ounce nugget was found forty-eight years ago and only sixty feet from the present find.

Safety Rule Keeps Patrol Off Roads

Newburyport, Mass.—No matter who it hits, police have to enforce the edict that automobiles cannot be operated on Massachusetts highways without an O. K. sticker.

So Newburyport police had to keep their patrol wagon in the garage because it needed $70 worth of repairs to make its equipment safe. Mayor Andrew J. ("Bossy") Gillis did not appropriate enough money this year.

City Marshal James E. Sullivan laments that the patrol wagon is "falling to pieces"—and it has only gone 200,000 miles.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By L. L. STEVENSON

Stocks of the highest priced florists in the city and those of street peddlers who sell blooms for a few cents each both come from the same place. Of the city's 80 or so wholesale floral establishments, all save two are on Sixth avenue, or within a stone's throw of it, between Twenty-sixth and Twenty-eighth streets. Twenty-eighth street is the real floral capital of the town. On it, east and west of Sixth avenue, are 43 wholesale floral establishments, including one big market that houses 10 firms. A number, of course, are small establishments, which do both a wholesale and a retail business. Most, however, confine their attention to the wholesale trade. Some are specialists, dealing only in greenery of various sorts. On the whole, flowers in season play the biggest part in the business, though often out of season specials may be noted in the window signs.

• • •

Stocks come from all over the country, from the far South and the far West, with nearby growers in New Jersey and Pennsylvania furnishing the most. Rare blooms may be seen side by side with flowers of the gardens. There is little or no attempt at display. Flowers to the dealers are merely commodities—highly perishable, but commodities nevertheless. They are handled on commission as are onions and potatoes. Business starts at about 6 o'clock in the morning and continues briskly until 8. Friday, Saturday and Monday are the big days. In fact, at certain seasons of the year, almost all the business of the market is transacted on those days.

• • •

Time plays an important part in the flower business. It explains why there are days when roses may be purchased for five cents a dozen on New York's street. Roses that go to Park avenue in the early morning, later in the day may find their way to the subway. They are the same varieties and come from the same growers especially in summer, when roses cannot be held overnight. So those still in stock late in the day are bought by peddlers at bargain prices. Speaking of roses, learned that the well-known American Beauty is no longer grown. The reason is that it couldn't always be depended upon to flower so other long - stemmed varieties have taken its place.

• • •

Flowers come into New York now by the car and truckload. The business runs into the millions each year since New York purchases more flowers than any other city in the country. There are firms in the district, however, that go back to the days when their stocks were brought in by the basketful. In those times, the flower market was at 2 in the morning.

• • •

In many of the markets, discarded, broken or wilted blooms fairly carpet the floors. They are held not to be worth picking up and are merely swept away when business is slack enough for the opportunity. In the days of the flu epidemic during the war, that did not hold true. So great was the flower shortage then that discarded stock was gathered up and sold for at least a nickel a flower.

• • •

Eleven florists supply shops also are located in the wholesale flower district. Intricate designs for set pieces, or rather the frames for them, are available in almost unbelievable variety. For instance, it is possible to purchase a model which when properly decked out turns into an ocean liner. Floral cottages as well as floral musical instruments are also available.

Aunt Nora Figured It Out

By FLORENCE BECK

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service.

"WHY, nowadays even some divorced people remain on friendly terms after they're separated," Peggy argued as she sat next to Tom Cooper on the park bench. "And I know plenty of girls who are still good friends of the men they've been engaged to and haven't married."

"Sorry," said Tom brusquely, "but if that's the way you really feel I'm going. Good-by."

"Good-by," said Peggy. "But, Tom," she added, "you know your aunts asked me to spend a week-end with them before it gets too cold, and I accepted. I think I'll go even though we've broken our engagement."

"It's up to you," said Tom somewhat disturbed. "But if you're there you can be sure I won't be. I'll find a good excuse to get out of it."

Peggy kept her word. She went to the large old-fashioned country home of Tom's two spinster aunts both of whom were devoted to their only nephew.

After tea the first afternoon Aunt Sarah went upstairs and a few minutes later descended to the living room again with a photograph album under her arm. There were pictures and pictures of Tom. Tom on a hobby horse at the age of four, Tom before his hair was cut short, in his first sailor suit, and one with his new dog—a gift from the two aunts.

Later, in the evening, Aunt Sarah, who seemed to delight in bringing things out of Tom's to show to Peggy, produced a little silver box containing three or four of Tom's curls, carefully wrapped in tissue paper.

"I've been thinking that one of these days I'll have to let you have one of these curls, because after all you'll be his wife," said Aunt Sarah.

"Thank you, Aunt Sarah," Peggy began, "but I'm not that sentimental. And besides, I'm not going to marry your nephew. I was going to tell you earlier but somehow I didn't get around to it. We're still friends—at least I'm willing to be friendly to Tom—."

Both Aunt Sarah and Aunt Nora looked amazed. Who was this brazen girl to break an engagement with their one and only nephew! And under the circumstances why had she come to visit them?

Aunt Nora managed a smile. "Surely it's just a little quarrel that you and Tom will patch up. Well, I can understand how those things happen. We won't say anything more about it all week-end, will we Sarah?"

The next day was pleasant — a mixture of clouds and sun, a typical early fall day. Peggy wakened without a care in the world.

After breakfast she asked if either one of them would enjoy a walk. As both ladies excused themselves she started off for a stroll down the road by herself. It was grand at this time of the year in the country. "It was stupid of Tom to miss such lovely weather," she thought.

She had not gone far down the road when she heard a car coming and as she stepped as far off the road as possible she turned to see what model of car was on its way somewhere.

"Want a lift?" Before Peggy saw who was driving she recognized the voice. Yes, she could see now. It was Tom.

"Well, of all things. And what brought you here?" she said.

"Well, if you must know there were two reasons. One was a phone call and the other was my conscience. I thought things over after we parted yesterday and I decided I'd like to be reconsidered. The phone call came from Aunt Nora and she said I must come up — something terrible had happened. Of course when I arrived they told me your story. So I told them it was nonsense—pure stuff and nonsense."

"Tom," said Peggy, as she climbed into the seat beside him, "maybe it is all nonsense. But let's go back to the house. Let's get my things and speed back to the city. Then I'll try you out once more with my famous psychic powers and away from these devoted aunts of yours I'll reconsider things. They won't mind, will they?"

Tom and Peggy bid good-by to the spinster aunts. "Everything is going to be all right, Sarah. I can feel it in my bones," said Aunt Nora.

And Aunt Nora was right for before they retired that evening a messenger knocked on the front door bringing a wire for Aunt Sarah.

Aunt Nora read it over Aunt Sarah's shoulder.

"PLEASE SEND ME THAT CURL. I'LL WANT IT TO DISPLAY TO MY FRIENDS.
PEGGY."

The number of hairs upon a woman's head will vary, according to the hue and age. It has been found that while a flaxen-haired woman has from 140,000 to 150,000 hairs on her head, a black-haired woman has from 100,000 to 110,000 hairs, and a red-headed person has only about 30,000 hairs on her head.

RETURNS, FINDS SWEATER AND STOPS ONLY LONG ENOUGH TO GIVE A FEW PATS TO MUD TURT

SEARCHES YARD FOR SHOVEL, GOES OVER TO SEE IF HE LEFT IT AT BUDDY'S

BUDDY, HAVING MEANWHILE BEEN CALLED IN, HAILS HIM FROM WINDOW AND PLANS ARE MADE FOR TOMORROW

AFTER EXTENSIVE SEARCH, FINDS SHOVEL AND RETURNS HOME

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—Several years ago I expressed in these columns the conviction that one thing America needed was a congress which would cease attempting to amend the law of supply and demand. The observation was made in the midst of the most depressed economic conditions that modern times had known and it brought down upon my head a vast amount of criticism. Readers wrote me at length about the stupidity that I had displayed by making such a statement.

One Thing Needed

Reference to that circumstance is made here at this time, because it is apropos again. It is apropos because we are in a political campaign out of which will come either the re-election of Franklin D. Roosevelt or the election of Governor Landon of Kansas. The results of this political campaign are going to hinge to a considerable extent on the attitude of the farmers of this country and if there is one segment of the American economic structure to whom the law of supply and demand means more than to another, it is to the farmers.

Now, Democratic spokesmen are going about the country talking about soil conservation, about relief for the farmers, about anything and everything that will give the farmers money.

Republican spokesmen are shouting and waving their arms with other propositions to aid the farmer. Some of them probably are workable, and if they are workable they must be considered constructive.

But the point I am trying to make is that in the case of either candidate, there is still too much of the idea of the superficial, of surface help, for agriculture. In other words, the programs still take into account some circumvention of the law of supply and demand. That statement is not wholly true of Governor Landon's farm program, but unless the New Dealers come forward with more than they have thus far advanced, I think it can be said their program offers nothing more than a continued raid on the Treasury of the United States with no plans at all for correcting underlying conditions.

There was one phase of Governor Landon's program, as advanced in speeches at Des Moines, Iowa and Minneapolis, Minn. that appealed to me. Brushing aside verbiage and detail, Governor Landon basically has in mind, apparently, a desire to get the government out of the farmer's hair. He seems convinced that there are many things which the farmers would like to do for themselves and will do for themselves if the machinery upon which they can operate is made available. He proposes, for example, to seek legislation that will enable the farmers to finance themselves through borrowing from commercial agencies, banks and trust companies, instead of from the government. With that I agree to the fullest. It means simply that farmers again can be masters of their own souls as well as the crops which they grow for it, puts them in a position to sell when they want to sell, without the necessity for asking permission from a bureaucrat in Washington. It means further that no bureaucrat in Washington can issue an order to that farmer that he must dispose of his stored crop.

It seems to me as well that anyone who analyzes the present regimentation of the farmers from Washington must recognize that which has always been true: Every time the government, which means politicians, attempts to mess into private business, that private business goes from bad to worse and it does not matter how bad it was when bureaucrats took hold. It will be worse thereafter.

* * *

I have been wondering, however, how far Mr. Landon will go in encouragement of the family type farms. You will remember that he spoke at length of family type farms in his Des Moines address. Personally, I feel that he hit upon a very important point. I think it is important because it strikes at the root of the farm problem.

Hits Root of Farm Problem

In discussing help for the man who owns or wants to own a small farm, Governor Landon surely is proposing a program that will serve this nation well because no nation whose farms are widely owned by those who operate them can be headed toward fascism or communism. I do not know how the Governor as President will be able to put the federal government behind such a program, but it is to be assumed that he had definite ideas on the subject or he would not have boldly stated his position. My hope is that it can be done not with government money, but with money supplied from private institutions since there has been too much government competition with business of the nation already. Further, regretful as it is, the federal government has not and cannot have any function in that field for the reason that it inevitably leads further into politics, further into waste and the eventual destruction of the people whom the demagogues claim they are helping.

The reason I have advocated this action so strongly is the fact that there are too many tenant farmers in the United States now, far too many. It is fundamental, in my opinion, that this nation can get on with the present trend. It is sad, but it is true, that there are about forty per cent of our farms now operated by tenants. In other words, one out of less than three farms in the United States is worked by a man who does not own it.

* * *

Some information was made public the other day to the effect that 85 per cent of the newspapers of the country were supporting Governor Landon as against President Roosevelt in this campaign. I do not know the actual percentage and I do not vouch for the figures I have reported to you. But of this I am certain: I believe that Governor Landon does have more editorial support than any presidential nominee has had in the last six campaigns, with the exception of President Roosevelt as a candidate in 1932.

Press for Landon

It has been interesting to watch the various important independent newspapers as they have studied the two candidates this year and have reached conclusions as to the nominee they will support. I am not now referring to hide-bound Republican papers, nor to newspapers that could normally be expected to support the more conservative of the two candidates. I am thinking of independent or distinctly Democratic newspapers that have announced their opposition to the Roosevelt cause. Let me mention a few of them: The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, the Omaha World Herald, the Baltimore Sun, to mention only three.

* * *

There was a great newspaper, one of the greatest, that took a stand for President Roosevelt a few days ago. I refer to the New York Times. No one can ever say that the New York Times ever has failed to arrive at its conclusions without giving all factors concerned careful study. I am saying by this that the New York Times is honest and sincere. But I must say at the same time that the New York Times has a background as an institution and it has a clientele of readers for whom it speaks and its accession to the Roosevelt cause is a perfectly natural position for it to take. For years the New York Times has contended that America should participate to a greater extent in world affairs. It has contended, without exception, for policies of an internationalism with which a great many thinking people disagree. Its view, concretely, appears to be that we cannot correct depression conditions unless the United States as a nation wholeheartedly moves in the circle of governments that rule Europe and Asia, especially in matters of an economic character.

New York Times

I do not know what Governor Landon's pronouncements on foreign policy are going to be. But I have observed the policies that have had the backing of the New York Times over a number of years and it seems to me that they result in greater benefits to a limited class than to the country as a whole. I am not a rabble rouser; I do not link the New York Times with the money-changers of Wall street as the demagogues describe them. It is just the perspective that I have gained of the whole picture since I have no axes to grind.

In the case of those newspapers that have turned against Mr. Roosevelt, there is to some extent a consideration of local interests, circumstances of concern to the communities which they serve, just as in the case of the New York Times. The point is, however, that in the case of newspapers turning against Mr. Roosevelt, their new positions are predicated on what appears to me to be traditional American bases. That is to say, they are adhering to the principles which I believe to have been the foundation stones of American history. I have no quarrel with the attitude of that school of thought that believes we should engage further in international affairs than we have done. It is their conviction and they have a right to it. Yet, it is not mine.

I have said may times in these columns that I will support any proposition that is good for America as a whole; I have contended consistently for Americanism and the things which that means, and I have argued always for sound government.

Bob Davis Reveals

Annals of Kauai, the Garden Island, $1,000 in Silver.

LET me tell a tale of this fruitful and beautiful Pacific ocean jewel that harks back to the early days when land could be bought for a song and singers were in voice.

Out of the many stories called to my attention I selected one that came to me through Mr. Eric Knudsen, born in Kauai sixty odd years ago, eldest son of Valdemar Knudsen, one of the earliest settlers.

Mr. Knudsen's method of recording the dramatic past involves the use of mountains, from which he may survey the land and sea of his beloved island. Kawaikini peak, 5,170 feet above sea level and located almost in the center of Kauai, is his favorite elevation when discussing panoramic beauty.

"The spot of green a few miles off shore to the southwest," said Eric, waving a brown arm over the whole of Christendom, "is Niihau island, where my mother once lived. She was the youngest daughter of Mrs. Eliza Sinclair, who brought her whole family from New Zealand in 1863, two sons, two sons-in-law, three daughters, six grandchildren, and settled there.

"About seventy-two square miles of rich pasturage for sheep, cattle, other domestic stock and honey bees, its highest elevation rose 1,300 feet above sea level. It was like the arrival of another nation, this family from New Zealand.

Father Suggests a Way.

"However, if I am to get on with the story of how my father, Valdemar Knudsen, found a bride among the Sinclairs, you must turn your thoughts back to Niihau, small, but important in my own affairs. After taking over the property, Mrs. Sinclair discovered there a Hawaiian-born settler who had long occupied a small strip of the island and who held in fee simple a royal grant that interfered with her plans for development. She offered to buy the parcel. No, the native would not sell at any price. Both he and his wife wished to remain until death. They were cold to all proposals; a sentimental blockade, as it were.

"My father, a Norwegian who had come to Kauai in the early '50s and set up a stock ranch and orchard at Waimea, enjoyed no little distinction as one familiar and friendly with the Hawaiian people. To him Mrs. Sinclair came with her problem, authorizing the purchase of the controversial strip at whatever figure Valdemar Knudsen considered fair to all concerned. 'Give me 1,000 trade dollars,' he said, 'and leave the rest to me.'

"Upon receipt of the coin, much of which was tarnished, he devoted three full days to putting a bright polish on the sinews of war, which he loaded into a canvas bag and lugged after dark to the straw hut of the Hawaiian couple, where he was welcomed both as a visitor and an old friend.

Silver Flood Descends.

"Casting the silver burden on the center table, he mopped his brow and straightaway launched into a flood of gossip along general lines. In the midst of the babble, he opened the canvas sack and began to stack shimmering trade dollars, ten in a pile, all over the table top, commenting the while on what each tower of silver would buy in the open market.

"Under the light of a coal oil lamp, shedding its golden rays on the white metal monuments scattered about, Valdemar Knudsen, fingering the coin as he talked, described red-topped boots, brooches, bracelets, clothing, silk bodices, axes, sewing machines, bureaus, inlaid bedsteads, cooking utensils, saddles, grandfather clocks, dinner dishes and rocking chairs that could be bought and delivered at the humble domicile of the old couple, now huddled over more purchasing power than they had ever beheld in their whole lives. 'All of this for your land,' said my father. 'Yours to have and to hold; enough to last all of this life.'

Natives Won Over.

"Hypnotized, the aged couple, alternating between chilled indifference and melting acceptance, held their breath, the man battling with resistance, the woman yearning for speech. Flat upon that table, midst the piles of money, lay the canvas bag, empty of all temptation. The Hawaiian, immobile as stone, made no sign. With a quick movement, my father, encircling the hoard with his arm, began to draw the $1,000 in silver into the sack. 'Pau!' (It is ended) he said. 'No, no, Kannuka,' exclaimed the woman. 'We will sell . . . It is enough. . . . Leave the money there. Where is the paper?' Turning to her husband, she smothered him with an appeal to close the transaction. He nodded, burying his hands in the silver flood.

"Mrs. Sinclair allowed the couple to remain until they passed away. Evidently, the Norwegian's business tactics made a profound impression upon the Scotch woman, as my father became her son-in-law."

"The Man Who-o-O"

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

BY FRANK E. HAGEN AND ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE REPUBLICAN ELEPHANT

WHY is it that the Republican party, which has dominated the American government for 60 out of the 80 years it has been in existence, should be symbolized by a beast from the African jungles instead of some typical American animal? The answer is that a cartoonist once used a jungle scene to depict a political crisis and the figure of an elephant was so appropriate for what it was supposed to represent that its symbolism persisted long after the crisis itself had passed. The cartoonist was Thomas Nast of Harper's Weekly and the crisis was this:

In 1874 it seemed certain that President Grant was determined to run again in 1876. The principal opponent to the third term idea was James Gordon Bennett's Democratic newspaper, the New York Herald, which shrieked "Caesarism!" incessantly. Taking his tip how "An ass, having put on a lion's skin, roamed about the forest and amused himself by frightening all the foolish animals he met with in his wanderings," Nast drew a cartoon which he labelled "The Third Term Panic."

It showed the Herald as a donkey in a lion's skin, labelled "Caesarism," braying loudly and all the animals fleeing in alarm. The New York Tribune was represented as a giraffe, the World as an owl dropping an arithmetic book, the Times as a unicorn with a monocle. Near-by was a half-concealed fox labelled "Democratic party" but with features suggesting those of Samuel J. Tilden.

In the foreground was an elephant, labelled "The Republican Vote" on the verge of an abyss of "Chaos" barely hidden by broken planks marked "Inflation," "Repudiation," "Reform (Tammany)" and "Reconstruction." This cartoon was not only a thrust at the Herald but also a half-affectionate jab at Nast's own "huge but timorous" party, the Republicans.

Two weeks later Nast drew another cartoon showing an elephant tumbling down into the pit with the rotten planks and the rejoicing animals following it. This was called "Caught in a Trap—the Result of the Third Term Hoax." From that time on the elephant was the symbol of the Republican party.

THEY SING THE OLD SONGS

TO THE tune of "O, Susanna!" written by Stephen Foster many years ago, supporters of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas sang him into the Republican nomination at Cleveland and this banjo-tinkling tune, which cheered westward-bound emigrants in the golden "Days of '49," is being used to cheer eastward-bound (to the White House, they believe) Republican voters in the campaign "Days of '36." Will it drown out the cheerful strains of "Happy Days Are Here Again"? November 3 will answer that!

Not the least of the interest in the renewed singing of "O, Susanna!" is the few instances in which an old familiar song is revived for campaign purposes. Setting "campaign verses" to a familiar tune and using it for political purposes has always been a common practice. As far back as 1840 the Whigs sang a song in praise of Harrison to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne." In 1848, when the Free Soil party nominated Martin Van Buren, new words were written and sung to the tune of "Old Dan Tucker." The old familiar "Yankee Doodle," "Auld Lang Syne," "The Frog He Would a-Wooing Go" and "The Camptown Races" were employed as the musical setting for songs in praise of Fremont in 1856.

Considering the fact that a Spanish-American War hero was a vice presidential candidate in 1900 it was only natural that "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" should become a Republican campaign song. But it wasn't until 1920 that an old song was revived and sung in its original form in support of a presidential candidate. In that year "The Sidewalks of New York," written in 1894 by Charles B. Lawlor and James W. Blake, was played by a band at the San Francisco Democratic convention when Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York was introduced and given a great ovation. It was his "musical trademark" when he became Candidate Smith in 1924 and Nominee Smith in 1928. Will the revival of "O, Susanna!" bring better luck to Gov. Al. Landon than the revival of "Sidewalks of New York" did to Gov. Al. Smith? Again—"read the papers on November 4."

Course of Lightning

The main flash of lightning does not travel from a cloud to the earth, but in the opposite direction. The main flash is always preceded by a "leader", which acts as a sort of pathfinder or trail blazer. The "pathfinder" travels from the cloud to the earth, while the main flash starts upward from the earth at the point struck by the "leader". It follows exactly the same path back to the cloud. The length of the lightning bolt has been found to vary from 1.5 to 4.7 miles

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

★★★By VIRGINIA VALE★★★

HAVE you heard Hildegarde on the radio? You must, not merely because she is delightful in a way all her own, but because it is always interesting to watch the progress of someone who is on the way to stardom.

Not so many years ago she was playing the piano in a motion picture theater. She went abroad. First thing she knew, the Milwaukee girl was singing for royalty—King Edward VIII when he was Prince of Wales, the King of Sweden, ex-King Alfonso of Spain, the Duke and Duchess of Kent—they all helped make her one of the toasts of Europe.

Now she has come back home, and broadcasts on Tuesday evenings from ten to ten-thirty, and on Saturdays from eight to eight-thirty over N. B. C.

Marlene Dietrich couldn't wait to get off to Europe—and now she can't wait to get home! She is making a picture in England, you know, and there have been delays (it's reported that Robert Donat walked out on it, for reasons not announced at the time) and she doesn't know when she'll return. She is so sold on Hollywood that she telephoned her studio dress designer to ask his advice on the gowns she will wear in the English picture—perhaps she was afraid that the designers over there wouldn't let her wear enough feathers!

Marlene Dietrich

Well, another grand picture has come along, one of the best in years. It is "My Man Godfrey," with—Carole Lombard, William Powell, Alice Brady, Gail Patrick, Jean Dixon, Eugene Pallette and Alan Mowbray. It is almost too funny—you find yourself laughing so hard at one bit of funny dialogue that you miss the next one.

Take it from Simone Simon, who has become so tremendously popular in so short a time, her name should be pronounced "Semone Semon"—but it takes a French student to get that last syllable exactly right. She is having a grand time in Hollywood; goes out practically every night, looking even younger and cuter than she does on the screen, and gets just about everything she wants at the studio by day.

It is good news for Nelson Eddy's many admirers that his new fall series of broadcasts is under way. He began them September 27 from Hollywood, on a nation-wide Columbia network of eighty-two stations, and will continue to broadcast from there until his concert engagements take him East in January.

You can't help liking Errol Flynn. He refuses to let making pictures dominate his life, perhaps because he did so many things before he became an actor. He learned to play tennis comparatively recently, entered the Pacific Southwest Tournament — and had to play Frank Shields, but he gave a good account of himself, though he was up against a champion. When he lived in New Guinea he collected rare snakes for Dr. Raymond Ditmars. Now he collects rare insects for British museums, and his wife, Lily Damita, goes along, though she loathes bugs and doesn't particularly care for the Mojave desert, where he does his collecting.

Errol Flynn

No doubt you've heard Edwin C. Hill who comments so ably on news events. Well, he's starting something original with his new series. He will begin with a summary of the week's news, and after that, with the aid of a cast of actors, will dramatize a presentation of the story of some unknown American hero or heroine.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Buster Crabbe, after teaching Harold Lloyd's children to swim, had begun giving lessons to Shirley Temple . . . The March of Time is off the air for only a short while, just to give the people who do it a chance to rest after sixty successive weeks of broadcasting . . . Eleanor Powell ordered fifteen pairs of slacks at once; the Hollywood habit of wearing them got her, and now all she needs is a mink coat to wear with them . . . Helen Hayes, who is broadcasting again, wears a slave bracelet instead of a wedding ring . . . When Bing Crosby gets back into the harness and begins making pictures and broadcasting again, he'll have a new title—president of the Del Mar Turf club; it's near San Diego . . . Production of "Camille" has been held up indefinitely by Irving Thalberg's death, which prostrated Greta Garbo.

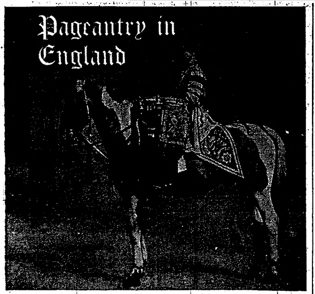
Pageantry in England



Member of Royal Horse Guards In Full Regalia.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

THE English like pageantry. No one is long in London before that becomes evident. And when spring comes to the British capital, pageantry is not far behind.

A month before, the south coast has retained the winter's health seekers and a generous sprinkling of visitors from "The Colonies." To watch the opening of the mail in a drawing room of Penzance or Torquay is like leafing the pages of an imperial atlas or a stamp album.

The season's northward passage from Kent and Sussex changes the country's outlook. Then the visiting expatriates move north, and the Cornish Riviera emerges from its plate-glass windbreaks. The daffodils have begun to show themselves in London's parks.

How many hundreds of springs have worked their magic around Ludgate Hill? Yet the story is never old.

In St. James's Park the pelicans plume themselves for another round of admirers. Testy old Colonials, amid youngsters with the same straight backs, ride splendid horses along that mid-city strip of tanbark known as Rotten Row. Before St. Paul's and under the haughty noses of the Landseer lions in Trafalgar square children minister to the vernal voracity of the London pigeons.

In Whitehall, where the Horse Guards sit their coal-black mounts, warm red winter capes are removed to display white buckskin breeches. In front of the Old Admiralty, whence Nelson hurried off toward the Strait of Gibraltar and the battle commemorated by the name of Trafalgar Square, a flower seller thrusts out a sixpenny bunch of daffodils.

As if the bright lights around Leicester square had helped coax them forth, early blossoms circle the base of a statue to England's immortal poet and playwright. Leaning on a pile of his works, his legs crossed more carelessly than a sculptor allows in the case of a general or a statesman, Shakespeare broods in the center of a theaterland whose craft he glorified.

Nerve Center of Empire

Another spot gilded by daffodils is the garden outside the Houses of Parliament, a site where monarchs ruled from Edward the Confessor to Henry VIII. Since the days of Bluff King Hal, the House of Commons has turned this Thames-side meeting place into the democratic heart of a farflung Empire.

The World war Tommy sang to Piccadilly and Leicester square, but the nerve center of the British Commonwealth is this fortress of constitutional government beside Britain's historic river.

Three centuries ago, under the Palace of Westminster, a tall fellow with auburn hair sat amid barrels of gunpowder. In a few hours King, Lords, and Commons were to meet in the hall overhead. A watch provided by Thomas Percy ticked all England closer to chaos.

The Gunpowder plot was discovered. Intervening centuries have healed the grim memory of his execution, and Guy Fawkes Day has become a children's festival, with fireworks shooting from grotesque effigies to amuse the crowd. But even yet, before the King leaves Buckingham palace to open Parliament, red-coated beefeaters search the cellars beneath this mighty pile.

On Hampstead Heath coveys of kites, their strings coiled on reels strong enough for tunny fishing, shake their tails across the heavens, while Punchinello wags has long-beaked face before those still too young to read Punch. On a hundred lakes and streams the swans stretch their long necks in begging. Down the hidden lanes of Devon, Kent, and Sussex cyclists and motorists push their explorations.

The wide expanse of Dartmoor, the coves of Cornwall, the gossamer haze of English lakes, the pilgrim places of art and architecture, of religion and literature, all have their devotees.

Yet even these alluring places, so fondly dreamed of around tea tables in paneled rooms, are hard put to keep admirers from rushing off to some display of uniforms, banners, horseflesh, or costumes—perhaps a lady of quality wearing the same gown and the same title as did a famous ancestor in the age of Queen Anne or Nell Gwyn.

At a pageant the king may sit his horse while colors that have faced enemy fire are dipped in salute, or the tale of Runnymede, built up by Roman and Dane, Plantagenet and Tudor, may be retold in one stirring afternoon beside the Thames.

In the Midlands, smoke and haze often thwart the sun, but spring arrives with the pounding of hoofs and the cries of the crowd at the Grand National Steeplechase, which determines the winners of the Irish Sweepstakes, now duplicated on Derby Day.

The course is four and one-fourth miles, with 30 jumps. Beyond any of them, all but the lead horse may land on his rivals' sky-turned hoofs instead of on billiard-cloth turf, or trample a bright-clad jockey. An Aintree steeplechaser will swerve in the middle of a leap to avoid a fallen rider, but when a dozen leapers cross Becher's Brook together, like a pony ballet pawing the footlights, there is danger aplenty and drama for all.

A few days after the race half the men who slap reins on workaday horseflesh will be clucking to their steeds in the name of the year's Grand National winner.

After this dramatic attack, spring consolidates its hold. Small parties hie away to rustic spots beloved because they are known to few. How one island can contain so many favorite picnic sites is a mystery. "Gated roads," "private" signs, and turnstiles are designed not so much to keep out beauty seekers as to keep in an air of seclusion and quiet.

Everywhere citizens move out to greet the bursting bud, the new-born lamb, the soft spring breeze along white cliffs, or welcome warmth at the foot of red-rock sun traps near the sea.

England can be grim. There is the cruel tower where Anne Roleyn's slender throat was severed by a sword and those of Catherine Howard, Lady Jane Grey, and the Earl of Essex by an ax; but London River calls us. London Tower is a scene of the nation's tragic deaths; the Thames of its birth and growth and power. Who has not heard the aphorism: "The St. Lawrence is water; the Missouri is muddy water; the Thames is liquid history"?

Cruises on The Thames

Today a well-managed excursion cruises down London River under the auspices of the Port of London Authority. Shiploads of school children and adults are carried amid the busiest portions of London's 70-mile port. They are shown through the docks that feed and furnish a nation and link this tiny island to the Empire its restless mariners won, and to the world.

Leaflets are distributed which map the course, epitomize the river's history, and list the day's portion of a thousand ships a week converging from the far corners of the earth. Through loudspeakers, intelligent guides point out where Raleigh spread his cloak for Queen Elizabeth, where the time-ball of a modest observatory marks the stride of our sphere, where Francis Drake, expecting punishment, was knighted on the Golden Hind.

Once there were more boats upon the Thames than there were hackney coaches in the streets, and magistrates from the City were rowed to Westminster. Today many travelers ignore the "most significant waterway in the world," extended by the Grand Union Canal, which makes the industrial Midlands shipping suburbs of the London docks.

Near the upper reaches of tidewater is Kew, a vast open-air nursery for plants and "a convalescent home for all sore souls." Through the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew the rubber plantations of Malaya passed on their way from the native forests in Brazil. India's post offices could not sell Asiatic quinine to relieve the tropical fevers of countless millions until South America's cinchona tree was bequeathed to Ceylon and the Himalayas through the propagating gardens of Kew.

Kew is one of London's best-loved playgrounds, especially when young spring has ringed its little lake with fuzzy foliage and touched the widespread green with masses of gay blossoms. Bluebell, lilac, magnolia and azalea, all have their devotees.

WOMAN USES COAL BIN AS SWEATSHOP FOR GIRL WORKERS

Six Are Found at Work in Dark Cellar; Plan to Prosecute Owner.

Newark, N. J.—State Labor Commissioner John J. Toohey, Jr., announced that he planned to make an example of Mrs. Antonetta Ranaldi, fifty, who conducted a sweatshop in the dark, cramped basement of her home, employing young girls to sew neckties for a New York manufacturer.

"I have been campaigning for two years," he said, "for a sweatshop law similar to the one which is enforced in New York, where a license fee of $200 is charged for such contracting shops.

"The New York contractors advertise in foreign language newspapers and smuggle their work into Jersey at night to get it done at starvation wages."

Although Mrs. Ranaldi protested she did not know she was doing anything wrong, Mr. Toohey said he would confer with Prosecutor William Wachenfeld and ask that an indictment be sought against her under New Jersey's so-called sweatshop law.

"I was only trying to make an honest living for my family," Mrs. Ranaldi told inspectors who raided her home at 200 Thirteenth avenue. "I thought this was better than going on relief."

In the shallow six-foot cellar the inspectors found six girls at work. They were crowded into a narrow seven-by-twelve foot space which formerly had been used as a coal bin, along with two sewing machines and two electric ironers.

One Girl Her Own.

The young workers included one of Mrs. Ranaldi's three children. One girl gave her age as thirteen and the others said they were sixteen. Three were negroes.

Mrs. Ranaldi said she started the shop because her husband, a part-time employee of the Public Service corporation, was unable to make a sufficient living. She netted about $13 a week, she said, and paid the girls "a few dollars" for their work.

"They weren't worth any more; they were always falling asleep," she told Mr. Toohey.

Mr. Toohey suggested that perhaps they fell asleep because ventilation in the basement was limited to two tiny windows opening on the sidewalk level. He entered charges of violating the sweatshop law, employing minors, operating a factory without a license, and having no insurance on employees. Mrs. Ranaldo said she never heard of such regulations.

Four Tahitians Marooned for Weeks on Desert Isle

Papeete, Tahiti.—From the tiny Bellinghausen Isles comes a tale of rescued castaways, which proves there still exist islands in the South Pacific where one can be marooned for weeks. The Bellinghausen group of atolls and reefs, west of the Society Islands, is uninhabited and is visited only at rare intervals by persons gathering fallen coconuts.

Passing there recently the lookout of the steamship Port Darwin observed a man signaling for aid. Heavy seas and the dangerous tangle of reeds prevented sending a boat ashore, but the Port Darwin wirelessed the British consul at Papeete. After several weeks the schooner Denys, dropping anchor off Bellinghausen, found four Tahitian young men. They told this story:

They had been employed on the coconut plantation at Mopiha, an atoll seventy miles away. They said they were beaten and starved and determined to escape to Raiatea, another island. They put to sea in a small boat, but lost their bearings. After five days their boat was cast on a reef of Bellinghausen and broken up by the heavy surf. A fifth man drowned. Until rescued they lived on coconuts and shell fish.

Two Hungarians Fight Duel Lasting an Hour

Budapest. — The longest duel in the world was fought here recently by two society youngsters: Frederick Steuhmer, son of the Hungarian "candy king" and Geza Kiss, a civil servant.

The duel developed from a private quarrel and took place at a fencing club. It lasted an hour without interruption. The two young men lunged at each other in nineteen rounds. In the end both were so exhausted that they were unable to raise their swords and the seconds declared the duel ended. They parted friends. Both were injured on the head and chest.

Life and Death

Starvation was used as a means of a living by Herr Greiter, of Budapest, or, as he was known in the circus profession, Professor Agrippa, who was for 20 years unchallenged Hungarian champion in the starvation act. People flocked to circuses and fairs to see Professor Agrippa, sealed in a glass box, starving without food and drink for days. His record of thirty-two days in a sealed box without a bite to eat, remains unbroken.

With the world crisis came a slump in the starving profession and Professor Agrippa fell out of a job. Recently an elderly man collapsed in a Budapest street. An ambulance sped up and took him off to hospital. On the way he died. He was Professor Agrippa. Physicians who examined him in hospital pronounced that he died of — starvation. — Montreal Herald.

Deer Census May Lead to Annual Open Season

An exhaustive census of Minnesota deer will be undertaken this winter, according to A. C. Hanson, director of the division of game and fish.

Gordon Fredine, recently named biologist of the division, has been placed in charge of deer drives to be undertaken in cooperation with federal conservation agencies.

Mr. Fredine is of the opinion that the census may show a sufficiently large deer population to warrant an open season on deer each year instead of every two years as at present.

Observers of game conditions agree that deer are unusually plentiful this year. The division of forestry estimates that less than one per cent of deer range was burned over by fire last summer.

EXPLOSIVES DAMAGE ANOKA AUTOMOBILES

Anoka—High explosives placed recently on the street car tracks in Anoka were set off by cars which passed over them, carrying a number of passengers. A dense cloud of smoke enveloped the scene and one explosion raised the forward trucks so that when the car dropped a spring was broken and a window shattered. The following evening another explosive was struck and investigations revealed a portion of the material used. The cars involved did not carry mail, but if they had, it would be a federal offense. No clue has been discovered as to how the explosives were placed on the tracks.

Proposed Amendments to the Constitution of Minnesota

To be submitted at 1936 General Election

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
LEGAL DEPARTMENT

HARRY H. PETERSON
Attorney General

St. Paul, Minnesota, April 29, 1936

Honorable Mike Holm,
Secretary of State,

Dear Sir:

In compliance with the provisions of Section 46 of Mason's Minnesota Statutes of 1927, I herewith furnish you a statement of the purpose and effect of all proposed amendments to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota which are to be submitted to the electors of said state at the general election in 1936, in accordance with certain acts adopted by the 1935 legislature.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT NO. 1.

By the adoption of Chapter 393 of the Laws of 1935 the legislature has proposed an amendment to Article 8 of the State Constitution. The proposed amendment, if adopted, will not alter the form of any existing section of the Constitution, but will add a new section to be known as Section 8 of said article 8.

The proposed amendment reads as follows:

"Any of the public lands of the state, including lands held in trust for any purpose, may, with the approval of a commission consisting of the governor, the attorney general and the state auditor, be exchanged for lands of the United States and other privately owned lands as the legislature may provide, and the lands so acquired shall be subject to the trust, if any, to which the lands exchanged therefor were subject, and the state shall reserve all mineral and water and water power rights in lands so transferred by the state."

The Purpose and Effect of the Proposed Amendment.

The purpose and effect of this proposed amendment is to authorize the legislature to provide for exchanging any of the public lands of the state for lands of the United States and land privately owned, such exchanges to be made with the approval of a commission consisting of the governor, the attorney general and the state auditor. Such exchanges of land cannot now be made because the State Constitution does not permit the legislature to authorize the sale of school lands, state swamp lands and state internal improvement lands except by public sale. One immediate purpose in granting such authority is to make it possible for the state to acquire compact areas of land for forestry and other conservation purposes by exchanging land outside of such conservation areas for lands of the United States and privately owned lands within such areas.

The proposed amendment requires that all mineral rights, water rights and water power rights in lands so transferred by the state shall be reserved. The land so acquired will become subject to the same trust, if any, as the land disposed of. For example, if school land is given in exchange, the land received will become school land.

By the adoption of Chapter 394 of the Laws of 1935, the legislature proposed an amendment to Section 1 of Article 9 of the State Constitution.

This section now reads as follows:

"The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away. Taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, and shall be levied and collected for public purposes, but public burying grounds, public school houses, public hospitals, academies, colleges, universities, and all seminaries of learning, all churches, church property and houses of worship, institutions of purely public charity, public property used exclusively for any public purpose, shall be exempt from taxation, and there may be exempted from taxation personal property not exceeding in value $200, for each household, individual or head of a family, and household goods and farm machinery, as the legislature may determine:

"Provided, that the legislature may authorize municipal corporations to levy and collect assessments for local improvements upon property benefited thereby without regard to a cash valuation, and provided further, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect, modify or repeal any existing law providing for the taxation of the gross earnings of railroads."

If amended as proposed by the legislature, this section will read as follows:

"The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away. Taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, and shall be levied and collected for public purposes, but public burying grounds, public school houses, public hospitals, academies, colleges, universities, and all seminaries of learning, all churches, church property and houses of worship, institutions of purely public charity, and public property used exclusively for any public purpose, shall be exempt from taxation, and there may be exempted from taxation personal property not exceeding in value $200.00 for each household, individual or head of a family, and household goods and farm machinery, as the legislature may determine:

"Provided, that the legislature may authorize municipal corporations to levy and collect assessments for local improvements upon property benefited thereby without regard to a cash valuation, and provided further, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect, modify or repeal any existing law providing for the taxation of the gross earnings of railroads.

"Provided further, that after January 1, 1937, no tax shall be imposed on any real or tangible personal property for any state purpose, except that authorized by Section 16 of Article 9 of this Constitution, and/or for the payment of indebtedness of the state incurred prior to January 1, 1937; but this proviso shall not limit, but the state shall have, the right to impose taxes upon royalties, occupations, sales, receipts, incomes, inheritances, gifts, privileges, franchises, or licenses, or upon property on the basis of gross earnings or tonnage, or upon intangibles of every kind."

The Purpose and Effect of the Proposed Amendment.

The purpose and effect of the proposed amendment is to prohibit the imposition of any taxes on real or tangible personal property after January 1, 1937 for any state purpose, except as hereinafter stated, without limiting the right of the state to impose taxes upon royalties, occupations, sales, receipts, incomes, inheritances, gifts, privileges, franchises or licenses, or upon property on the basis of gross earnings or tonnage, or upon intangibles of every kind, said proposed amendment declaring that the state shall have the right to impose such taxes.

If the said amendment is adopted the state will retain the right to impose taxes on real or tangible personal property for either or both of the following purposes:

(1) To provide funds to be used to construct or improve roads and bridges in this state, as authorized by Section 16 of Article 9 of the State Constitution, for which purpose, under Section 16 of said Article 9, the legislature in its discretion is authorized to provide for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state, of not to exceed in any year one mill on all the taxable property within the state; and

(2) To raise money to pay indebtedness of the state incurred prior to January 1, 1937.

Respectfully yours,
HARRY H. PETERSON,
Attorney General.

LESTER OLSON WINS GOLD CUP AWARD

Lester F. Olson, manager of the local creamery, won a Gold Certificate Award and gold cup last week at the Red River Valley Dairymen's Association convention at Crookston with his entry of butter in the sweet-cream butter class, the highest grade of butter scored at the convention, with a score of 95.00. Only nine such awards were made in that class to creamery operators thruout the state in the contest which had 154 entries of butter.

The St. Hilaire creamery has long had a reputation for turning out high class butter, and the award given Mr. Olson at the Crookston meeting shows he is maintaining and improving upon previous standards.

The No-Nam birthday club met Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. M. R. Graham. Bridge furnished the diversion, and luncheon was served.

Bob Stephens suffered a fractured leg Tuesday when a buttermilk barrel he was unloading struck him in such a manner as to fracture the leg above the ankle.

Ole Lee, county commissioner from the First district, who failed of re-nomniation at the primary election, has come out as a sticker candidate for the position he now holds.

A fair sized crowd attended the Parent-Teachers Association meeting held Friday at the school building. A good program was presented, and lunch was served as usual.

ORGANIZE P. T. A. CHORUS

At a meeting of PTA members held Tuesday night, a chorus of a dozen voices was organized. The chorus will fill in on regular monthly programs whenever necessary, and will also represent the local PTA at district meetings. Anyone wishing to join, is asked to be present at the Janda home next Tuesday evening.

SPECTATOR NOW IN HALF CENTURY CLUB

The Spectator this week received a scroll proclaiming its election to membership in the Half-Century Club of The American Press. To become a member of this Club, it is necessary for a newspaper to have been published continuously more than 50 years. The Spectator was founded in St. Hilaire in July, 1882 and is now entering its 55th year. During those 54 years, the paper has been published in three counties, Polk, Red Lake and Pennington, without changing its original location. The paper was founded by W. E. McKenzie who later became publisher of the Crookston Daily Times.

The reminder may not be so pleasant, but the last half of the real estate taxes payable this year, must be paid on or before the last of this month to avoid penalty.

There will be six candidates in the First district of Pennington county at the fall election. Four sticker candidates are in the field in addition to the regular nominees.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hallstrom have moved down from Thief River Falls and are now occupying their place on Water street, the residence formerly owned by his father, P. A. Hallstrom.

Grading on the state road leading west of here is fast nearing completion. It is hoped raising of the grade will do away with snow blockades which occur every winter on that stretch of road.

An auction sale of stock and machinery was held Saturday at the Kalinowski place west of town. Everything offered was sold at fair price. Mrs. Kalinowski and children expect to move in to town for the winter months.

A social will be given in Dist. 178, 1½ miles east and 1½ miles south of St. Hilaire, Friday evening, Oct. 30. A blanket will be given away. A program will also be given. Everybody welcome. Evelyn Peterson, teacher.

George P. Jones of Bagley, candidate for representative from this district at the November election, was a caller in the village Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Jones is making an aggressive campaign, and is meeting with much encouragement.

Mission meetings will be held at the local Mission church beginning Thursday evening, Oct. 29 and continuing over Sunday, Nov. 1. Speakers will be Rev. Arne Mars of Drayton and Rev. John Anderson of Crookston. Further announcement next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wilson and his mother, Mrs. A. S. Wilson motored down Monday evening from Warren for a brief visit with relatives and friends. The two former returned home that evening, but Mrs. A. S. Wilson remained until Wednesday when she returned for a short stay at Warren before going to Minneapolis.

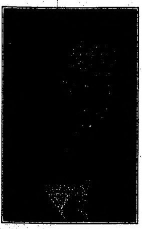
Probate Judge



This being the last year of my first term as Probate Judge, I am again a candidate for the office at General Election, Nov. 3, 1936. Have saved to the County $1,200 during this first term by eliminating clerk hire. Your vote will be appreciated.

Very truly yours,

SNEAK THIEVES BUSY

Night prowlers who either were well acquainted with the premises, or had local information concerning them, attempted to gain entrance at Larson Bros. store, Walt Olson's cafe and the Spectator office last Friday and Saturday nights. At the latter place the door was pried open and a small amount of money taken. Similar depredations are reported to have occured at both Red Lake Falls and Plummer. An investigation is under way which may result in arrests soon.

PHEASANT SEASON OPENS ON SUNDAY

Open season for shooting of pheasants starts next Sunday in all counties in the state that have seasons this year. In northern the zone shooting will be permitted from noon to sunset each day from October 24 to November 13th. The bag limit is 3 male birds, or 2 male and one female each day with double that amount allowed in possession at one time. Limit for the entire season is eighteen birds. Hunters from this section will go into Mahnomen, Norman and Clay counties for their hunting.

Several local nimrods motored Sunday to Union and Sarah lakes in quest of ducks. They had fair luck dispite the fact that there were almost as many hunters as ducks in that area.

The Norwegian Lutheran Ladies Aid will meet Oct. 30. The annual meeting will be held at this time. A group of ladies will serve. Everybody welcome.

Lee Beebe returned this week from St. Vincent's hospital at Crookston where he submitted to an operation a few weeks ago. He is feeling much improved, and will soon be about as usual.

FIELD MEASURING NEARLY FINISHED

With measuring of fields nearly completed in Pennington county, it is expected that this part of the work, as well as that of land platting in connection, in checking compliance with the Soil Conservation program will be completed about November 1st or shortly thereafter.

With the large number of farms to be measured in the county, there is a possibility some may have been missed. Any farmer who is taking advantage of the program, and whose farm may have been missed, should contact the county agent who has charge of the work in this county.

Regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the creamery was held yesterday. Paychecks for cream delivered last month, are being issued this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Bainbridge motored up Tuesday from Kinsley, Iowa, to visit briefly with friends and former neighbors here, and also to look after matters at their former place of residence near Goodridge.

The pheasant hunting season opens next Sunday in counties in the northern part of the state. Neither Pennington. Red Lake, Polk, Marshall or Clearwater have open seasons this year. Hunters from here plan to go to Mahnomen, Norman and Clay counties.

Mrs. Knute Kolstad and son, Harold. left Thursday with Mrs. Kolstad's brother, Jorgen Nomland of Fisher, on an auto trip to Little Falls where they visited with K. L. Hovet and family, and to St. Paul for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Gigstad. They returned Monday evening.

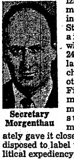
News Review of Current Events the World Over

New "Temporary" Gold Standard Adopted — Russia Accused of Using Spanish War to Rouse International Discord—Belgium Abandons Alliances.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

"IT IS a new gold standard, a way of doing business which has never been tried before," was Secretary Morgenthau's characterization of the agreement just entered into by the United States, Great Britain and France, whereby, subject to 24 - hours' cancellation, they will exchange gold for each other's currencies. Financiers, economists and business men were taken by surprise by the move and immediately gave it close study. Some were disposed to label the maneuver "political expediency," but experts generally said it was a logical step in the sequence of monetary events but not positively in the direction of stabilization.



Secretary Morgenthau

The new plan, Mr. Morgenthau said, differs from the old gold standard in that it will permit the export or earmarking of gold only to and between governments instead of private business institutions and traders.

"The door is wide open," said Mr. Morgenthau. "We're not going out drumming up business, but we'll welcome all other countries which want to participate."

According to the Treasury department, the United States alone will announce a selling price for gold. France and England will keep their selling prices secret, though there will be a free flow of gold between the stabilization funds of the three nations.

It was believed that Great Britain was the prime mover in this new pact. As one commentator put it: "The agreement was made necessary when France debased her currency and placed an embargo on gold exports, because Great Britain suddenly discovered that nowhere in the world was there left a fixed yardstick against which to measure international commitments and handle international exchange."

SOVIET RUSSIA made a second determined effort to aid the beleagured government of Spain, and sustained a second rebuff. Ivan Maisky, Russian ambassador to England, handed to Lord Plymouth, British chairman of the non-intervention committee, a virtual ultimatum demanding immediate convocation of the committee to consider blockading the coast of Portugal against arms shipments destined for the Spanish insurgents. It was understood in London that Lord Plymouth replied that if the proposition were seriously made, it should be presented through diplomatic channels to the governments concerned. The Russian plan was for a blockade by English or French warships.

Observers in Europe are convinced that the Soviet government does not expect the powers to agree to any such blockade as is suggested, but is chiefly interested in stirring up discord among the nations.

British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden, after hearing of Lord Plymouth's reply, made a speech at Sheffield in which he pledged Great Britain's unwavering support to the policy of nonintervention in Spain. He declared the government was determined to "confine that tragedy within the boundaries of that country."

Leaders of the Fascists were reported to have planned a steady, steam - roller advance on Madrid, and this offensive was already under way. The defenders of the capital were hastily building fortifications in the suburbs and surrounding the city with trenches. In Oviedo the dynamite - armed force of loyalist miners was still battling with the garrison and rebel troops sent to the rescue were about to enter the city.

MAURICE THOREZ, French Communist leader, made a speech in Strasbourg that is causing a lot of trouble. He was charged with deliberately insulting Adolf Hitler, and the Berlin government entered formal protest. The official Nazi organ, Der Angriff, says the speech was an attempt to precipitate war between France and Germany, and also that it was an attempt "to overthrow the German reich and to achieve the definite bolshevization of France for the benefit of the Soviet Communist internationale."

The French rightist newspapers declare the Thorez incident was part of the Russian Communist scheme to throw France against Germany so that Russia will not be left alone to face "any eventual German attack." The rightists were even more vigorous in their accusations when it was learned that Maxim Litvinov, Soviet foreign commissar, was secretly in Paris.

FIGURES made public by the American Navy Department show that since July 1 last every great naval power except the United States has increased the number and tonnage of its war vessels.

In the 2½ months from July 1 to September 15, the United States reduced the number of its ships from 324 vessels totaling 1,080,715 tons to 306 vessels, totaling 1,062,875 tons.

Great Britain increased ships from 37 to 309 and tonnage from 1,224,329, to 1,232,854.

Japan increased ships from 213 to 217 and tonnage from 772,797 to 776,397.

France increased ships from 178 to 187 and tonnage from 558,452 to 571,734.

Italy increased ships from 191 to 195 and tonnage from 403,865 to 406,333.

Germany increased ships from forty-nine to fifty-three and tonnage from 113,708 to 125,458.

The British foreign office announced that France and Italy had agreed to sign that protocol of the London naval treaty forbidding the use of submarines except under strict limitations.

BELGIUM, which since the close of the World war has been tied tight to France by a military alliance, has decided to drop that and all similar alliances and to rely for her safety on strict neutrality and a larger army. King Leopold so informed the cabinet, telling the ministers that Germany's reoccupation of the Rhineland "practically puts us back where we were before the great war." Belgium's geographical position, he said "makes it imperative for us to maintain a military machine of such size as to dissuade any neighbor from using our territory to attack another state." The period of military service was extended from twelve to eighteen months.

King Leopold

"Belgium must pursue a policy exclusively and wholly Belgian," Leopold said. "In any case our engagements should not go beyond keeping off war from our own territory. Belgium must remain outside of its neighbors' conflicts."

"Any policy of alliance with a single country would weaken our position abroad. A purely defensive alliance would not meet the case because, however prompt the intervention of our ally, it would only come after the invader's blow, which would be crushing."

AUTHORITY of the national maritime commission to declare a permanent truce in current contract controversies is challenged by the negotiating committee for the Pacific coast maritime unions, and members of those unions are instructed to vote on a proposal for a coast-wide waterfront strike.

The maritime commission had peremptorily demanded that the Pacific coast ports be kept open while it sent an investigator to San Francisco to discuss the conditions which have long threatened to bring on industrial warfare.

In telegrams to President Franklin Roosevelt and the commission, the committee said the commission had caused "great unrest" among the workers through its participation in negotiations between shipowners and dock and shipboard employees.

The seven unions, claiming a membership of nearly 37,000 workers, are the International Longshoremen's association, the American Radio Telegraphists' association, the Marine Engineers' Beneficial association, the Masters, Mates and Pilots of America, the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, Marine Cooks and Stewards, and the Marine Firemen. Oilers, Watertenders and Wipers' association.

SENATOR WILLIAM E. BORAH of Idaho, whose attitude in the Presidential campaign is a matter of great interest to all parties, has declared he would confine his attention to state matters; but then, being irked by some criticism from Republicans he went further and said he was "going after the Republican party." The veteran said he had been accused of not being regular.

Senator Borah

"Well, what is a regular?," he asked. "A regular is a man with no ideas, who waits for someone to tell him what to do. My idea of being regular is in doing what you believe to be right in the interests of the people you represent.

"Let this be understood—I'm telling all parties, Republican, Democratic, Union—I'm going to advocate the things I believe in whether they cross party lines or not."

Adams of Boston, president of the American Guernsey Cattle club.

Puttering Around the House—

Time-Wasting Work of Putting Away Things Others Have Used

WHEN a family is orderly, no one has to do much puttering about. When the members are not particular where they put their things, it becomes the undesirable duty of some person to spend much time in just this very thing, puttering. Hours are wasted daily in such trivialities as gathering up newspapers spread about, picking up and putting away gloves, hats, scissors, thimbles, pencils, etc. Whatever it may be that has been in use, and not put away by the user, or has been put in the wrong place, must be placed where it belongs or the house would reflect poor housekeeping.

Nondescript Tasks.

The time given to these nondescript jobs should be given by those who leave the work to others. Putting things away is part of the job connected with using the things, just as much as getting the things out, is part of it. The work is regular and legitimate and only becomes an annoyance when left for the wrong person to do.

No person wants her time frittered away doing the left-over jobs of others. Nobody enjoys having a person puttering around, either. It is distracting to attention, and disturbing to the nerves. From both the angle of the person who putters about and those who have to endure the annoyance of such activity, there should be some remedy found.

Remedies Suggested.

Mothers can teach their children to put their playthings away when through with them. This is the first step to take. Then she can instruct the little folk to put their outside things away when they come in from outdoors. Children can get into the habit of orderliness by being made to realize that what they don't do, has to be done by mother who is very busy and often too tired to do the extra tasks. Affection will gain the day.

Adults should consider how to break themselves of the reprehensible habit of leaving work they should do, to be completed by others. If they really determine to stop this bothersome fault, they will decrease the necessity of puttering about by the person who heartily dislikes the work, but who, for the sake of order prefers to do it rather than have disorder around.

Six Men, Six Views

Washington.—Some time ago I reported in these columns that Mr. Roosevelt had sent a commission to Europe to study consumer co-operatives. I said at that time that the commission was likely to find itself unable to reach an agreement concerning a report to the President on the consumer co-operatives and that in the event they were able to reach an agreement, the publication of their findings would be delayed until after the election.

The commission has returned to this country and has gone through its labor pains to the end that there are six different views, an opinion by each of the six different commissioners concerning the value or lack of it that consumer co-operatives have.

But it is important to know developments concerning this commission because it appears that by engaging in an investigation of the consumer co-operatives, the President has awakened a number of different interests in our own country to the fact that there are some kinds of co-operatives which are not helpful. The fuss stirred up by failure of the six commissioners to reach an agreement makes it seem unlikely that there will be any unanimity of opinion in congress if and when Mr. Roosevelt attempts to gain action in a legislative way to encourage creation of these co-operatives. In other words, if a move is made in congress, or if the Chief Executive attempts to force congress to enact legislation favorable to consumer co-operatives, we are likely to see a vigorous legislative battle. Personally, I hope that happens. Unless that end materializes, there is every likelihood that the average person who has not access to full information will be inclined to favor consumer co-operatives, without realizing he is lending his influence, whatever it may be, to fostering institutions that in the end are certain to cause heartaches and financial losses.

I am in a position to say that the one thing upon which the President's commissioners were able to agree was that consumer co-operatives in Europe constitute the focal point for radicalism. Not a single consumer co-operative was found, I am told, that was not controlled, managed or inspired by radicals of one breed or another, mainly, communists. These hotbeds of radicalism constitute "pressure groups" that have been able to impress governments in the various countries of an ability and an influence that do not actually exist with them. That is to say, these groups, like minority groups everywhere, are cohesively organized and they are vocal, in addition. The result is they have been able to force upon peoples in many countries restrictions over private and independent initiative, or to gain for themselves exemptions and privileges not accorded to others. The result is an obvious alignment of peoples into fresh factions, the tendencies of which are dangerous.

Tugwell's Activities

It may be news to many persons that we have consumer co-operatives in this country and that these agencies or units already are being fostered by the United States government. I refer to the activities of Professor Rexford Guy Tugwell, who has installed in the resettlement colonies various and sundry consumer co-operatives. It may be news as well to many to learn that Mr. Tugwell has spent almost two million dollars in financing these co-operatives to get them started. And the third bit of news respecting this circumstance is that a book written by James Peter Warbasse is being used as a guide for the creation of these consumer co-operatives in federal resettlement projects.

Now, the name of James Peter Warbasse may not seem important. Many persons have written books, but there are not many volumes extant in the United States that advocate changes in the form of our government. Yet, there are propositions in the volume to which I have referred which do just that and these books, as I have said, are serving more or less as a guide for the people whom Professor Tugwell has "resettled."

With this brief presentation of the facts, it seems to me it does not take much imagination to see the basis upon which the promoters of the consumer co-operatives are building their structure in this country. Taking these facts into consideration with the information brought back by those who made the study for Mr. Roosevelt, it is made to appear at least that a foreign link is somehow or other being forged, and that link, I believe, is designed as a fundamental unit in the general radical program to change the form of our government as well as the form of our national life. I can arrive at no other conclusion.

Another Phase

There is still another phase of this general proposition of consumer co-operatives that ought to be of interest to every producer in this country. Let us assume, for example, that they were perfect in organization and management; that they prospered and expanded in numbers and that they were rendering genuine service to the people. If that condition were to obtain, does it not occur as a natural question that with so much strength, the consumer co-operatives would eventually establish a class alignment between producer and consumer? It seems to me that the natural course of events would lead to this end, and if it did lead to this end I am afraid that because there are more consumers than there are producers, the producers would get the dirty end of the deal. They would be short-changed because they would be outnumbered.

This phase seems the more important because the food stores, food fields generally, are the sectors in which these consumer co-operatives operate best. As a matter of fact, the food field is the most fertile field for experiments anyway and here is quite apparently another experiment that has fastened, or is fastening itself as a parasite upon the agricultural industry of this country.

I know there has been some argument that the consumer co-operatives are the answer to the effort to destroy chain stores. That is not so. Chain stores in foreign countries have licked the co-operatives. They have virtually destroyed them where the co-operatives attempted to drive the chain stores out of business. It becomes important then to recognize that while the United States has many chain stores, it has not now and never will have as many chain stores as it has independents.

Again, here is a threat to independent business men, particularly to the small shop owner, whether he be in a large city or in the thousands of small towns and villages where the owners of such stores are important to their communities and pillars of strength in our national society. If the consumer co-operatives get going, I predict a further decline in the number of independent merchandise houses throughout the United States. For that reason, if for none of the others that I have outlined, it does seem important that the consumer co-operatives move in this country should be stopped in its tracks and that those responsible in an official way for encouraging this sort of thing should be shorn of power.

Then There's Beer

It may seem a far cry from the farm field to the price of beer as a working man finds it, but there is a direct connection and recent developments again demonstrate the fact that our whole economic structure is quite closely related. There is an increase coming in the price of beer. Either the working man and others who like beer are going to pay more for it, or else they will get a smaller glass. The answer is that ingredients entering into the production of beer have increased in price to such an extent that, according to official figures, the brewers are now paying about $1.50 more for the things that enter into the production of one barrel of beer than they did when the sale of beer again was legalized.

This circumstance is significant for the reason that it shows conclusively how tampering with the currency upsets the general balance within our economic structure and results sometimes in displacement of markets and sometimes in diminution of sales. In the case of beer it probably will result in a displacement of markets, rather than any decline in the amount of beer consumed, despite the fact that the ultimate consumer will be paying more.

This condition is of interest to agriculture generally because it has always been contended by the proponents of open sale of beer and whiskey that a substantial new outlet for farm crops was made available by the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. Rather, it was a restoration of an old outlet that existed before the Eighteenth amendment was adopted. But there has been a combination of circumstances, largely the result of governmental messing, that has mitigated against the farmers obtaining full benefit from repeal. These may be enumerated as follows: Devaluation of the dollar, crop restriction under the Agricultural Adjustment act, higher taxes, and a tendency on the part of the Roosevelt administration to increase imports from abroad.

In the case of the devaluation of the currency, the main purpose, as announced by the Roosevelt administration, was to increase prices. It has had that effect and has made the brewers pay more for the hops they must import from abroad, and they must import hops because our own production is insufficient.

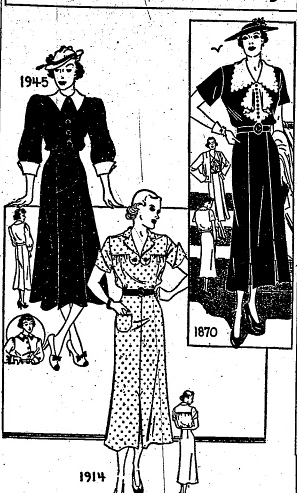
A Boost for Home Sewing!



HERE are three Sewing Circle specialties that are as easy to make as humming a tune. If you've never made a stitch before, here's your golden opportunity, for step-by-step sewing instructions are included with every pattern to direct you all the way until you've completed a frock that'll win a round of applause in any circle and flattering compliments on your slim figure and chic appearance. For an inexpensive, but extensive wardrobe just glance at this charming array of exquisite frocks.

Pattern No. 1945-B is a smashing hit in any office or social gathering and versatility personified. You can wear it as shown on the large figure with contrasting collar and cuffs and a self-fabric belt or make it with a twin collar and cuff, introducing another harmonizing color. It's outstanding because of its neat and trim appearance and because it makes up nicely in almost any choice bit of material. Cotton, shantung, silk, broadcloth, crepe or satin are a few exciting fabric mediums that create excellent effects. It is available for sizes: 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measures: 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 14 requires four yards of 39-inch material plus two-thirds yard contrast.

Pattern No. 1914-B is an alluring double duty frock; simple, inexpensive and the proud possessor of a sleek silhouette. It's a marvel for getting around the kitchen in a jiffy and just the thing for visiting, shopping or business. Depending of course on the material you select. For housewear, try a gingham, percale or cotton with a bit of color to pep you up, and for a more dressier effect choose striped shirting, broadcloth, lightweight wool or crepe. It is available for sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires three and three-fourths yards of 39-inch material.

Pattern No. 1870-B. Those of you whose figures run to width will join your slimmer sisters in choosing this gay slenderizing ensemble, with a contrasting scalloped collar and jabot, so flattering to the face. The effect is exquisite in satin, crepe, broadcloth or silk, the result wholly and completely satisfying. With or without the jacket the frock is the ultimate in utility and style. It is available for sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires six and one-fourth yards of 39-inch material plus seven-eighths yard contrast.

Proposed Amendments to the Constitution of Minnesota

To be submitted at 1936 General Election

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
LEGAL DEPARTMENT

HARRY H. PETERSON
Attorney General

St. Paul, Minnesota, April 29, 1936

Honorable Mike Holm,
Secretary of State,

Dear Sir:

In compliance with the provisions of Section 46 of Mason's Minnesota Statutes of 1927, I herewith furnish you a statement of the purpose and effect of all proposed amendments to the Constitution of the State of Minnesota which are to be submitted to the electors of said state at the general election in 1936, in accordance with certain acts adopted by the 1935 legislature.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT NO. 1.

By the adoption of Chapter 393 of the Laws of 1935 the legislature has proposed an amendment to Article 8 of the State Constitution. The proposed amendment, if adopted, will not alter the form of any existing section of the Constitution, but will add a new section to be known as Section 8 of said article 8.

The proposed amendment reads as follows:

"Any of the public lands of the state, including lands held in trust for any purpose, may, with the approval of a commission consisting of the governor, the attorney general and the state auditor, be exchanged for lands of the United States and other privately owned lands as the legislature may provide, and the lands so acquired shall be subject to the trust, if any, to which the lands exchanged therefor were subject, and the state shall reserve all mineral and water and water power rights in lands so transferred by the state."

The Purpose and Effect of the Proposed Amendment.

The purpose and effect of this proposed amendment is to authorize the legislature to provide for exchanging any of the public lands of the state for lands of the United States and land privately owned, such exchanges to be made with the approval of a commission consisting of the governor, the attorney general and the state auditor. Such exchanges of land cannot now be made because the State Constitution does not permit the legislature to authorize the sale of school lands, state swamp lands and state internal improvement lands except by public sale. One immediate purpose in granting such authority is to make it possible for the state to acquire compact areas of land for forestry and other conservation purposes by exchanging land outside of such conservation areas for lands of the United States and privately owned lands within such areas.

The proposed amendment requires that all mineral rights, water rights and water power rights in lands so transferred by the state shall be reserved. The land so acquired will become subject to the same trust, if any, as the land disposed of. For example, if school land is given in exchange, the land received will become school land.

By the adoption of Chapter 394 of the Laws of 1935, the legislature proposed an amendment to Section 1 of Article 9 of the State Constitution.

This section now reads as follows:

"The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away. Taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, and shall be levied and collected for public purposes, but public burying grounds, public school houses, public hospitals, academies, colleges, universities, and all seminaries of learning, all churches, church property and houses of worship, institutions of purely public charity, public property used exclusively for any public purpose, shall be exempt from taxation, and there may be exempted from taxation personal property not exceeding in value $200, for each household, individual or head of a family, and household goods and farm machinery, as the legislature may determine:

"Provided, that the legislature may authorize municipal corporations to levy and collect assessments for local improvements upon property benefited thereby without regard to a cash valuation, and provided further, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect, modify or repeal any existing law providing for the taxation of the gross earnings of railroads."

If amended as proposed by the legislature, this section will read as follows:

"The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away. Taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, and shall be levied and collected for public purposes, but public burying grounds, public school houses, public hospitals, academies, colleges, universities, and all seminaries of learning, all churches, church property and houses of worship, institutions of purely public charity, and public property used exclusively for any public purpose, shall be exempt from taxation, and there may be exempted from taxation personal property not exceeding in value $200.00 for each household, individual or head of a family, and household goods and farm machinery, as the legislature may determine:

"Provided, that the legislature may authorize municipal corporations to levy and collect assessments for local improvements upon property benefited thereby without regard to a cash valuation, and provided further, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect, modify or repeal any existing law providing for the taxation of the gross earnings of railroads.

"Provided further, that after January 1, 1937, no tax shall be imposed on any real or tangible personal property for any state purpose, except that authorized by Section 16 of Article 9 of this Constitution, and/or for the payment of indebtedness of the state incurred prior to January 1, 1937; but this proviso shall not limit, but the state shall have, the right to impose taxes upon royalties, occupations, sales, receipts, incomes, inheritances, gifts, privileges, franchises, or licenses, or upon property on the basis of gross earnings or tonnage, or upon intangibles of every kind."

The Purpose and Effect of the Proposed Amendment.

The purpose and effect of the proposed amendment is to prohibit the imposition of any taxes on real or tangible personal property after January 1, 1937 for any state purpose, except as hereinafter stated, without limiting the right of the state to impose taxes upon royalties, occupations, sales, receipts, incomes, inheritances, gifts, [illegible] franchises, or licenses, or u[illegible] the basis of gross earnings [illegible] or upon intangibles of every kind, said proposed amendment declaring that the state shall have the right to impose such taxes.

If the said amendment is adopted the state will retain the right to impose taxes on real or tangible personal property for either or both of the following purposes:

(1) To provide funds to be used to construct or improve roads and bridges in this state, as authorized by Section 16 of Article 9 of the State Constitution, for which purpose, under Section 16 of said Article 9, the legislature in its discretion is authorized to provide for an annual tax levy upon the property of this state, of not to exceed in any year one mill on all the taxable property within the state; and

(2) To raise money to pay indebtedness of the state incurred prior to January 1, 1937.

Respectfully yours,
HARRY H. PETERSON,
Attorney General.

THIEF RIVER FALLS SUFFERS FIRE LOSS

A fire which broke out at about 7 o'clock last Friday evening in the basement of the Oen Mercantile store building at Thief River Falls, destroyed that structure and all contents, and for a time threatened the entire business section of the city.

When discovered, the fire had gained such headway that the fire department found it extremely difficult to reach the seat of the blaze. As the fire reached highly combustible materials like surplus paints, oils, etc., that were stored in the basement, the air became superheated and several terrific explosions occured, blowing out windows and causing intense heat. To add to difficulties of the fire fighters, sash, awnings and woodwork in buildings across the street on the north, beginning at the Northern State Bank and extending east a half block, and those on the west from the Caldis corner to Rolland's meat market, caught fire. Fortunately, the floors and roof of the Oen building soon fell in, allowing the intense heat to escape upward thus permitting the firemen to work on the fires in the other buildings which were soon brot under control, but not before all plate glass fronts in the fire area had been destroyed and much other damage done. As nothing could be done to save either the Oen building or contents, that fire was allowed to burn itself out. The thick fire wall between it and the Lieberman building adjoining to the south, effectively prevented a spread of fire into that block. For a time it looked as tho the entire business section was in grave danger, and occupants of many buildings moved their stocks and fixtures into the street. To add to other difficulties, the main electric current cable burned off at the Oen corner, plunging a large part of the city into darkness.

The largest individual loser is the Oen Mercantile Company which lost its entire stock. All that remains of the building is the shell, and this is so badly damaged it likely cannot be used again. Damage to the extent of many thousands of dollars was sustained by owners of the buildings where fronts were broken and woodwork burned. Several occupants of apartments and office rooms in those buildings suffered damage to their belongings by smoke and water.

Mr. Oen has signified his intention of re-building on his corner as soon as possible, and he is now making arrangements to continue business in a temporary location.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

The entire river—all three feet of it—froze over during the spell of zero weather which prevailed here last week-end.

Miss Alice Skottem, who teaches at Climax, spent last week-end here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sever Skottem.

Mrs. B. E. Burkee plans to leave in another week or two to spent the winter at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Glenn H. Martz, at Hopkins, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Graham and daughter motored Saturday to Bertha, Minn., and visited with relatives until the following day when they returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Sigward Engh and children motored here Saturday from Edinburg, N. D., and visited until Sunday afternoon at the home of his brother Edw. Engh.

A vast amount of wood, both dry and green, is being hauled in here this fall. The school board recently let contract for delivery of 150 cords to be brought in later.

A wedding dance was given at the local hall Monday night in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Nelson of Thief River Falls whose marriage occured in that city last Sunday.

Red Cross: The next meeting of the local Red Cross will be held at the home of Mrs. Larson on Tuesday, Nov. 3rd. All interested in this work are cordially invited to be present.

Mrs. H. W. Anderson and daughter, Gladys, of Bowbells, N. D., came Saturday for an indefinite visit at the home of Mrs. Anderson's sister, Mrs. Hilda Gigstad, and with other relatives.

Ed. Christensen and children were down Tuesday from Thief River Falls to take back part of his garage material he had stored here since discontinuing operation of the local Cities Service station.

Elroy Johnson had an additional exit and new stairway leading to the second floor, constructed this week at his cafe building. Mrs. Kalinowski has leased some of the second floor rooms for living quarters for the winter.

Art Hanson motored Saturday to Leonard and joined Norman Olsen and a group of friends there for a duck hunt the following day in the vicinity of Clearwater Lake. The party had good luck in bagging over fifty ducks.

Aug. Berglund, Al Brink and Harry Winter are busy this week packing their stands of bees for winter storage. The hives are put into ranks, covered with moisture proof paper, and then covered over with flax straw, at the same locations they were set up during the honey gathering season.

VOTE DEMOCRATIC TICKET NOVEMBER 3

Voters in the agricultural sections of this country should consider carefully before they cast their ballots at the general election next Tuesday. In 1932 under a Republican administration, farmers were getting 3 cents per pound liveweight for hogs; cattle were almost valueless, wheat was 40 cents a bushel and other grains in proportion. Note the difference in prices today.

The Social Security Act with Old Age assistance; insurance of bank deposits of the common people; establishment of C. C. C. camps to provide work for young men instead of allowing them to become bums or worse; increased prosperity, and a steady gain in re-employment are all products of the present administration.

Since the national program of the Roosevelt administration designed to rout the depression was instituted, Minnesota has received six times as much in direct benefits as it has paid in Federal taxes. Regardless of last minute broadsides made for political purposes only, ponder well and decide for yourself if you want to go back to a republican administration wherein the agricultural area is always the "underdog". The loudest complaint heard now is from the moneyed East which is being compelled to disgorge part of its ill-gotten gains, in form of taxes, to help less favored sections of the country. Look back over the dismal period of bank failures, business failures, foreclosures on farms and homes, and general impoverishment under the Hoover republican administration. Do you want any more of it?

Then go to the polls next Tuesday and cast your ballot for re-election of President Roosevelt.

A large crowd from the surrounding territory and towns attended the dance given Saturday night at the Bilden & Olsen hall.

First snow for this fall season fell here last Friday morning. There was sufficient to cover the ground, but rain the following day caused most of it to disappear. First snowfall for 1936 came exactly a week earlier than that of a year ago.

The Mission meetings at the local church will begin Thursday evening and continue as follows: Friday at 3:00 and 8:00, Saturday at 8:00, Sunday at 11:00 A. M., 3:00 and 8:00 P. M. Speakers will be Rev. John Anderson of Crookston and Rev. Arne Mars of Drayton, N. D. Everyone cordially invited to attend these meetings.

Lars Backe
Candidate for the office of Probate Judge
at the General Election, Nov. 3, 1936

To the Voters of Pennington County, Minn.

I trust I am not a stranger to you, having been a resident of [illegible] county and a taxpayer for 45 years, always taken a keen interest in public affairs and with my training and 12 years experience as Probate Judge in this county, I shall be able to give you satisfactory service in the discharge of the duties of the Probate and Juvenile Court, if honored with election to the office.

Your vote and support will be greatly appreciated.

APPROVE AMENDMENT No.1

All persons interested in conservation are urged to vote for Amendment No. 1 at the general election Tuesday. The amendment will authorize the legislature to permit exchange of state lands for federal or privately owned lands in order to bring about better forest management. Instead of the state lands being in scattered tracs, the plan is to consolidate all holdings into larger areas to permit of more efficient fire prevention as well as general management.

GENERAL ELECTION TUESDAY, NOV. 3RD

Next Tuesday voters of the United States will go to the polls to elect national and state officials to conduct affairs of the nation and individual states for the next four and two years, respectively. Final broadsides will be fired within the next three days by both the major political parties in supporting of their contentions. In years past, only a small percentage of the voters have decided the issues because so many voters failed to exercise their franchise. Strenuous efforts are being made this year to bring out the largest vote in history of the country in order to get a true picture of desires of the people. It is not only important to take an interest in political affairs, but it is equally as important for the voters to express their choice thru the ballot. Be sure to vote Tuesday.

BUCKLER STAGING BRISK CAMPAIGN

Congressman R. T. Buckler, Polk County farmer, and Farmer-Labor candidate for re-election as U. S. Representative in Congress for the Ninth Minnesota District, will close his active speaking campaign by addressing meetings at towns visited by a special motorcade campaign tour in Norman County, Monday, Nov. 2nd, the day before election. He spoke at five meetings in various parts of the district this week.

During the past two months Congressman Buckler has spoken at meetings in each of the fifteen counties of the district. He missed but one meeting, that being at Fertile, recently, of the nearly fifty at which he was scheduled to speak.

Congressman Buckler is confident of re-election for a second term, and his secretary and campaign manager, Harold C. Hagen, of Crookston, predicts that he will carry at least thirteen and possibly fourteen of the fifteen counties in the District.

NEW BANK FOR OKLEE

At a recent hearing before the state banking department, permission was given for granting of a charter for a new state bank to be opened at Oklee next spring. That enterprising village has been without local banking facilities since both its banks closed some years ago. Geo. Beito of Gonvick, and a number of business men at Oklee are organizers of the new bank.

Second term

Andrew
Bottelson

My first term has been good experience. I trust that my record in office will merit your approval and vote Nov. 3d, 1936, at the General Election.

To those not familiar with the facts, I will say that I have saved to the taxpayers the sum of $1,200.00 which previously was paid out for clerk hire in the office of Probate Judge in Pennington County.

Very truly yours,

Dictator Stalin Foresees Another European War—Spanish Rebels Nearing Madrid—Simpson Affair May Lead to King Edward's Abdication.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

EUROPE'S situation, according to seasoned observers, is settling down to a fight to the finish between Communism and Fascism, and the several nations are lining up accordingly. Josef Stalin, Soviet dictator, is said to be convinced that another great war is at hand and that Russia must act promptly to take what he considers her proper part in the conflict. The civil war in Spain and the developments therefrom are providing the fuel for starting the fire. Russia repeats her accusations against Germany and Italy of giving aid to the Spanish rebels; the Fascist governments deny the charges and make countercharges against Moscow; the Soviet government appears to be on the point of quitting the committee for nonintervention in Spain and sending war munitions to the hard pressed radical government at Madrid.

Josef Stalin

Dispatches from Moscow said Stalin had been informed by his military advisers that as few as 100 planes could settle the Spanish war in favor of the government and that Russia could send them almost immediately. The Russians already have sent five shiploads of food and clothing to Spain, these supplies having been bought by subscriptions from Russian workers.

Should Stalin decide to come out openly in aid of the leftist government of Spain, the Nazis and Fascists may be counted on to redouble their already existing campaign against Communism—and many nations would soon be involved in the quarrel, with possibilities that terrify thinking persons the world over.

Klementi Voroshilov, Soviet commissar for defense, didn't allay the alarm any when he said in a formal statement:

"The Soviet Union is prepared to meet the enemy anywhere he chooses to taste the force of our arms.

"We are ready with man-power, equipment, training and resources."

A Russian language paper printed in New York said the Soviet press bureau in London had announced that Stalin would come to America after the November election, for medical treatment; that he would visit President Roosevelt, and later would go to Mexico. All of this was promptly denied officially in Moscow and by the soviet embassy in Washington.

CLOSER co-operation between Germany and Italy in the fight on Communism was assured by an arrangement for "institutes" in Berlin and Rome for Italo-German youth leadership, in which the Hitler Youth organization and Mussolini's Balilla, a Fascist youth body, are to unite. Baldur von Schirach, Nazi youth leader, so announced to a great gathering in Berlin.

In the Berlin institute Italian youth leaders will be educated in conditions and achievements under the Nazi state. In Rome, Nazi youth leaders will learn what Il Duce's Fascists have done for their country. Neither institute will attempt to imitate the other, Schirach said.

GENERAL FRANCO, head of the Spanish insurgents, ordered the immediate taking of Madrid and each day the state of the defenders of the capital became more desperate. The rebels closed in relentlessly, making effective use of bombing planes and armored tanks.

President Manuel Azana and some of his cabinet ministers slipped out of Madrid and appeared in Barcelona. Ostensibly they were making a tour of the loyalist fronts, but the general opinion was that they had fled from the capital to make a "last stand" in Catalonia, which province always is radical. Anyhow, Azana took over an office in the Catalan parliament building for himself and his secretarial staff. Senora Azana has quit Spain. She appeared in Toulouse, France, and departed for an unannounced destination.

JAMES COUZENS, independent Republican senator from Michigan, died in a Detroit hospital after a long illness and immediately following an operation to relieve uremic poisoning. He was sixty-four years old.

Mr. Couzens was one of the wealthiest men in congress, his riches being a result of early association with Henry Ford in the automobile business. He was twice elected mayor of Detroit and was appointed to the senate in 1922 to fill out the unexpired term of Senator Truman H. Newberry. As a senator he frequently disregarded party lines, and since the election of President Roosevelt he had supported many New Deal measures. Before the recent primary he announced that, though a candidate for renomination as a Republican, he intended to support Mr. Roosevelt for re-election. This was an act of political suicide, and he was defeated by Wilber M. Brucker.

Senator Couzens was noted for his great contributions to charity. The chief of these was the gift of probably $20,000,000 for the help of unfortunate children. He established the Children's Fund of Michigan with an endowment of $10,000,000.

PEACE within the ranks of the American Federation of Labor has not yet been achieved, for the executive council of that body adjourned without settling the dispute between the Green and Lewis factions. The council will meet again November 14 in Tampa, and two days later the federation will open its annual convention in that Florida city. If there are developments meanwhile, the council or federation may discuss the quarrel, according to President Green. He said: "The matter is temporarily closed," and added that so far as he knew, no peace overtures had been made by the CIO leaders. Mr. Green declared the ten suspended unions could not be admitted to the convention.

MERE scandal and gossip have no proper place in this department, but the "affaire Simpson," as the French would term it, has progressed until it assumes world importance. As arrangements are being made for the quiet and uncontested divorce of Mrs. "Wally" Simpson, American friend of King Edward VIII of England, it is rumored in London society circles that the bachelor monarch will abdicate in favor of his brother, the Duke of York, and marry the attractive woman who has shared so much of his time in recent months. In support of this rumor is the reported fact that plans are being made for renting the farms of the Sandringham estate in Norfolk, which is the king's private property. Also, there is a story that this estate may be sold to the Aga Khan, the immensely wealthy spiritual head of the Ismaili sect of Mohammedanism.

King Edward

Should Edward give up the throne, it would eventually be occupied by Princess Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the Duke of York, and this succession would be decidedly popular with the people of England. The abdicating king might revert to the dukedom of Cornwall, which provides a net income of about $350,000.

There is nothing in British law to prevent the king from marrying whomsoever he pleases, but no ruler of the country since Henry VIII has wedded a commoner. Court gossip in London says that Prime Minister Baldwin and the archbishop of Canterbury recently appealed to Edward for greater discretion in his relations with Mrs. Simpson and were hotly rebuffed by the king.

English newspapers imposed on themselves a voluntary censorship in this affair, but it has been broken by the Sunday Referee which prints an article declaring the king "may marry by spring," that this would result in postponement of the coronation, and that tradesmen have been insuring themselves against such a delay.

PERSONAL reports of Presidential and vice presidential candidates, made public by the senate campaign expenditures committee, show that President Roosevelt gave a $500 contribution to the Democratic county committee of Dutchess county, New York, his home, and had spent $10 for postage. Vice President John N. Garner reported that he had received no contributions and made no expenditures.

The Republican candidates, Gov. Alf M. Landon and Col. Frank Knox, reported they had had no personal receipts nor expenditures since nomination, their campaigns being financed by the Republican national committee.

In getting the nomination Landon received $163,480 and spent $164,572. Knox reported personally receiving $35,754 and spending $35,557 before nomination, and the Knox for President committee received $133,818 and spent $143,259.

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate, reported his party had collected $5,614 and spent $6,504 to date.

John Zahn, National Greenback party candidate, reported he had received $1 and spent $2.50 toward his election.

At the same time the American Liberty league, nonpartisan, voluntarily submitted a financial report. The report showed that the organization had received $419,282 since January 1, and spent $461,851.

Keystone State

Pretzel Benders In a Reading Factory.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

WHEN historic Georgetown, D. C. still was the metropolis of the north bank of the Potomac and the city of Washington was little more than a beautiful plan on paper, a bridge was thrown across Rock creek to connect the two.

There were 13 stones on the face of the arch of the bridge. Upon them were inscribed the abbreviated names of the 13 states that had created and successfully defended the Union. On the keystone of that arch were the letters "Pa."

Whether that was the origin of the nickname of the Keystone State or only testimony of it earlier use remains a matter of debate, but the sobriquet was aptly descriptive of its role in American history and industry.

The congress that gave America its Declaration of Independence met, deliberated, and acted on Pennsylvania's receptive soil. The convention that forged the Nation's Constitution labored amid that Commonwealth's genial atmosphere.

The financial wizard who averted the economic disaster which threatened to overwhelm the young nation was that patriotic Pennsylvania banker, Robert Morris.

The fine old philosopher and master of humanized science who won international recognition for the struggling child among nations, and brought us alliance with France, with history-changing consequences, was the revered and picturesque Ben Franklin.

So it has been through the generations. When ship sails no longer met the demands of maritime commerce, Robert Fulton, a native of Pennsylvania, laid the foundations of steam navigation around the world.

Development of Its Industries.

The industries of the Atlantic seaboard became so vast that wood no longer served for fuel, and Pennsylvanians developed their coal resources.

Pittsburgh's Scotch-Irish empire builders expanded the iron industry to a point where Pennsylvania practically equipped the factories of the Mississippi valley and produced both the rails and the rolling stock of the nation's railways.

When whale oil and other animal fats and oils no longer yielded adequate lubricants and illuminants, it was in Pennsylvania, at Titusville, that Col. E. L. Drake drilled the first oil well, thus helping revolutionize the world's ways of living and making possible the present motorized transportation.

Pennsylvania's industrial pioneers inaugurated the reign of steel, thus ushering in the era of skyscrapers in a thousand cities, and the speeding of traffic on the railroads of the country.

To the present hour, the land of William Penn goes forward as one of the foremost industrial communities of the world. Before the depression it was making one-fifth of the world's electrical machinery, refining one-sixth of its sugar, mining a like share of coal, and producing an equal proportion of the world's steel.

The federal census of manufactures shows that among the nation's 51 major industries Pennsylvania ranks first in 17 and holds third place or better in 15 others.

In 42 of the nation's products its factories lead those of every other state. From artificial limbs to zinc products these wares of Pennsylvanias primacy run the gamut of the alphabet. In such diverse industries as coal mining, chocolate and cocoa manufacture, pig-iron production and silk making, steel rolling and wool pulling, cement grinding and lace weaving, coke burning and hosiery knitting, Pennsylvania is first by a wide margin.

Romance In Its Story.

Pennsylvania's history is filled with stirring chapters. The story of its wild life, from the days of primal abundance to virtual extinction and back again to abundance under intelligent human protection, is a true romance of forest and stream. The tenacity with which the many religious sects, drawn there by the broad tolerance of the founder, have adhered steadfastly to their centuries-old customs, and frequently their costumes, consitutes a fascinating story of quaint survivals in a progressive age.

Within Pennsylvania's borders are more people born of native white parents than in any other state of the Union. It has nearly a million more than New York, its closest rival, although the total population of the Empire State is approximately three million greater. In fact, the people of native white parentage in Pennsylvania exceed the total population of any other state with the exception of New York, Ohio, Illinois, Texas and California.

The Pennsylvanian's tendency to migrate is no new phenomenon. For more than a century and a half its restless citizen families have been moving from the old home rooftree, and, with their children and their children's children, have pushed out to the changing frontiers of the country. Their first outpouring was in the colonial period, when large numbers moved down into the Shenandoah valley of Virginia and on into western North Carolina and eastern Tennessee.

This was the migration which carried the Lincolns and the Boones, the Caldwells and the Calhouns, the Prestons and the Christians, the Rutledges and the Breckenridges, to say nothing of that large group of Lutheran, Reformed, Dunkard, and Mennonite pioneers who settled in the Virginia valley and its highlands.

As Ohio and Kentucky and the states beyond opened up to settlement, migrants from Pennsylvania turned westward in regiments; there they were joined by sons and daughters of their uncles and aunts, who had so largely settled western Virginia, eastern Tennessee, and western North Carolina.

Some day a historian will write the saga of the role of Pennsylvania and its descendants in the settlement of the Mississippi valley, and America will realize the debt it owes to the fecund folk born in or descended from Penn's Land who spread over the continent and played such a vital role in the greatest of our valleys.

Leads In Home Ownership.

Although Pennsylvania has furnished more migrants than any other state in the Union, both in the colonial era and up to the present time, the state is still America's foremost land of home owners. The last census shows more dwellings occupied by their owners than in any other state, a total of 1,198,000 owner-occupied homes.

When William Penn came to America, he had title to some 28,000,000 acres of woodland, mountain, and dale. For a dozen decades these forests yielded only to the settler's ax and his new-ground ripping plow. Then larger towns and cities began to grow and there was born an insistent demand for lumber.

This havoc went on until there was left in all the 28,000,000 but a beggarly 20,000 acres of virgin timber. The lumberman had left his tree tops and his sawdust piles to make the most dangerous of fire hazards on millions of acres and to render a thousand streams unfit for fish life.

Forest fires completed the destruction, and millions of blackened, barren acres stood as mute witnesses of the profligacy of man in wasting one of the commonwealth's principal assets.

Floods became more frequent, since barren lands cannot hold back water and give it a chance to soak into the ground. Low-water stages of streams occurred oftener; springs in barren lands cannot collect sufficient water to keep the streams fed in dry weather. Fish by the millions perished when streams were transformed for long periods into dry river and creek beds.

Forest Lands Restored.

Then the thinking citizens of Pennsylvania awakened to the menace the wasteful methods had wrought. State agencies and private interests joined in reforestation and in protection against forest fires.

Today one finds that thirteen millions of acres in the Keystone State are accounted to be forest land. A major portion is in young trees. Wander along the Delaware river, through the Poconos, follow both branches of the Susquehanna and cross their watersheds, travel the Roosevelt highway across the state from east to west, dip down to Emporium, Williamsport, and Jersey Shore, climb Bald Eagle, Tuscarora, Laurel Hill, and South Mountain, and you will begin to understand why some one has proposed that Pennsylvania be renamed the Sapling State—because of its tremendous number of young trees.

Reforestation is beginning to bear major fruit. Floods are becoming rarer and less destructive, for water is absorbed instead of rushing pell-mell riverward. Springs constantly fed by seeping water in turn fill the streams with a more constant current. Fish are accordingly increasing in substantial numbers due to steadier stream flow, seasonal restrictions, bag limits, and artificial propagation.

The Bored Are Boring—

People of Outstanding Personality Are Interested, and Never Blase

"YOUNG people of today," a mother writes, "seem to regard it as a sign of immaturity or weakness to be thrilled with anything. Their idea of sophistication is to appear bored with everything, the having-done-all-seen-all attitude that finds it very difficult to be impressed with anything. It is most annoying to find that anything you can offer them for a good time seems to be inadequate, that the thrills of your own youth cannot be repeated for them. It seems to me they miss a great deal."

I would point out to this mother, says a woman writer of international note, that naturally we cannot expect that the thrills of our youth will equally impress the young people of this day. So much that came to us gradually as colorful experiences are a part of their daily background. But there is something definitely true in what she says of a pose, of a deliberate care never to seem impressed, of a pretense at being bored.

It may interest such young people to know that that super-sophisticate, G. K. Chesterton, said "there are no bores, only people who are bored." In other words there can be nothing interesting about a person who is bored!

That takes us right down to a bedrock fact that can be observed if we will note people of outstanding personality, people whom everybody finds interesting. Without exception they will be people who are vitally interested. They are never bored, never blase. They are able to give out what interests others, because through their interest in things and people about them they are constantly taking in. Their main charm is a certain aliveness, a vitality which has absolutely no relationship with being bored.

Don't Sleep When Gas Presses Heart

If you want to really GET RID OF GAS and terrible bloating, don't expect to do it by just doctoring your stomach with harsh, irritating alkalies and "gas tablets." Most GAS is lodged in the stomach and upper intestine and is due to old poisonous matter in the constipated bowels that are loaded with ill-causing bacteria.

If your constipation is of long standing, enormous quantities of dangerous bacteria accumulate. Then your digestion is upset. GAS often presses heart and lungs, making life miserable. You can't eat or sleep. Your head aches. Your back aches. Your complexion is sallow and pimply. Your breath is foul. You are a sick, grouchy, wretched, unhappy person. YOUR SYSTEM IS POISONED.

Thousands of sufferers have found in Adlerika the quick, scientific way to rid their systems of harmful bacteria. Adlerika rids you of gas and cleans foul poisons out of BOTH upper and lower bowels. The Coal Industry

Washington.—During the recent bitter campaigning, both national political parties engaged in a good deal of palaver about the coal industry. As usual, the politicians were patting the miners on the back, telling them what wonderful assets to the nation they are, and carrying their demagoguery further by criticism of the mine owners every now and then because it was popular with labor to attack employers. Altogether, it was a rather sorry spectacle and, I think, did not do credit to either side to any extent.

But in this report, I want to stress a very much less obvious phase of the problem than was made apparent in any of the electioneering. With all of the verbiage cast aside, with all of the political hoodwinking forgotten, there is a very deep and difficult problem in the coal industry. I think it can be summarized in one question: What is the future of coal, the coal industry, and the thousands of men who know no other source of livelihood than that which they eke out in the bowels of the earth?

This question, if proper analysis is made, encompasses more than the usual factors that operate in economics. It does that because of policies of the federal government, among states and among municipalities. Because of the attempts to influence votes, the whole question has got into politics and that of itself is ruinous, an obstacle to a scientific solution.

Not so many years ago coal mine owners and coal labor units had what amounted to a monopoly on our fuel supply. Then came oil, oil with all of the scientific development that followed in its wake. Despite this, operators and labor leaders continued to take their toll from the hapless user of coal for fuel, be that user a great factory or an individual consumer in furnace or round oak stove. But that was not all. Electricity came along with its constantly increasing automatic control. First, of course, in the larger communities and later it came to villages and farm homes. Still, the mine owners and the coal labor leaders followed an unwise course; still, they continued to take their toll and before they fully realized what the circumstance was, they had succeeded by their acts in building up a desire on the part of millions of people to use some other sort of fuel. The end is not yet, and that is why the subject is most important at this stage of our history.

Public Ownership

During the Roosevelt administration we have seen an impetus given to public ownership of power plants never equalled. I think much of this development has gone on in a hit-and-miss fashion and that eventually the public will pay for the shiftless methods employed in development, but that is beside the point. The present question is whether our nation is going to continue to expand public ownership in such a way as to ruin an industry that is as much a part of our basic economic structure as any other unit of our natural life. I think sometimes it goes beyond that for the reason that, unless people awaken to the fact that they are being hoodwinked to a considerable extent by public ownership propaganda, it is likely to spread and public ownership will become a frankenstein, a parasite on our body public.

When I referred to the destruction of a great industry, I had in mind the thought that the consequences will run in two directions. Yet, paradoxically as it may seem, they constitute a cycle. It works out like this: As the demand for coal declines, it is quite natural that production costs go up. When production costs go up, they eventually reach the point where a further diminution occurs in demand. When that decline in demand occurs, there is only one answer: Labor is thrown out of work because you cannot produce and have those products piled high in storage. It takes money to keep labor and machinery occupied. The coal itself, after being removed from the mines, represents money and it is subject as well to deterioration. So, the ultimate to be expected on this side of the picture is an industry dying of dry rot.

On the other side of the problem is an equally important factor at work. It takes an immense amount of capital, massed in corporate form, to maintain a going concern whether that concern be coal mining, railroading or any other of our great industries. These industries operate largely on funds obtained through the sale of stocks and bonds of the corporation. But it has always been true, and human nature shows no signs of changing, that capital is not attracted to, it does not seek investment in, a declining industry. There you have a possibility at least of insufficient funds to carry through for the coal mining industry until it can readjust itself to the new place it must occupy in our economic structure. It will occupy a new place because it will readjust itself, but it has not done so yet and the consequence of this condition is, in my opinion, coal mine labor is due for some very hard sledding in the next decade, notwithstanding the honeyed words of the politicians.

Blame Demagogues

Now, to turn to the part that government plays in bringing about present conditions I have attempted to show how greed on the part of both capital and labor was responsible in a measure for building up what amounts to ill-will among many coal consumers. But the industry itself is not wholly responsible. Indeed, I rather hold the opinion that government is as much responsible for conditions as the industry itself, and when I say government, I must limit my reference to political demagogues. They always have been shortsighted and they are still shortsighted. They have been and they are now willing to sacrifice great masses of men and money for personal political gain of an entirely transitory character.

I have said before in these columns that the country is being sadly kidded—it is almost tragic—by the wonders of such parasitic organizations as TVA. The public ownership crowd have had a willing leader in President Roosevelt and his hangers-on have promoted his policies of public ownership without being honest as to the ultimate goal, or the eventual effect.

It is not alone that there have been millions wasted in the development of the Tennessee valley electrical mirage. It is not so much that taxpayers throughout the country will be paying a bill and paying it over and over again, that causes me to complain. It is not so much that the Tennessee Valley Authority will never be economically operated or become self-sustaining that brings this outburst. It is the fact that when a government, national, state or local, leads the way in this direction, it wields an influence upon a certain percentage of our population. Since public ownership advocates, in many instances, plain socialism, where in control of these agencies such as TVA, it is perfectly natural that they present to the taxpayers only the most rosy side of the story. They do not disclose to the taxpayers the adverse, the costly side, of the situation. Naturally then, hundreds of thousands of people believe that government can do this sort of thing better than private enterprise. They become convinced that private initiative has been turned into a spigot through which individual pocketbooks are drained. They do not realize that their pocketbooks are being drained much more heavily through public ownership by means of the taxes they take from you and me and everyone else. That is the sad story, made worse by the fact that through nearly four years the Washington government has been encouraging people to believe public ownership propaganda and distrust and destroy private investment.

Expensive Dream

Recent Treasury figures show that the Resettlement Administration has paid approximately $27,750,000 of its total appropriation of $134,518,000 for administrative expenses. That is, the organization which is the pride and joy of Professor Rexford Guy Tugwell has paid that amount of money to job holders in trying to carry out the professor's impossible dream.

While the sum shown as used for administrative expenses by Professor Tugwell is small, compared to the billions of total waste in the Roosevelt administration, the proper way to consider this circumstance is on a percentage basis. If you take your pencil you can calculate that about 20 per cent or one-fifth of all the funds appropriated to Professor Tugwell for resettlement, has been used in management of his plan. It may be a fraction under 20 per cent, but it is so close that even the fastidious Mr. Tugwell would not quarrel about the difference.

One-fifth of an appropriation that is designed theoretically at least to serve for relief purposes is entirely too much. It is not as great perhaps as has happened with one or two other relief appropriations, but it has always been claimed that the Tugwell scheme was planned to reestablish those who have been resettled on a permanent basis. That is to say, it was planned that the bulk of the money should be used in providing those people with a fresh start in life, but I cannot see where they are getting the full measure of help intended if a lot of job holders sit around in Washington offices or in offices in various states using up one-fifth of the total layout of cash.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Jackson—Two hundred of Chris Sorenson's finest chickens were picked out of the flock by night prowlers.

Minneapolis—The twenty-ninth annual northwest automobile show will be held November 21 to 28 at the Minneapolis municipal auditorium.

Duluth—Minnesota produced nearly two-thirds of the iron ore taken from domestic mines last year, the bureau of mines reported in a tabulation.

Lake Elmo—Lake Elmo, which is 190 feet deep, will be stocked with trout, in compliance with requests of the St. Croix Valley Rod and Gun club.

Lester Prairie—Victor Kuhlman, 12-pear-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Kuhlman of near here, lost his right hand when it became caught in the rollers of a corn shredder.

Baudette—Alfalfa seed coming to deaders here and at Spooner has averaged $30,000 a day during the harvest season, records here show. The seed is bringing 3 cents per pound.

St. Peter—Walter M. Hornstein, one of the 16 insane maniacs who escaped from the hospital June 7, stabbed Ruben Adolphson, hospital attendant, in the neck with a home-made knife.

Minneapolis—Hundred of hunters reported good hunting this year prevails in most parts of the state. Pheasants are plentiful considering the weather they've gone through the past pear.

Remer—Burglars entered the Security State Bank of Remer through a window, smashed a hole through a brick wall leading to the vault, cut two holes into the vault and escaped with $5,000.

Springfield—The Springfield Milling Co., which was sold last summer will resume operation soon under the name of the Springfield Milling corporation. The same local management will be in charge.

Duluth—Completing its maiden journey from Norway to Duluth, the new Norse freight-passenger ship, Taborfjell, cleared for Fort William. Next spring, the Taborfjell will return to Duluth on a regular schedule basis.

St. Paul—Some of the land acquisition program of the state conservation department will be delayed slightly in order to keep checks going out to needy forest firefighters, E. V. Willard, commissioner of conservation, said.

Fairmont—The Martin county conservation club issued an appeal to sportsmen of southern Minnesota to refrain from shooting hen pheasants, because of scarcity of birds resulting from last winter's prolonged cold and heavy snow.

Minneapolis—The National Union of Social Justice of Minnesota reported campaign contributions of $10,144, and expenditures of $4,757 in a statement filed with the clerk of the house of representatives in Washington. No contribution was over $100.

Willmar—An additional grant of federal foney will make it possible to have the new Rice Memorial hospital fully equipped before its opening some time in December. The amount of money available for furnishing and equipping the hospital is now raised to nearly $56,000.

Winona—A 15-point program ranging from opposition to any form of teacher's oath to advocacy of a measure requiring automobile drivers to pass a state examination, held the attention of delegates to the fourteenth annual convenion of the Minnesota Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Tracy—Residents of Tracy are signing petitions asking the city council to re-submit to the voters the question of erecting a community building. The petitioners wish the question to again be voted upon at the general election November 3rd. The council will reach a decision in the matter soon.

St. Paul—Human divers will be called upon to lay the last link across the Mississippi river in the $15,500,000 Twin City sewage disposal project. The divers must work in a trench, 8 to 14 feet deep, on the bottom of the river to connect the west Minneapolis interceptor with the Twin City sewer line here.

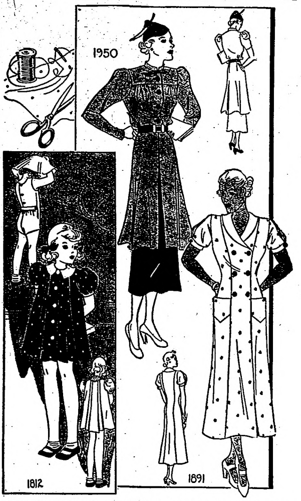
Faribault—Award of contracts for 23 highway construction projects in 22 counties totaling $1,129,778 was announced by State Highway Commissioner N. W. Elsberg. Largest of the jobs will be the new concrete viaduct in Faribault to span the Straight river and two railroads. More than 950 feet long, it will be the longest grade separation job in the state.

Pine Island—This is the cheese-manufacturing center of Minnesota. There are some 35 cheese factories scattered throughout this north section of Olmsted county. Hundreds of farmers make their principal money out of selling milk to the cheese factories. In a year about 9,000,000 pounds of cheese are made in these factories and shipped out. Over $1,000,000 is paid for that cheese.

Minneapolis—Diphtheria has taken lives of five school children since October 1.

St. Paul—Minnesota will be denied $125,000 in federal aid for the blind because the 1935 law does not conform to provisions of the federal social security act, state board of control members were notified. The 1935 legislature appropriated $125,000 annually for aid to the blind. Control board members said the $250,000 Minnesota plan must be abandoned unless the legislature revises the law to conform with federal requirements.

A Trio of Trim Togs



This trio of trim togs offers an appealing variety to the woman who sews at home. There is style and economy in every design, and a sufficiently wide range of sizes to accommodate most any wardrobe.

Pattern No. 1950, the tunic, is one of the season's smartest, featuring a modish stand-up collar and just the right amount of flare or "swing." A grand ensemble for any youthful figure. Simply and inexpensively made, this clever pattern is designed for sizes: 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20; 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 14 requires three and one-eighth yards for the tunic in 39 inch material and two yards for the skirt. Five-eighths yard ribbon required for the bow.

Pattern No. 1891 is a perfect fitting princess wrap around or a coat frock with a reversible closing. It has everything demanded of a morning or utility frock—style, slimming lines, slashed set-in sleeves, one or two patch pockets, simplicity of design, and a double breasted closing which is smart and compelling. Available in a wide range of sizes, 14 to 20; and from 32 to 48, this versatile frock will win a favorite spot in your clothes closet in short order. Size 16 requires four and three-eighths yards of 35 inch material.

For tiny tots, pattern No. 1812 has all the adorable qualities you like to associate with darling cherubs. The pattern includes a waist and pantie combination, as well as the frock and will serve for party or playtime wear with equal facility. Utterly simple in design and construction, it will slide through your machine in a brief hour or two and be a source of never ending delight to your style conscious daughter. Available in sizes: 2, 3, 4, and 5 years and suitable for a wide selection of fabrics. Size 3 requires just two and five-eighths yards of 35 or 39 inch material, plus three-eighths yard contrast for the collar and sleeve band.

Re-elect Buckler and Send a Farmer to Congress

Congressman Richard Thompson Buckler is the Farmer-Labor nominee for U. S. Representative in Congress. He deserves your Vote and Support. He fearlessly led the farmers' fight in the State Senate and in the U. S. Congress. He voted for you. YOU vote for HIM now! When the farmers prosper, business and labor prosper.

Buckler Pledges Continued Support of and Advocates:

—the Frazier-Lemke bill plan which would provide farm and home loans at 1½ per cent interest and 1½ per cent amortization payments.
—the bill fixing guaranteed minimum price for farm products.
—adequate aid and relief for the drouth-stricken and needy.
—more liberal and adequate national federal old age pensions.
—fairer treatment for disabled veterans, widows and orphans.
—further legislation in behalf of the independent merchant and the small business man.
—a general federal aid for rural, village and city schools.
—federal government control of money and credits.
—favor additional silver legislation to raise agricultural prices.
—extension of rural electrification.

His Record Is 100% for the People.

Buckler voted and fought for the Frazier-Lemke Farm Refinancing Bill and all other legislation in be-half of the farmers.

Buckler was a member of the Steering Committee and a coauthor and sponsor of the Robinson-Patman Equal Opportunity in Business Bill.

Buckler voted for the bank deposit guaranty law.

Buckler voted for stock market regulation to curb the gamblers.

Buckler voted for the bonus and supported all veteran legislation.

For character and honesty, courage and fearlessness, ability and efficiency, aggressiveness and experience, vote for and send R. T. Buckler back to Congress for a second term.

ST. HILAIRE CASTS BIG ELECTION VOTE

None of the voters in St. Hilaire forgot to vote election day as there were 173 votes cast in the village, the largest vote recorded here for several years past. The Democratic national slate was favored by local voters, President Roosevelt receiving 106 votes to 53 for Landon. For U. S. Senator, Lundeen received 96 to 55 for Christianson. The Farmer-Labor state slate was a favorite. Benson, for governor was favored with 101 votes to 63 for Martin A. Nelson. However, the voters deviated from a straight Farmer-Labor ticket to extent of giving Secretary of State Mike Holm, republican incumbent, an almost 2 to 1 vote over his opponent.

For representative in Congress from the Ninth district, the voters gave Buckler 84, Haugen 47 and Brandon 20.

For representative from the 65th district, the contest was closer. Day received 72 votes, Jones 40, Melby 84 and Waldal 62.

For Judge of Probate Court, Andrew Bottelson, incumbent was given 101 votes to 46 for Lars Backe. Clerk of Court Adolf Eklund, who had no opposition, received 120 votes. For county commissioner, Paul Roy, incumbent, was favored by St. Hilaire voters to extent of 155 votes to 8 for his opponent, Ole Skaar.

A. NAPLIN EDITOR GUSTAVUS WEEKLY

Alvin Naplin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Naplin of Black River community west of here, who is a student at Gustavus-Adolphus College at St. Peter, was signally honored recently by election to the head of the editorial staff of the Gustavian Weekly, the college newspaper. Alvin, who is a graduate of St. Hilaire high school, has been a member of the staff for some time past.

P. T. A. MEETS NOV. 13

Postponed meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association will be held at the high school assembly Friday evening, November 13. See next week's paper for the program. The committee hopes to have a good speaker for this meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ingstad and daughters of Jessie Lake, and Pearl Simonson of Deer River, motored here Saturday and spent until Sunday at the home of Mrs. Ingstad and Miss Simonson's father, Peter Simonson.

A light snow to the depth of less than an inch fell over this section Monday. During the same time a much heavier storm swept over parts of North and South Dakota, Nebraska and other nearby states, blocking roads in many places.

Woodrow Wilson, who is employed in the central part of the state, came Thursday to spend a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Wilson.

Mrs. Alice Stuart, district president of the W. C. T. U., will put on a demonstration of "Alcoholism" at a Ladies' Aid to be held at the M. E. Church, Friday afternoon, Nov. 13. All in the community are invited to attend.

PAUL ROY RE-ELECTED

County Commissioner Paul Roy was re-elected Tuesday for another four year term. In the village he received 155 votes to 8 for his opponent, Ole Skaar. Most of the seven townships in the Third district also gave him handsome majorities. Mr. Roy has been a very efficient commissioner, and his re-election meets with general approval thruout the district.

LOCAL RED CROSS TO SEEK MEMBERS

The local Red Cross organization will put on a membership drive commencing November 11 and ending Nov. 27. Out of each dollar membership, 50 cents goes to the National Red Cross to carry on its activities and the remainder is for local use. A special rate is given for group memberships such as clubs, aids and other organizations.

It is well known what good work has been done by the ladies of the Red Cross in extending assistance to needy in our own community, and whole hearted response to their appeal for memberships will permit them to continue the good work. Committees will solicit every one in town and the surrounding territory for memberships.

HAS ANNIVERSARY EDITION

A special fiftieth anniversary number of the Fertile Journal came to our desk this week. The edition consists of the regular weekly issue and, in addition, two sections of tabloid style containing a fine collection of historical data concerning Fertile, the country surrounding it, as well as Polk County. The whole edition is very well done, well printed and attractively arranged. It contains a fine lot of advertising from business places at Fertile as well as from many nearby towns, and reflects much credit to the enterprising young publisher of that paper, Melvin Sherva, formerly of St. Hilaire. Mr. Sherva is giving the Fertile community an excellent newspaper and is getting whole-hearted support of the town in return. Friends back home hope this happy situation will continue, and that town and newspaper will both benefit as a result of such co-operation.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Pladson of Hatton, N. D., accompanied by Harry Just, motored over Sunday and were guests at the Emil Just home. Harry Just has been employed at Hatton the past season.

PHEASANTS PLENTIFUL IN WESTERN COUNTIES

Reports received by the division of game and fish indicate that pheasants are very plentiful in counties in the west central portion of the state in which the longer open season is in effect. This section of the state was not so severely affected by the heavy snows and blizzards last winter and bird loss was relatively small. Counties in which the pheasant season remains open until November 13 are: Wilkin, Ottertail, Traverse, Grant, Douglas, Pope, Stevens, Big Stone, Swift, Chippewa, Lac Qui Parle, and Yellow Medicine.

FIRE AT EUCLID

Two residences burned to the ground last Thursday at Euclid west of here. The fire, said to have started from an overheated stove, quickly spread. Because of lack of fire fighting equipment at Euclid, the fire departments of Crookston and Warren were called on for assistance, but they were unable to render much aid because of lack of water.

O. M. MANDT, F. RACE CO. BOARD WINNERS

In the First commissioner district there were five candidates for county commissioner, Frank Race, formerly commissioner from that district, won handily over all his opponents.

Co. Commissioner O. M. Mandt won re-election in the Fifth district by out-distancing Isaac Wilson and Iver Iverson, the former a nominee at the primary election, and the latter a sticker candidate. Mr. Iverson made an excellent showing in spite of being handicapped by having to resort to stickers.

BOTTELSON RE-ELECTED

Tabulation of the vote thruout the county shows that Judge of Probate Andrew Bottelson has been re-elected to the office which he has so efficiently filled the past term. His opponent, Lars Backe, made a spirited contest.

BOAR VICIOUSLY ATTACKS FARMER

Blooming Prairie.—Viciously at~~tacking~~ Carl Ruzek of Blooming Prairie, a 300 pound boar knocked him to the ground, jabbed his tusks into his legs and bit whole mouthfuls of flesh from them. As a result the victim was seriously ill during the following week and there was danger of infection developing in the deep wounds. The attack occurred while Mr. Ruzek was moving a number of hogs into another pen. As he herded them along, the large boar suddenly became angered and turned on the man. Rushing at him he knocked him to the ground and then sank his teeth into his legs. Carl's father rushed to his aid and a pet dog leaped at the furious boar attempting to draw his attention away from the victim. The boar also severely bit the dog, before he could finally be cornered and locked up. Twenty stitches were required to close the deepest wounds on Carl's right leg.

ROOSEVELT SCORES NATIONAL VICTORY

Voters of the United States expressed their approval Tuesday at the polls, of President Roosevelt, the present Democratic administration, and the New Deal, by giving President Roosevelt the largest popular vote ever given any presidential candidate in history of the country. Incomplete returns from the national election indicate President Roosevelt and his ticket have carried all but two states of the Union. Governor Landon, the Republican candidate, conceded his defeat shortly after midnight as huge majorities were reported from heavy voting eastern and southern states.

F.-L. Ticket Leads

While it is still too early to give a comprehensive report on the state ticket in Minnesota, early returns are indicative of a big victory for the Farmer-Laborites. With possible exception of Secretary of State Mike Holm, State Treasurer Julius Schmahl, Republican incumbents, the Farmer-Laborites appear to have made a clean sweep of state offices as well as gaining a number of seats in the legislature, the exact number of which will not be known until final returns are in.

In the 65th district, Walter Day of Clearwater county, and Rep. Melby of Red Lake county appear to have won out over their rivals Marius Waldal and Geo. P. Jones.

Fairly complete returns in Ninth district show Congressman R. T. Buckler of Crookston to be re-elected without doubt.

ULRICH-CRAFT WEDDING

Miss Hulda Ulrich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ulrich, Sr., became the bride of Clarence Craft, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Craft, at a ceremony performed at the parsonage of Immanuel Lutheran church at Wylie at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, October 27, Rev. Paul H. Burgdorf performing the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Vay Rewerts, brother-in-law and sister of the bride were the attendants of the bride and bridegroom.

A wedding supper was served the immediate relatives of the bridal party at the home of the bride's parents with a wedding reception in the evening.

The newlyweds will make their home on the bridegroom's farm in River township. A large circle of friends join in extending congratulations and best wishes.—R. L. F. Gazette.

Good Company

Might I give counsel to any young hearer, I would say to him, try to frequent the company of your betters. In books and life is the most wholesome society; learn to admire rightly; the great pleasure of life is that.

Note what the great men admire—they admired great things, narrow spirits admire basely, and worship meanly.

Trade Balance for Nine Months Is Unfavorable—Mrs. "Wally" Simpson Gets Divorce—Goering Launches Nazi Economic Plan.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

EXPORTS of manufactured goods and raw materials exceeded imports into the United States during September by more than four million dollars, according to a report released by Secretary of Commerce Roper. But the flow the other way was so strong during the previous three months that the country suffered an unfavorable balance of trade during the first nine months of the year amounting to $33,136,000. This is in contrast with a favorable balance of $66,496,000 in the corresponding period of 1935.

Secretary Roper

Roper minimized the situation, declaring that heavy exports of raw cotton, tobacco and automobiles would probably bring the trade balance more into line with previous years. Pressed for further explanation Roper insisted that "our government as such does not compete with other governments in the selling of goods," and this was the province of private business. On reciprocal trade agreements he was mum.

"We'd like to end the year with a favorable trade balance, naturally," he said, "but we are going through a period of study and readjustment in world trade."

In fact, Roper found the increase in import trade to be "encouraging." He said that it showed our industries were buying raw materials abroad for expansion of their production in this country. Heavy increases in wheat and meats resulted from the drouth, according to Roper, rather than from the killing of six million pigs and non-raising of grain under the AAA.

UNCLE SAM'S nephews and nieces now number 128,429,000, according to the estimate of Director William L. Austin of the bureau of census. The new figure, as of July 1, represented an increase of 908,000, or 0.71 per cent, since July 1, 1935. It was based on the number of births and deaths during the year ending June 30, 1936, and the excess of immigration over emigration.

Births exceeded deaths by 899,956 and the net immigration was 8,044, according to the data taken by Austin. The population figure on the basis of the 1930 census was 122,775,046, and the biggest annual increase since then was 1,022,000, for the year ending July 1, 1931.

The bureau of agricultural economics also has been doing some population estimating. It says the back to the farm movement of the depression years has halted and that the farm population remained practically stationary during 1935, being 31,809,000 at the end of that year. This figure, the bureau says, was only slightly greater than in 1920 and "somewhat less" than in 1910.

PROCEEDINGS lasting nineteen minutes in the court of assizes at Ipswich, England, sufficed to give marital freedom to Mrs. "Wally" Simpson. Justice Sir Anthony Hawke heard neatly arranged evidence of the infidelity of Ernest Simpson, who was not represented, and gruffly gave a decree nisi to the attractive American woman who has been and is the close friend of King Edward VIII. For six months she will be on probation, technically chaperoned at all times, and if her behavior satisfies the king's proctor she will be unqualifiedly free April 27 to marry again. Whether or not her new husband, if she takes one, will be King Edward is a question that only time and the two persons most directly concerned can determine.

Mrs. Simpson

Mrs. Simpson returned from Ipswich to her London residence on Cumberland terrace, Regents park, and there told interviewers that she was angered and humiliated by the international sensation her divorce has caused. She said she might go abroad for a time but that she would never return to the United States because of "all the nasty things" said of her here.

The Week, a radical London weekly, was the first English newspaper to carry an open reference to Mrs. Simpson's friendship with King Edward. The article was at the same time a denunciation of the American press for giving the story such prominence and of the British press for suppressing it entirely. It also made it clear that there would be widespread opposition to a marriage between Edward and "Wally." Papers from Paris and elsewhere outside the United Kingdom have been in great demand in London, but of course the vast majority of the English people know nothing about the affair.

SPURRED to quick action by the new accord between Germany and Italy, Leon Blum's popular front cabinet approved a large increase in France's military air force, already reputed to be one of the most powerful in the world. To modernize and build up the aerial squadrons the government will spend $230,000,000 at once. It was reported, too, that the cabinet decided to ask parliament to vote extraordinary funds for the fortification of the northern frontier because of Belgium's reversion to a policy of armed neutrality.

BENITO MUSSOLINI rattled his sword again on the occasion of the fourteenth anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome. "The Italian people," he proclaimed, "today are ready and determined to defend as never before—with all their force right up to the last drop of blood—victory and empire."

As for Fascism, he said, "When it finds obstacles in its path, it throws itself against them and burns its bridges behind it."

NOT to be outdone in martial gestures by other nations, Japan trotted out her entire navy for review by Emperor Hirohito. It was the greatest fleet ever brought together in Asiatic waters, comprising 108 warships aggregating nearly 700,000 tons and manned by 40,000 men. Large numbers of aircraft also took part in the evolution in Osaka bay.

GEN. HERMANN WILHELM GOERING, German minister of air and now the director of the Nazi four-year economic scheme to make the reich independent of the rest of the world in raw materials, launched his program at a great Nazi rally in Berlin. "We shall hack finger after finger off the foreign hand clutching at Germany's throat within the next four years," he declared.

Gen. Goering

Outlining his plans, Goering said no German had starved, nor would starve. The high seas fishing fleet will be increased, he asserted, so the people can eat fish when meat is not available. Whale fishing will be developed for the margarine it can produce, he promised.

Goering urged all Germans to follow the example of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler who, he said, eats neither meat nor butter. The audience yelled with delight when the robust Goering told them he had lost 22 pounds by eating less butter.

Germany would prefer the old system of international exchange of wares, but this now is impossible in a mad world, so Germany will build her factories, produce her own synthetic rubber and her own substitutes for cotton and other materials for which she now must spend millions of dollars yearly, the general declared.

MANY American travelers join the English in mourning the death of Sir Edgar Britten, commander of the great liner Queen Mary and commodore of the Cunard-White Star lines. He was stricken with paralysis in Southampton and died within a few hours. Sir Edgar was sixty-two years old and first went to sea as a lad of eighteen in sailing ships. He was knighted by King George V in 1934.

EIGHT armored cars escorted by armed private guards and state police, carried a fortune of $25,000,000 from the estate of the late Col. E. H. R. Green in South Dartmouth, Mass., to the First National bank of Boston.

The fortune, which consists of the famous coin collection, valued at 5 millions; the stamp collection, valued at 3½ millions; a large amount of cash and securities, and a quantity of uncut diamonds, has been under constant guard at the Green home since his death.

BEFORE taking a recess of two weeks the United States Supreme court announced that it would review and hand down a decision at this term upon the Wagner labor relations act. Many lawyers believe this law will be held unconstitutional, for in the Guffey coal act decision the Supreme court held that the relationship between employers and employees was local and beyond the power of congressional regulation.

SECRETARY OF LABOR FRANCES PERKINS announced that the third national conference on labor legislation, designed to stimulate the raising of work standards through federal and state co-operative efforts, will be called into session in Washington on November 9, and will last three days.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Springfield—In two days physicians here vaccinated more than 300 persons against smallpox.

Little Falls—Henry Moore, 17, of Little Falls, drowned when the boat in which he was hunting ducks capsized.

Atwater—Atwater dedicated its new addition to the school, which includes an auditorium, gymnasium and class rooms.

Northfield—Northfield's new postoffice, said to be the finest federal building of its size in the state, was open for public inspection before moving day.

Duluth—Flame-throwers of the type used in the World war may be utilized to back-fire forest fires next summer. The plan was discussed at a meeting of forestry officials here.

Sauk Centre—Loss in a blaze which destroyed three business places and threatened an entire city block before it was brought under control, was estimated at more than $50,000.

Alexandria—A grade shorthorn cow in the herd of Theodore Johnson, who lives near Kensington, gave birth to triplets. Two of the calves are snow white and one is red and white.

Benson—A hunting accident claimed the life of Ernest Larson, 32, butter maker at Freedom, when he was accidentally shot by a gun in the hands of his brother, Joe Larson, St. Cloud.

Minneapolis—A $15,000 fund for immunizing Minneapolis poor children against diphtheria and smallpox was voted by the board of public welfare meeting as a committee of the whole.

Evansville—By a vote of 150 to 50 the village of Evansville voted to issue bonds for the erection of a new community hall and gymnasium. A part of the cost will be provided by federal funds.

So. St. Paul—Wage increases of 7 per cent were given hourly and piece-work employes of the Cudahy Packing company and hourly employes of Swift & Co., managements of the two concerns announced.

Moose Lake—The state investment board made available $1,200,000 as the state's share of the $2,181,675 construction fund for the new state hospital for the insane at Moose Lake, Julius Schmahl, state treasurer, announced.

Litchfield—Deer are returning to Litchfield's environs on the basis of recent reports, T. W. Whitmore sighted an animal near the city limits. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Anderson of Le Sueur also saw two deer near Corvuso, south of Litchfield.

Grand Rapids—The state banking department has authorized the Warba State Bank to change its name to the Grand Rapids State Bank and its location to Grand Rapids. The order also authorized an increase in capital stock from $10,000 to $25,000.

Buffalo Lake—To celebrate its being clear of debt, Buffalo Lake held a Halloween carnival and bonfire. The burning of the bonds, now paid, was the highlight of the program which was sponsored by the Village council and the Women's Improvement League.

St. Paul—Approximately 450 snow plows, distributed among 16 state highway maintenance districts, are ready to keep Minnesota trunk highways open to winter traffic, according to N. W. Elsberg, state commissioner. To prevent blocked roads, the highway department has erected more than 1,000 miles of snow fence where drifting is expected.

Moorhead—Governors Walter Welford of North Dakota and Hjalmar Petersen of Minnesota lauded Fargo and Moorhead for the fine spirit of co-operation between the two cities which has made the bridge possible, when they spoke at the dedication of the new $300,000 Front street bridge over the Red river here. Great crowds witnessed the parades, dedication and ribbon-cutting ceremonies opening the long span which joins Minnesota and North Dakota.

Duluth—A 50,000-bushel cargo of Argentine corn, the first ever to be brought to the head of the lakes, was received by the Capitol Elevator Co. here. The South American corn will be sold through regular channels at about $1.05 per bushel as compared with a price of $1.10 quoted for domestic corn, Mr. Graves said. Practically no domestic corn is on hand in Twin Ports elevators and not a single bushel is in the bins at the Capitol elevator.

Winger—Police and Polk county deputies are on the lookout for robbers who broke into the Farmers State bank here and escaped with $4,000. The raid brought the loot in three recent robberies in the state to $16,000. As in other cases, the bandits broke into the rear of the bank and cracked the safe by use of acetylene torches. Banks were robbed at Eitzen ($7,000) and at Remer ($5,000). All three were robbed by the same gang, authorities believe.

Mankato—Minnesota's highways—state, county and urban—will ze zoned for definite maximum speeds, if recommendations adopted by the Minneapolis public safety committee are approved by the state legislature. Delegates from all parts of the state, comprising the membership of the committee, approved a program calling for: Maximum speeds of 60 miles an hour on super highways of the state. Maximum speeds of 45 miles an hour on county and secondary roads. Maximum speeds of 30 miles an hour in built-up areas and in cities

by William Bruckart

National Press Building — Washington, D. C.

Washington—I have been wondering whether the rank and file of the American citizens have been able to piece together the many loose ends of the distressing conditions extant throughout the world. It is to be recognized, of course, that when a man like Dictator Stalin of Russia makes a statement that war in Europe is just ahead, it awakens the peoples of the world with a sudden start. That is the spectacular side. But there is much more about European political conditions than is disclosed in the Stalin declaration.

World Conditions

The thing that students and observers of European affairs can see in conditions abroad, as they view them in the light of our own State Department's information, is that a gigantic battle is on between two schools of thought. On the one hand is communism. On the other hand, and just as firmly entrenched and as deeply determined, is fascism. Followers of these two lines of thought are both literally and figuratively at each other's throat, and the picture when pieced together, can lead to no other conclusion than that which Stalin foresees, namely, war.

I have lately heard some observers make the statement that the Spanish rebellion is the crux of the problem. I cannot agree with that. Spain and her revolution may prove to be the spark that ignites the European powder keg, but Spain and her revolution are just incidents in the developments that came originally from the overthrow of the Czar's government in Russia and the establishment for the first time of a commune of the proletariat in the world.

It was unfortunate for the world and for those people who wanted to promote peace at all times that the Versailles treaty had to take shape as it did. The Versailles treaty subjugated Germany beyond all reason. I think that will be accepted by all save the most violent partisans of the late President Wilson. It seems to me, however, that the Versailles treaty has proved to be the second stage in the chain of circumstances that led to Mussolini in Italy, Hitler in Germany, overthrow of the royalists in Spain, and lately the election of a "people's front" in France.

Any analysis of that chain of circumstances cannot fail to include the effect the Versailles treaty had upon European conditions. In some ways, the effect was direct; in others, it was indirect, and the full import of the treaty provisions were not evident until eight or ten or even twelve years after the four great powers had made that treaty effective and, they believed, effectually disarmed and bottled up Germany.

After many conversations with diplomats, foreign students and Washington government officials, I believe too much importance cannot be attached to the attempt made by the Versailles treaty to break up political jurisdictions. The treaty, it will be remembered, created a vast number of insignificant and rather helpless states in Europe. They were supposed to serve as a buffer between the larger nations and prevent snarling and making faces among those world powers that had engaged in the last war. The effect, it has now been proved, is exactly the opposite.

Hatred Exists

Throughout Europe, according to the official and unofficial word that I get, there is a new kind of hatred among nations. It is not the hatred that obtained between France and Germany under Kaiser Wilhelm. It is a hatred not between the statesmen of the various countries, but among the rank and file of the people. That is to say, it is a vengeful feeling and when that is understood, it is not difficult to realize how vicious the undercurrent of relations is from Russia on the north to the Straits of Gibraltar, or even into Africa on the south.

To bring this condition into today's light, one hardly need look further than the various cabled dispatches from European capitals, each telling a story how the respective governments are watching the Spanish revolution. Again, the Russian Stalin puts the thing into a spectacular relief. If reports can be accredited, and official information indicates that they can be regarded as having a basis of fact, Stalin is ready to lend assistance to the so-called loyalist armies in Spain.

Now the loyalist armies, representing the government that is barely holding on by the skin of its teeth, are wholly communistic. Hence, Stalin's interest.

But the Russian dictator might be regarded as horning into a mess that does not concern his nation, except for another and most important piece of information. That information, not officially confirmed but generally believed, is to the effect that Italy's Mussolini has a finger in the pie on the fascist side of the Spanish revolution. The rebel armies in Spain are fascists. Hence it is quite understandable how the Italian dictator may be mixed up in promoting, even extending military assistance, to the rebel Spaniards. Thus we have definitely a triangle that surrounds the peoples of Europe. Within the boundaries of that triangle are jealousies unparalled, political propaganda of a sort never before unleashed on the world, and millions upon millions of people who may be classed as unthinking. They are of a type comparable to the lowest grade of American individuals who, while not wholly illiterate, cannot be accredited with the power to reason. They are being led into the very jaws of another war by wholly unscrupulous and unprincipled agitators who are posing as the friend of the common man. They are working on fertile ground.

We Can Stay Out

Repeatedly, I hear questions asked concerning whether the United States is likely to get involved in that bottomless pit of Europe and, a kindred question, whether communism and fascism are gaining in the United States. The answer to the first half of that question must be made in two ways. We are likely to get involved unless some of our government policies are changed. But we can stay out if those policies do undergo revision. Whether we find ourselves embroiled in that horrible mess, depends entirely on the Washington government and the attitude of the Washington government appears entirely upon the attitude of the American people.

And that statement brings me to the most important observation that I have to make in connection with this discussion. It is now a definite fact that communists are spreading their propaganda through the United States in an effort to create a war spirit. It is the beginning of their movement to drag us into another world war and if we get in, it means the end of the American nation, as the land of freedom for us all. Our economic structure, as well as our government, will be destroyed. I have no hesitancy in making such a statement.

After the World war it took us twenty years to recognize what the cost of that war was. I mean the cost of disturbed lives more than I refer to money cost. The depression resulted from that war just as surely as the sun shines, and we are all now getting well fed up with this depression. And so I say on the basis of conclusions given me from countless authoritative sources, we cannot stand another war of the proportions of the World war and retain our government in its present form, our traditions, our institutions. There will be no preventing such a breakdown.

Roosevelt Trapped?

As I have said in these columns before, one particular criticism that I have against the Roosevelt administration is its capitulation to Russia. Frankly, I believe Mr. Roosevelt was trapped. I believe he saw too late what the full meaning of his action was when he recognized Russia—that is, recognized his mistake too late unless he believes in the doctrine of the communists. In any event, it is my firm conviction that the recognition of the Soviet opened the door through which now are marching hordes of men and women squinty-eyed, unprincipled in character, unpronounceable names, ruthless in design. They are bringing the propaganda which I mentioned. This is not intended to be a scare story. The evidence of communistic propaganda probably is all about you in your own communities. It is subtle, cleverly handled. Sometimes, it is even very boldly done. For example, in many of the larger cities today, handbills in appearance like those that are used announcing a public sale, are finding their way into the playgrounds of public schools. Allegedly brilliant lecturers are going about the country making what appear to be educational addresses, but containing, in many instances, propaganda argument in support of the communistic theory.

There are many other types of this propaganda under way. Professor Rexford Guy Tugwell published a text book on government a few years ago and he has succeeded in getting that volume into the special list of books for Delaware schools. It contains declarations definitely opposed to the American form of government.

It is unnecessary to point out more of these things. The point is quite definite and clear. The movement toward communism in this country is proceeding slowly, cautiously, because the communistic leaders recognize American sentiment must be changed slowly, but the slimy head of the snake is coming out of the water and it will be much bolder if we become involved in the European struggle. Communists would make of us American citizens each and every one a communist and would throw us into the world struggle on the side of communism and against fascism.

Wives, Know Yourselves!—

Accurate Analysis Will Do Much to Overcome Difficulty in Wedded Life

SPEAKING on the question of trial marriages, a well known writer said, "There should be no need for trial when two people know their own abilities and have measured themselves accurately. Two people who understand themselves will never, I believe, have any difficulty living happily together after marriage."

That is a new slant on the question of success in marriage, supplements a woman writer of national fame. Not "Know thy husband" — or "wife," but "know thyself!"

And, come to think of it, isn't most of the discontent and dissatisfaction in marriage traceable to ideas of ourselves—that may be misconceptions, no less than our illusions about the other person?

How many women's dissatisfaction with their husband has as its source the thought of all they gave up to marry him, all they "might have had" if they had married a certain other man?

How many women's discontent with the role of wife and mother springs from the thought of how much more fascinating pastimes they might have had if they had followed that career?

How many girl's impossible expectations of a fulltime lover and Prince Charming originates in an exaggerated notion of their own devastating beauty and charm?

If all discontented wives would look deeply unto themselves, measure themselves, stop fooling themselves, many might discover that the other man they might have married is a self-nurtured illusion; that the career of their dreams is not a soft snap and a joy forever; but a grueling, exhausting job which might have worn them out if they had qualified for it, which they probably would have been unable to do; that they themselves are neither devastating beauties nor always charming, but women who are frequently disappointing and difficult to live with. They might discover and admit to themselves that they are greatly in debt to their husbands for many things that make life easier and better and more worthwhile—that they would not get along so well without them.

Then they might think more of doing their part of trying to make those husbands happy. And that effort on the part of one must inevitably go a long way toward a mutually happy and successful marriage.

OF COURSE, children should never drink coffee. And many grown-ups, too, find that the caffein in coffee disagrees with them. If you have headaches or indigestion or can't sleep soundly...try Postum. It contains no caffein. It is simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened.

You may miss coffee at first, but after 30 days you'll love Postum for its own rich, satisfying flavor. Postum comes in two forms—Postum Cereal, the kind you boil, and Instant Postum, made instantly in the cup. Either way it is easy to make, delicious, economical, and may prove a real help. 25 Years Ago

From Spectator issue of Oct. 28
1911

Emil Just, who had sold his farm southeast of town, moved with his family into the house formerly occupied by Rev. S. Palm.

Norman Hannay, formerly of this place, and then of Mt. Vernon, Wash., was married Oct. 14 to Miss Winnie Evans of Ferndale, Wash. They visited with friends here that week while on a wedding trip to Chicago.

Archie Whaley was over from Bemidji to attend the King-Skottem wedding.

Adolph Satterberg and Gust Erickson bought the large dry lumber shed at the old mill site. The former was to use his lumber for building a new livery barn.

C. C. Elliot made a deal for the Hotel Markham property, Rumor was that the place was to be re-opened.

Ed. Enright, prominent farmer residing south of here, received appointment as deputy oil inspector for Red Lake and Pennington counties.

Lazar & Lazar were putting on a special fall sale at their general store in the village.

TAMED CROW SPEAKS, LAUGHS, DOES TRICKS

Buffalo Lake.—A tame crow which talks, laughs, sneezes and performs queer stunts is an interesting pet possessed by the Wiggert family in Buffalo Lake. One of the amusing things about the bird, six years old, is the fact that it can enunciate words clearly. The sound is made by peculiar movements of the neck and tongue, although the tongue is not split. The bird, taken from a nest and tamed by Mr. Wiggert, says, "Polly, Harold and Hello", sneezes and laughs and plays foolish tricks on people. On one occasion the crow followed children to school, riding three miles into the country on the rear axle of a truck. When the truck stopped, Polly, the crow, flew down, said, "hello" and laughed heartily.

GAME HUNTERS WARNED AGAINST SHOOTING ELK

Several game wardens will be stationed near the Red Lake refuge during the deer season to warn hunters that they may encounter elk that have strayed from the refuge. Employees of the state forest service recently counted 31 elk in territory outside the northwest corner of the Red Lake refuge. Last year 27 elk were transferred from Itasca Park to the refuge, and they appear to be thriving.

UNCONTROLLED TRUCK DASHES THROUGH TOWN

Chaska.—Three persons had a rendezvous with death last week in a wild ride through Chaska, pushed by the inertia of almost 28,000 pounds and without the aid of brakes. It was a breath-taking ride for the trio, who escaped without injury. The trailer of a truck had been loaded with eight tons of feed, seed, and flour in Minneapolis and the driver, his wife and assistant driver headed for Marshall. When they reached the top of Chaska hill on No. 41, the driver shifted from high into third and applied the hydraulic brakes. Half way down the hill a part on the brakes broke, the fluid shot out and the load started speeding down hill. The electric brakes were applied on the trailer, but soon failed. Then the emergency brake was thrown on, but the momentum of the great load kept the truck rolling and the friction of the brakes started a fire. Flames shot up into the cab through the floor and came within inches of a 50 gallon gasoline tank. The speedometer climbed from 30 to 35, to 40, to 45, to 50, and no one knows how much higher. The truck and van shot across the trunk highway intersection at terrific speed. It sped across the railroad tracks on which a train had passed only a few minutes before. The dash ended without injury to anyone when the driver took a chance on striking an upgrade pulling the truck to the curb in front of a store, where the front wheels climbed the curb and came within five feet of crashing into the store front.

KNUD WEFALD DIED SUNDAY IN ST. PAUL

Knud Wefald, member of the state railroad and warehouse commission, and former congressman from this district, died suddenly of heart disease Sunday night at his home at St. Paul. He was seriously ill a year ago after having an infected eye removed, and never completely recovered though he had been able to attend to his office duties in recent months.

He served two terms in congress from this district, succeeding the late Halvor Steenerson of Crookston. He had a wide reputation as a fighting liberal, and was elected congressman on the Farmer-Labor ticket.

He was born in Norway 67 years ago and came to this country when a young man. For several years he was in the lumber business at Hawley, then became editor of Normanden, a Norwegian paper published at Fargo. Funeral services were conducted, and interment took place today at his old home at Hawley.

FEDERAL APPROVAL FOR HALL PROJECT

While here Tuesday, District Engineer Webb of Crookston, informed members of the village council that federal approval had been given the application of St. Hilaire for a grant under PWA for erection of a community building. Official notification to the village has not been received as yet. but is expected to reach here very soon. Plans for the proposed building, and application for a grant, were sent in some time ago, and many citizens were under the impression the matter had been mislaid somewhere since nothing was heard concerning it. The original plans, as sent in, call for a building 40x90 feet which would make a fine addition to the village since there is but very limited space available now for public gatherings of any kind.

In order to qualify for this grant, the village must make arrangements for its share of funds, and provide a suitable building place. If arrangement can be made whereby most of the labor will be done by local people, it would benefit the employment situation to a considerable extent. Soon as official notification of approval reaches here, meetings will be held to discuss ways and means of taking advantage of the grant.

NEWS ITEMS FROM ST. HILAIRE SCHOOL

Supt. Graham informs us there will be many who will avail themselves of opportunity to protect themselves against smallpox and diphtheria.

The State Board of Health furnishes the toxoid free and the vaccine at very low price, so charges will be only for the doctor's service. The charge, depending on number participating, will be from thirty-five to 50 cents each. Everyone in the community is urged to come and be sure your children have this protection. Those who reacted to the Schick test for diphtheria given last fall, should be innoculated. The number who wish to take each must be known in advance so materials can be obtained. Dr. Lynde will be at the school Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 17, starting at 1:30 to give these innoculations.

Honor Roll First Six Weeks

Freshmen: William Winter, Roger Roy and Robert Kirkonnel.

Sophomores: Irene Volden, Lester Swanson, Elizabeth Swanson, Phyllis Prestby, Evelyn Nelson and Roderick Johnson.

Juniors: Ellen Janda and Ralph Biskey.

Seniors: Doris Hagglund, Ruth Brink, Hazel Huff, Edna Prestby and Elna Scholin.

Dressing of turkeys for the Thanksgiving market has started thruout this section. By the end of next week heavy shipments will be on their way to eastern centers. Price for birds is about the same as last year. With feed prices quite a lot higher than last year, turkey growers will realize less net profit than they did a year ago.

WINS IN WRITING CONTEST

Edwin Winge, formerly of St. Hilaire, who is now attending high school at Sioux City, Iowa, was recently awarded first place in the essay division in the Drake university creative awards competition for 1936. Announcement of the award was made by Prof. Henry H. Ruby, head of the department of journalism at the university.

AUTO SHOW OPENS AT THIEF RIVER

The Tenth Annual automobile show to be held at Thief River Falls was formally opened to the public today. The show is being held in the new winter sports arena building which has much more floor space than the municipal auditorium where the show was held in years past.

All the 1937 models of cars handled by dealers at Thief River Falls are on display for the first time in this territory.

A vaudeville show will be presented at the auditorium Friday and Saturday evenings. There will be dancing in the Auditorium both Thursday and Friday evenings, and Saturday night a gala dance will be held at the sports arena, the proceeds to go toward purchasing equipment for that building. In addition to the display of new car models, a number of firms handling other lines will have fine exhibits at the arena. There will be something going on from time of opening until close of the show, and everyone will be amply repaid for time spent in visiting all divisions of the exposition.

RISING HOG MARKET FOR 1937 SEEN BY BERESFORD

A rising hog market for the summer and fall months of 1937 was the prediction of Rex Beresford, extension animal husbandman who spoke before the approximately 300 livestock feeders who attended the Swine and Cattle Feeders Day program held recently at University Farm, St. Paul. Discussing the outlook for livestock feeders, Mr. Beresford based his prophecy on the fact that the prospective number of hogs to go to market after January 1, 1937, would be relatively small.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Only thirty-five more shopping days before Christmas.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Club will be held Thursday evening, Nov. 19.

Z. Picard has established a retail milk business in the village, and is now making twice-a-day deliveries.

Dr. Horn, the Ulen dentist, was here Monday and Tuesday on his regular monthly visit to attend to his local dental practice.

If road conditions continue favorable, Rev. and Mrs. M. Dahle, and Mr. and Mrs. Arne Vik plan to motor next week to Minneapolis to spend a few days with relatives.

Motorists returning from the Twin Cities report running into heavy snow in the vicinity of St. Cloud. The balance of the road is quite slippery, making motoring very difficult.

Mrs. Amanda Pearson went Tuesday to Crookston to attend the funeral services for her friend, Mrs. Wm. Ludtke, who died at her home in that city Saturday night.

Supt. M. R. Graham and family, accompanied by some members of the teaching staff, returned Sunday evening after having attended the Minnesota Education Association convention at Minneapolis.

Mild weather yesterday and today has worked havoc with the light snow that fell a week ago. Very little snow remains on plowed fields, the black-top roads are entirely bare, and the balance is hardly enough to provide a winter-like appearance.

Mrs. Mathilda Brink of East Grand Forks, mother of Mrs. Jens Almquist of this village, and Mrs. B. Theo. Johnson of Hazel, died at her home Tuesday following a long illness. The Almquist and Johnson families motored to East Grand Forks today to be present at the funeral.

The state road west from here, where re-building was under way until the ground froze, was left in rather rough condition, but not to such extent it cannot be travelled. The new grade is so high that it is anticipated little snow will lodge on it. This feature will offset the discomfort of having to travel over a rough roadbed.

BANK SAVES CASH, MAN CAN GO WEST

St. James.—Due to the alert action of Watonwan county bankers and police officers in saving an inheritance which might have fallen into the hands of some slicker real estate men, Hilding Nelson is on his way to California to spend the winter. Stepping from a train in St. Paul, Nelson met a man who greeted him as an old friend. A conversation ensued and the man discovered Nelson had fallen heir to some money. He tried to interest him in a farm near Anoka, which he could buy and turn again shortly at a profit of $5,000. Nelson came home and endeavored to raise the necessary money at his bank in Ormsby. He was given a cashier's check, but was unable to cash it, the sheriff having warned all banks in the county. The man who was making the deal slipped out of town when he found that Nelson was having difficulty in getting his cash. Nelson did not suspect that he was being fleeced, ever after he could not find the man who wanted to make the deal.

The city of Tokyo, Japan, is located at the head of the bay of the same name, on the southeast coast of Honshiu, the principal island of the Japanese group.

Several carloads of hay have been shipped from here recently to central Minnesota points.

Supt. Cash Cartier and son, Leo, were up today from Red Lake Falls to read the electric meters for this month.

Co. Commissioner Paul Roy spent Tuesday at Thief River Falls presiding at regular monthly meeting of the county board.

Brink & Berglund have been operating their bee hive factory the past few days, turning out equipment needed for starting honey production next spring.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson and family motored here Friday from Aurora, Minn., and visited until Sunday at the home of Mrs. Wilson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Olsen.

Suggestion has been made that the Republican party adopt the sow thistle blossom instead of the sunflower as its official emblem as the party seems to be "on the hog" anyway.

Regular meeting of the B. M. Club was held Monday evening at the club rooms with very good attendance. Lunch for this occasion was served thru the courtesy of the St. Hilaire Telephone Company.

Cong. Buckler Carries 14 out of 15 Counties

Carrying 14 of the 15 counties of the Ninth district and receiving a plurality of approximately 17,000, Congressman R. T. Buckler was reelected to a second term according to unofficial returns announced from his office at Crookston. Congressman Buckler's unofficial vote total will reach about 48,000. He and his family and his secretary, Harold C. Hagen, and family will leave for Washington shortly after Christmas for the first session of the 75th Congress which opens on January 7.

ROCKSBURY 4-H REPORT ENTERED IN STATE EVENT

Winning Club Will Receive Phonograph and Library of Records

The report of the Rocksbury 4-H club chosen by County Agent R. M. Douglass as most outstanding in Pennington County in the National 4-H social progress program contest is now being judged in the state club leader's office in competition with other winning counties of the state.

The report, which was worked up by the club with the aid of its leader, Henry Oen, and others, lists its many activities in promoting better social, recreational and self-improvement opportunities.

The club which numbers 28 members was one of 17 competing in the county. It will receive a handsome history and year book and its leader a beautiful gold medal. The state winning club is awarded a select library of 120 Victor records especially suitable for recreational use, and an RCA Victor player. Its leader receives a complete RCA radio set valued at $100.00.

WOMAN THOUGHT DEAD RETURNS TO DAUGHTERS

Farmington.—After a period of 21 years in which Mrs. Howard Rude of St. Paul was thought dead, she returned to Farmington to visit her daughters. The older of the two daughters, who was four years at the time of separation, recognized her mother when she saw her. Years ago the family of Mrs. Rude was struck with misfortune and the girls, two and four, were put in an orphanage. Later they found homes with families who treated them as their own children. The mother, whom the daughters believed to have died during the flu epidemic, re-married. Recently she decided to return to visit her daughters, who are now both married and have families. The reunion was a happy one.

LUTEFISK SUPPER, NOV. 20

The annual Gubbefest and lutefisk supper at the Norwegian Lutheran church will be held Friday, Nov. 20. Serving will start at 5:30 P. M. Arrangements as well as serving will be in charge of men of the congregation. Everybody welcome.

STATE DEER SEASON WILL OPEN SUNDAY

Beginning at sunrise next Sunday, the ten day season for taking of deer and bear in Minnesota will be officially open. The season set for this year by the state Conservation Commission extends from Nov. 15 to November 25, inclusive, and applies to sixteen entire counties and parts of four other counties. Counties fully open are Cook, Lake, St. Louis, Carlton, Pine, Kanabec, Koochiching, Itasca, Aitkin, Crow Wing, Cass, Hubbard, Clearwater, Beltrami, Lake of the Woods and Roseau. That part of Marshall lying east of the old Pembina Trail is open, as also is part of Becker and Mille Lacs. The season does not apply to fawns, and in Itasca both does and fawns are protected. All hunters are required to obtain big game licenses. The resident license fee is $2.25, the non-resident $25.25.

RED CROSS STARTS ANNUAL ROLL CALL

Members of the local Red Cross started yesterday on a membership drive which will continue until Nov. 27. The soliciting teams are elated with the generous response received from townspeople the first day, and hope to have good success during the balance of the time they will work. Membership in the Red Cross costs only a dollar. Half of this amount goes into the local treasury for use in this immediate locality. Many needy cases have been helped before, and the local Red Cross hopes to be in a position to help others should occasion arise where help is needed.

Professor Herner of Winnipeg Will Judge County Poultry Show

Professor M. C. Herner of Manitoba Agricultural college, widely known poultry authority, this week accepted an invitation to serve as judge at the Pennington County poultry show scheduled to be held in the Auditorium December 8 to 11, it was announced today by Vernon Copp, secretary of the association. Tuesday, December 8, will be entry day, while judging will be completed during the following two days.

PTA MEETING SET FOR FRIDAY, NOV. 13

Friday evening, Nov. 13, will be the next meeting of the local Parent-Teachers Association. The committee in charge of the program state it will be a lucky day for the grownups who attend. Among numbers on the program will be piano selections by Marie Erdman Miller; vocal selections by Mrs. H. Sande and Mrs. F. Biskey, and by a boy's trio consisting of Rodger Roy, Phil Ewing and Garmo Jensen. Mr. H. F. Harrison, member of the teaching staff of Thief River Falls high school, will speak on "Adult Education". This topic was chosen being as this is Education Week. Following the above mentioned numbers, with assistance of the faculty, all adults will "go to school." This feature, which is made up for adults only, will be both amusing and instructive. Lunch will be served, as usual, after the program.

WOMAN'S CLUB TO SPONSOR ICE RINK

The Woman's Club, with assistance from WPA, is sponsoring a skating rink. There was some agitation for having the rink at some close in location in the village, but difficulty in getting the grounds in shape, and a dependable water supply, has decided the women to have the rink on the river. Below the high banks south of the old raceway has been selected. Warming houses will be erected, some kind of lighting provided, and an attendant will be on the grounds to keep the ice in condition and to preserve order.

To Third District Voters:

I wish to express my appreciation to voters in the Third district of Pennington County for the fine endorsement given me at the polls, Nov. 3rd. Will continue, as heretofore, to work for best interests of the district and county. Thank you all.

Paul Roy, Co. Commissioner

To Fifth District Voters:

I wish to thank you all for the generous support and vote given me Nov. 3rd. While not successful as a sticker candidate for county commissioner, I did meet many fine people, and made some new friendships that I value most highly. Considering my handicap by not being on the ticket, I am greatly pleased with the fine vote given me, and I thank you all.

To Quickly Ease Pains of Rheumatism

Bayer Tablets Dissolve Almost Instantly

In 2 seconds by stop watch, a genuine BAYER Aspirin tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work. Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water. By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating. What happens in this glass . . . happens in your stomach.

Ask Your Doctor About Genuine BAYER Aspirin

Any person who suffers from pains of rheumatism should know this:

Two genuine BAYER ASPIRIN tablets, taken with a full glass of water, will usually ease even severe rheumatic pains in a remarkably short time.

Ask your doctor about this. He will probably tell you there is nothing better. For real Bayer Aspirin tablets not only offer a potent analgesic (pain reliever), but start going to work almost instantly you take them. Note illustration of glass.

Try this simple way. You'll be surprised at how quickly pain eases. Get real Bayer Aspirin by asking for it by its full name, "Bayer Aspirin" at any drug store. Now virtually one cent a tablet.

Stomach Gas So Bad Seems To Hurt Heart

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart seemed to hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never felt better."—Mrs. Jas. Filler.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli."

Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and stubborn constipation. Leading Druggists.

Shipping Is Crippled by Maritime Strike

THIRTY-SEVEN thousand maritime workers on the Pacfic coast went on strike, and immediately the trouble spread to the Gulf and Atlantic coasts. In the west about 150 vessels were tied up in ports and others heading that way faced walk-outs by their crews on arrival. In New York members of the International Seamen's union voted a "sit down" strike in defiance of their national officers, and maritime workers in Houston and Port Arthur, Texas, quit their jobs and picketed the waterfront. Federal officials were trying hard to settle the disputes between the unions and shipping companies, chief of which relate to control of the hiring halls, wage increases and shorter hours. Assistant Secretary of Labor E. F. McGrady was in San Francisco and intimated the government might intervene.

Mayor Rossi

"When any group, whether bankers, employers or labor, take action endangering the welfare of the nation they are assuming a position that the government must challenge to protect the state and the people," McGrady said.

"The free flow of water-borne foreign and interstate commerce has become paralyzed. This will involve directly or indirectly the lives of the citizens of the whole nation."

San Francisco had the added distress of a strike of 1,000 warehousemen who demanded higher wages, and Mayor Angelo Rossi was mustering his forces to meet both this trouble and the maritime strike. He expected violent warfare along the waterfront and said he would take the necessary steps to protect public interests. The police set up headquarters in the Ferry building and strung their own telephone wires to every pier.

It was reported in San Francisco that coast shipowners were considering a plan to ask the United States navy to put "safety crews" aboard western merchant ships left unmanned.

Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, as a member of the federal maritime commission, opened a fact-finding hearing in San Francisco, summoning the shipowners to present their case first. The seven striking unions and their allies were to be heard later. The maritime commission had previously ordered peremptorily that the strike be delayed until it could hold the hearing, but the unions declined to submit to this dictation.

Toronto's "Baby Derby" Ends in a Muddle

WHEN Charles Vance Millar died ten years ago leaving a will in which $500,000 was bequeathed to the Toronto woman who gave birth to the greatest number of children in the ensuing decade, it was considered a sardonic joke. The "baby derby" is over, and it still is a joke, or at least a sad muddle. Six women are tied for the prize, each claiming nine registered babies, and eight others have filed claims with the executors of the will.

Two relatives of Millar announced they would contest the will; and the Ontario government was ready to intervene with legislation that would keep the lawyers, who planned legal actions in behalf of various claimants, from getting most of the money.

Mussolini Says Italy's Policy Is Armed Peace

"OUR policy is one of peace with everybody. But it will be an armed peace." Such was the flat statement of Premier Mussolini of Italy in a speech at Milan which was carried by radio throughout the world. It was addressed to all nations, but especially to Great Britain whose superiority in the Mediterranean Il Duce boldly challenged. He appealed to the British to come to some agreement with Rome as to Italy's rights and interests in this area, warning that failure to do so might mean war.

Premier Mussolini

"If the Mediterranean is for others a high road," said Mussolini, "for us Italians it is life. We have said a thousand times and I repeat we do not intend to menace this road, we do not intend to interrupt it. But we say, on the other hand, our rights and vital interests must be respected."

He saw the League of Nations "shipwrecked by Wilson ideology," which he asserted was the philosophy inspiring "the illusion of disarmament."

"The league must reform or perish." So far as Italy is concerned "the league may perish," he asserted.

In London it was said that recognition of Italy's sovereignty over Ethiopia could come only through League of Nations procedure so far as England is concerned. Foreign office comment was that no matter what might be the portent of Mussolini's speech, Britain would not change her Mediterranean policy.

Madrid Is Bombed by Insurgent Planes

REPEATED raids by rebel bombing planes were made on Madrid and its suburbs and scores of persons, mainly women and children, were killed. There was fierce and desperate fighting northeast of the capital and the government forces were driven back toward the city. The defense lines were reorganized, however, south of Madrid and on the road to Toledo and the government commanders were preparing for a "sweeping new offensive." The Fascists took Brunete after a bloody fight, having already captured three other towns in that region, and came within seventeen miles of Madrid.

Hoare Warns Russia Not to Meddle in England

IN THE house of commons representatives of the British government declared that nonintervention in Spain must be preserved to prevent chaos in Europe; and then Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty, uttered a stern warning to soviet Russia not to interfere with affairs in England.

Sir Samuel Hoare

"It is almost always disastrous to interfere in the affairs of other countries," Sir Samuel declared, addressing a west-end meeting. "I commend that observation to agents of the comintern. They will find that the more they interfere in the domestic affairs of this country, the worse it will react against their activities."

Sir Samuel added: "On no account must we interfere in business which does not concern us. It is necessary to say that—and say it most clearly—in view of the very curious vacillating attitude adopted by the Labor party toward the civil war in Spain."

The admiralty first lord referred to the complete "volte face" of the Labor party in resolutely supporting the government's policy of "hands off Spain" at the party congress recently and then shifting to demands that the government permit British sale of arms to Spain.

Mollison Sets a Record in Atlantic Flight

CAPT. JAMES A. MOLLISON, English aviator, established a new speed record for trans-atlantic flights when he landed at Croydon airport, near London, 13 hours and 17 minutes after he had left Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, in his American Bellanca monoplane Dorothy. The previous fastest west to east crossing was made in 1932 by Amelia Earhart in 14 hours, 54 minutes from Harbor Grace to Londonderry, Ireland.

Nazi Four Year Program Launched by Goering

GEN. HERMANN WILHELM GOERING, German minister of air and now the director of the Nazi four-year economic scheme to make the reich independent of the rest of the world in raw materials, launched his program at a great Nazi rally in Berlin. "We shall hack finger after finger off the foreign hand clutching at Germany's throat within the next four years," he declared.

Gen. Goering

Outlining his plans, Goering said no German had starved, nor would starve. The high seas fishing fleet will be increased, he asserted, so the people can eat fish when meat is not available. Whale fishing will be developed for the margarine it can produce, he promised.

Goering urged all Germans to follow the example of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler who, he said, eats neither meat nor butter. The audience yelled with delight when the robust Goering told them he had lost 22 pounds by eating less butter.

Germany would prefer the old system of international exchange of wares, but this now is impossible in a mad world, so Germany will build her factories, produce her own synthetic rubber and her own substitutes for cotton and other materials for which she now must spend millions of dollars yearly, the general declared.

Harvey S. Firestone
PUTS THE FARM ON RUBBER . . .
Farm-Proved FOR EFFICIENCY and ECONOMY

EVERY car owner who does much driving over unimproved roads and who has to use chains, can save the cost and bother of applying them by equipping the rear wheels of his car or truck with Firestone Ground Grip Tires. This wonderful new tire was designed and developed by Harvey S. Firestone working with his engineers on his own farm in Columbiana County, Ohio. It was tested on all kinds of roads and found so efficient that it was also adopted for tractors and all wheeled farm implements.

The rubber lugs of the tread are so placed that they clean as they pull, and since the design is continuous, the tire does not bump when used on paved roads. Two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords are placed under the tread — a patented Firestone construction feature which welds the powerful super-traction tread to the patented Gum-Dipped cord body, making them one inseparable unit. Gum-Dipping is used only in Firestone tires.

Farmers, country doctors, school bus operators, rural mail carriers, in fact, all who do most of their driving off the paved roads cannot afford to be without Ground Grip Tires. Go to your nearest Firestone Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store today and equip your car or truck with Firestone Ground Grip Tires — the tire that makes its own road.

Here's that Fast "Phillips" Way
To Alkalize Stomach Quickly

On all sides, people are learning that the way to gain almost incredibly quick relief, from stomach condition arising from overacidity, is to alkalize the stomach quickly with Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

You take either two teaspoons of the liquid Phillips' after meals; or two Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets. Almost instantly "acid indigestion" goes, gas from hyperacidity, "acid - headaches" — from over-indulgence in food or smoking — and nausea are relieved.

Try this Phillips' way if you have any acid stomach upsets. You will be surprised at results. Get either the liquid "Phillips" or the remarkable, new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets. Only 25¢ for a big box of tablets at drug stores.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, puffiness under the eyes, feel nervous, miserable—all upset.

Don't delay? Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are especially for poorly functioning kidneys. They are recommended by grateful users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

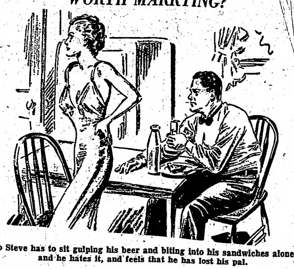
AT WHAT AGE IS A MAN NOT WORTH MARRYING?



So Steve has to sit gulping his beer and biting into his sandwiches alone, and he hates it, and feels that he has lost his pal.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

THAT very few bachelors of thirty-five and over are worth marrying is the expressed view of Dr. Paul Poponoe, of the Los Angeles Institute of Family Relations. This is not the first time I have quoted the views of Dr. Poponoe, but if I remember correctly on the last occasion I was in direct opposition to him. In this case it seems to me that he is at least partly right.

There isn't any question that young marriages, plus character and fineness and self-control and real love, are the happiest marriages. Later marriages need more character, more fineness and self-control, and more love, and as a rule have less of all these elements. The field narrows, as the woman reaches the last twenties and the man the middle thirties, and the demands of each increase. The quality of young excitement and adventure goes out of the marriage, and new considerations come in. Both husband and wife have settled into spoiled little ways; both are fearful that the whole thing is a mistake. Curiously enough trifles are extremely important to older brides and grooms, they go into despair and gloom over mole-hills, whereas the younger adventurers laugh at very mountains of trouble, make nothing of really serious problems.

The happiest wives I know are the women who have married young, for love, who have faced all the ups and downs of young business worries and young nursery cares, and who have emerged into the sunshine of middle age sure of themselves, sure of their mates, standing firmly in the ranks of the successfully wed. These are the very foundation of all civilized societies; the real servants of the commonwealth, although they never get any recognition for it.

When a girl waits for her thirtieth birthday before making her choice of a mate several difficulties beset her. For at least twelve years she has been her own mistress; the man has been doing things in his own way for longer than that. Worse, perhaps he has had a mother and sisters to spoil him, to determine that Davy is going to be so happy at home that he never will want a wife!

In such questions as their attitude toward intimate old friends, as to meal hours and reading lights and the acceptance of invitations lie countless pitfalls. The dreams they have dreamed for a score of years are ended in a rude awakening. Jane doesn't like late little cosy suppers, after all; she seemed to when they were engaged, indeed she used to cook them herself for Steve. But now she says, laughingly and pleasantly enough, but yet firmly, that personally she never will eat a bite of anything after dinner, it is the quickest way in the world to get fat! So Steve has to sit gulping his beer and biting into his sandwiches alone, and he hates it, and feels that he has lost his pal.

He brings his friends home for dinner; Jane is amiable enough. But she protests mildly that Bob and Dick and Joe don't "contribute" anything. They happen to have been his intimates since college days, Steve comments icily, who would she suggest in their places?

And so into the late new marriage come fearful hours of despair, when the handsome popular unmarried man who was Steve, ringing the doorbell at Jane's apartment, coming in with a great box of roses, seems to disappear completely. And the clever bachelor maid who was Jane, always so trim and self-possessed and happy, always so much in demand, vanishes likewise. In their places are a silent, bewildered, deeply-pondering man whose possessive thought is wonder how he can get out of the tangle he has stepped into, and an embittered woman who tells her few intimate friends that it was all a dreadful mistake.

And yet, if the two will but weather this dark hour without a break, there may be great happiness ahead for them. For after all, the choice of twenty-eight is a more reasonable choice than that of eighteen.

To live on peaceable terms with anyone takes tremendous character and self-control, sooner or later. The young lovers find it later; their youth, the novelty and excitement of the adventure, and their common physical delight in marriage hold them together usually for a few years, perhaps even four or five, if children come along. Then comes the rub; they have to meet the wild impulse to separate, to get away from each other, to make a drastic change of some sort. At this point unless circumstances stronger than this mood of rebellion hold them together until the fever subsides and the danger mark is past, they usually get a divorce. Two years later they often wish with all their sick and despairing hearts that they were together again, but that's another story.

With the older pair this disillusionment comes almost at once. The ignorant romantic dreams of the late teens and early twenties have long vanished, and the two hearts and minds and bodies that have been free for so long struggle madly against the trap. The man forgets that he really admires and loves this woman, that for months he had dreamed of the joy of having her for his own, he only remembers that he is married, and that marriage is a darned sight easier to get into than get out of. The girl has always cherished the thought of a fine man coming home to her hungry and adoring and companionable, at the end of day, to sit by the fire and talk of books and praise her for keeping him so comfortable. It is a strange contrast, this new life of nerves and idleness and of being criticized.

But even while writing this I think of many instances of marriages made when the man was in the late thirties, and the woman past thirty, marriages that have been not only successful, but ideal. Marriages in which the wedding of older minds, wiser intellects, more finished characters has resulted in such happiness as few younger couples know. The love of a fine man is a miracle of content to a lonely woman who has sacrificed all her young years, perhaps, to the need of an old parent, or the perfecting of herself in her profession, and what the tenderness and companionship of such a woman means to a man only that man—so long an outsider to domestic joys, could say. If parenthood comes to such a pair it is what parenthood always should be and so rarely is, a sacred responsibility, a pride and delight beyond any other that life can offer, a miracle never to be placed beside the other commonplaces of every day.

In my library is the biography of a certain Englishman of letters, a man who was never famous in his own day, but whose rare volumes are coming more and more steadily into their own. He came home from college to a household of mother and sisters; the girls married one by one, in the rather difficult fashion of girls in English countrysides a hundred years ago, the mother died. The man went to London for a yearly stay; came back to books, fireside, dogs, old trees, old lanes, old neighbors. At forty-two he married his Annabelle, a quiet woman of thirty-three who was keeping house for a widowed brother, and being an angel-aunt to three small boys on a nearby estate.

The story of the wedded love of these two is one of the most romantic—one of the most breath-takingly passionate, of all the books I know. Juliet, leaning at delicious eager fourteen from her balcony to whisper her forbidden love, stretching herself on her tomb, never tasted the deeps of it. The letters of this essayist to his wife, during their few short separations, could not have been penned by a hundred Romeos. They had two sons and a daughter; the boys they kept, the daughter left them in her fourth year; their letters and diaries tell the story; and it is one almost too exquisite for other eyes than theirs to see.

No, fine men and women can marry at any age, and find happiness in their mutual love. And men and women who aren't fine, who don't mean to be patient and self-controlled, and try to draw success from the difficult situation of early married days, ought not to marry at all! But that late marriage is different from young marriage, and demands a slightly different handling, a very decided philosophy and constant doses of saving laughter, nobody in his senses dare deny.

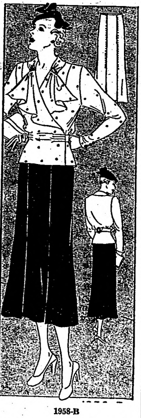
Fetching Blouse and Skirt



1958-B

Today's pattern — two separate garments—gives you an idea how chic you can appear when clothes are chosen with taste and discrimination. Any blouse as clever as this one can be worn successfully with a dozen different skirts and any skirt, equally fetching and serviceable, can justify a dozen different blouses.

An unusually flattering neck treatment with the folds giving way to a jabot effect and surplice closing, lends distinction to the blouse fashioned in a solid crepe, pastel silk, or gold metal, while the skirt relies on a slenderizing front panel ending in pleats to relieve its essential simplicity. Try a satin, velveteen, silk, crepe, or velvet for the skirt.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1958-B is available for sizes: 14, 16, 18, 20; 40, 42, 44 and 46. Corresponding bust measurements 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 16 (34) requires two and five-eighths yards of 39-inch material for the blouse and two and one-eighth yards for the skirt. Price of pattern, 15 cents.

Send for the Fall Pattern Book containing Barbara Bell well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send 15 cents for your copy.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 367 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

The Noble Nature

IT IS not growing like a tree
In bulk, doth make man better be;
Or standing long an oak, three hundred year,
To fall a log at last, dry, bald and sear:
A lily of a day
Is fairer in May,
Although it fall and die that night
It was the plant and flower of Light.
In small proportions we just beauties see,
And in short measures life may perfect be.
—Ben Johnson.

A Tough Life—That of a Forest Ranger

The life of a forest ranger is not all it's cracked up to be. Instead of spending the summer hunting, fishing and trapping, the ranger is busy protecting game and scenery from visitors and answering their questions.

In the winter, he and another ranger hole themselves up in a log cabin, patrol the boundary of their domain on skis and protect the wild life under their care from the attacks of predatory animals and the guns of men. At night their leisure time is spent in assembling food, wood and clothing to keep warm, and preparing for the next day's tasks.—Washington Post.

General Laws

All the knowledge we possess of eternal objects is founded upon experience, which furnishes facts; and the comparison of these facts establishes relations, from which induction the intuitive belief that like causes will produce like effects leads to general laws.—Mrs. Somerville.

25 Years Ago

From Issue of Nov. 11, 1911

Knute Kolstad returned home after a few months stay in North Dakota.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Dahl received the sad news that their daughter, Mrs. R. M. Daniels, had died at her home at Seattle, Wash.

H. M. Babcock, the druggist, was visiting his family and attending to business matters in the Twin Cities that week.

A. J. Hed, local creamery manager, attended the Red River Valley Dairymen's convention held that week at Crookston.

Pete Simonson returned from Cass Lake to spend the winter with his family.

WOMAN FINDS $150.00 IN BILLS IN WASHING

Albert Lea.—A West Hollandale housewife was surprised on wash day when she opened her washing machine to hook a bundle of clothes from the hot suds and discovered with the clothes a $10.00 bill. Amazed at such a find she lifted the next haul with speed and energy and found a large roll of bills. She netted a total of $150.00 in fresh washed bills, very clean, ready for circulation upon repair of the machine damage. It developed that the head of the house had carefully parked the bills in his shirt pocket for safe keeping, had thrown the shirt in to a corner of the clothes closet and since then worried about what had become of the money to be used in payment of expenses due.

DEPARTMENT AWARDS 34 MILES OF ROAD JOBS

SHEEP SLAUGHTERED BY SPEEDING TRAIN

Grand Rapids. — Wholesale butchery of sheep was never done more rapidly than last week, when a passenger train plowed into a flock of sheep at Cohasset, killing and injuring more than 80 of the animals. The sheep were part of a flock which had been shipped from Montana for sale to farmers in the vicinity of Cohasset. They had been held for several days in corrals at the stockyards, being taken for pasture during the day. When snow began to fall heavily, an attempt was made to get the sheep back to the corral, and as they started over the railway bridge the train approached. Although the man in charge tried to attract the attention of the engineer, he could not see the sheep until the train was upon the flock, due to the heavy snowfall. The animals were struck in great numbers, being tossed high in the air. Scores of them were found later in the mud and water below the bridge.

LIONESS LOOSE IN NORTH WOODS

Baudette.—Hunters in the Nestor Falls section in Ontario are getting an added thrill this year because a lioness is loose and is roaming the woods somewhere between Nestor Falls and Sioux Narrows. It is thought that the animal escaped from a circus some months ago.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT PRELIMINARY WORK UNDER WAY

Local Postoffice Is Giving Aid in Registering Employers

The treasury is gradually perfecting arrangements to collect taxes under the old age pension section of the social security act, it was announced in Washington last week.

Postmaster Andrew Anderson stated that the local postoffice, in common with others thruout the nation, will cooperate with the Social Security board in obtaining information from employers and assigning of social security account numbers to employes covered by Title II of the act. Forms are to be filled out by employers and returned to Mr. Anderson or Assistant Postmaster Walter Smith on or before November 21.

Among the groups of employes exempt from the provisions of the act are employes of the railroad industry subject to the carriers' taxing act; farm laborers, domestic workers in private homes, casual labor, and employes of the United States government and its subdivisions.

Collections most likely will be on a monthly basis, it was said in Washington, with the assessment for January falling due the last day of February. Hundreds of inquiries have come in already from the 3,500.000 employes estimated to be affected.

The board will co-operate with the postoffice until transfer of the records into its jurisdiction; but the tax collections are solely a treasury responsibility. Under the law, the tax on both employes and employers will remain at one per cent until 1939, run from then until 1943 at one and a half per cent, and gradually rise to a maximum of three per cent for 1949 and thereafter.

When Moose Are Not Shy

Moose naturally are shy until mating time arrives. At that time, the trumpeting of the bull moose means a challenge to all intruders. In fighting, the bull uses his strong forefeet at well as his heavy antlers.

107-YEAR-OLD MAN ASKS FOR PENSION

Fergus Falls.—The oldest resident in Otter Tail county, Michael Heise of Aurdal, who will celebrate his 107th birthday anniversary on Christmas Day, has made application for old age assistance at the Fergus Falls court house. Born in Poland more than a century ago, Mr. Heise came to America 50 years ago and has lived in Otter Tail county for 30 years. He is a widower, has been twice married and has no children. Mr. Heise has never been ill in his life and is still in good health although he is somewhat feeble and walks with a cane. His age can be proved by papers which he brought from Poland.

Elephants Vegetarians

Despite their great size and ferocious appearance, provided, as they were, with two sets of tusks apiece and huge molar teeth that were renewed if the animal lost them, prehistoric elephants were vegetarians, dining chiefly on trees, shrubbery, grass and other forms of vegetable matter. During glacial ages they were triply protected from the cold by one long coat of hair and two wooly coats.

NOTICE OF EXPIRATION OF TIME OF REDEMPTION

Off ice of County Auditor,
County of Pennington,
State of Minnesota—ss.
TO LUELLA C. GREEN:

(1) You are hereby notified that the following piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit:

Northwest Quarter Section 26, Township 153, Range 42

IS NOW ASSESSED IN YOUR NAME.

(2) That on the 9th day of May, 1932, at a sale of land pursuant to the real estate tax judgment duly given and made in and by the District Court in said County of Pennington on the 14th day of March, 1932, in proceedings to enforce the payment of taxes delinquent upon real estate for the year 1930, for said County of Pennington, the above described piece or parcel of land was offered for sale, and no one bidding upon said offer, said piece or parcel, was bid in for the State of Minnesota for the sum of ($88.86), Eighty Eight and 86-100 Dollars.

(3) That thereafter, and on the 24th day of June, 1936, the said piece or parcel not then having been redeemed from said sale, was sold and conveyed at public sale by the County Auditor of said County, pursuant to the statute, to an actual purchaser for the sum of Two Hundred Eighty Dollars and Ninety-nine cents.

(4) That the amount required to redeem said piece or parcel of land from said sale, exclusive of the costs to accrue upon this notice, is the sum of ($280.99), Two Hundred Eighty Dollars and Ninety-nine cents, and interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum on ($280.99), Two Hundred Eighty and 99-100 Dollars from said 24th day of June, 1936, to the day such redemption is made.

(5) That the tax certificate of sale issued to said purchaser has been presented to me by the holder thereof and this notice requested.

(6) That the time for the redemption of said piece or parcel of land from said tax sale will expire one year after the service of this notice, and the filing of proof of such service in my office.

WITNESS, my hand and official seal this 14th day of October, 1936.

A. M. SENSTAD,
Auditor Pennington County, Minn.
(Official Seal)
Approved by Attorney General.

IRENE ORTLOFF WED TO EDWIN ANDERSON

Last Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Ortloff, northwest of the village, occurred the marriage of their daughter, Irene, to Mr. Edwin Anderson, son of A. E. Anderson of River Falls. The ceremony was read by Rev. H. A. Larson in the presence of relatives and close friends of both bride and groom. Following the ceremony, a sumptuous wedding dinner was served to all present. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will make their home on his father's farm east of here. Numerous friends thruout the community will join in extending congratulations and in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Anderson lifelong happiness.

HANDICRAFT CLASS TO START TUESDAY

Women who are interested in a Handicraft class, under direction of Mrs. Esther Franks, are invited to meet at the Methodist church on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 24, at 2:00. Please bring a pencil, scissors, a small water color brush, any quick drying enamels you may have; also plain note paper or a box of stationary, or small white cards to decorate for tally or gift cards. If you have any small designs, please bring them.

Lutefisk Supper: This is to remind you the annual Gubbefest and lutefisk supper will be held at the Norwegian Lutheran church Friday this week. Serving starts at 5:30 P. M.

Deer hunters are, apparently, having good luck in the country between here and the border. Many cars have been noted since Tuesday headed south carrying one or more deer.

MANY ATTEND PTA

A good sized crowd attended the meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association held Friday evening at the school. A well planned and interesting program was given. H. F. Harrison, teacher of agriculture in the high school at Thief River Falls, gave a very interesting talk that was greatly enjoyed by everyone. Lunch was served following the program.

VILLAGE ELECTION TO BE DECEMBER 8

The annual village election is slated to be held Tuesday, December 8 this year. A president of the council, a councilman for three year term, recorder and treasurer for two-year terms, a justice of the peace, and a constable, each for a two year term, will be elected. Since decision was made to abandon the Australian system of filing and balloting, a caucus will be held the first part of next month to select candidates for the different village offices to be filled.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Sherva and son, Blake, motored up Friday from Fertile and visited briefly with relatives and here and at Hazel. Blake remained at the Oscar Seeland home at Hazel while his parents, accompanied by Mrs. Ole Odegaard, went on a trip to Minneapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Skatrud and daughters motored down Sunday from Argyle and spent the day at the Jensen and Brink homes and with other friends and former neighbors.

COW KILLED BY LIVE LIZARDS

Senator-Elect Lundeen Favors U. S. 3d Party

The declaration in favor of a national third party by U. S. Senator-elect Ernest Lundeen, published in the public press under date of Nov. 10, brought immediate and favorable response from Emil E. Holmes, Minnesota state chairman of the Union party.

"The statement by Senator Lundeen advocating the formation of a National Farmer-Labor party is good news to many of us," Mr. Holmes said today. "To the patronage seekers, however, it will be very bad news for Jim Farley cannot be expected to become very enthusiastic about that idea.

"We are happy that our endorsement of Ernest Lundeen is now vindicated and that we can go forward together in a common cause. Whether we call it the Union Party or the National Farmer-Labor Party is not important.

Women Overtake Men in Numbers in State, Study at 'U' Indicates

Women are catching up on the men, in numbers, in Minnesota, and in the two largest cities have managed to pass them, it is shown in a study of Population Trends in Minnesota by Professor Robert W. Murchie of the department of sociology.

In 1850 there were 61 plus males in the state to every 38 plus females, but in 1930 the ratio had been drastically changed to 52.18 men to every 47.82 women.

Among the foreign born white population, namely, those who came as immigrants, there is still a natural preponderance of males, namely, in the state's present population, in 1930, 217,983 males and 170,311 females.

Today, of the three largest cities, Duluth is the only one retaining masculine predominance, as might be supposed from its position nearer the frontier. There the ratio is 102.2 males to 100 females, but in Minneapolis, males are but 94.4 to 100, and in St. Paul 93.9 to 100. Forty years earlier, in 1890, all three cities were far more masculine than feminine, Duluth having the overwhelming ratio of 172.8 to 100.

103-YEAR-OLD RESIDENT DIES

St. James—One of Minnesota's oldest residents, Mrs. Susan Carroll Doolittle, 103, died on Armistice day at St. James, where she had lived for 45 years. Veteran of the pioneer days when Indians roamed the southwestern part of the state, Mrs. Doolittle recalled how she unknowingly had fed the notorious Younger brothers, train robbers and bank raiders, the day before their capture, when they had been trailed by possemen after looting the Northfield bank. One of Mrs. Doolittle's favorite hobbies was piecing quilts. During her 99th year she completed five. She observed her 100th birthday anniversary when Franklin D. Roosevelt was inaugurated as president March 4, 1933.

TO REINVESTIGATE ALL NOW ON RELIEF

A re-survey of the work relief rolls in Pennington county was started this week to determine families most in need. Instructions in accord with WPA requirements governing the requested re-check were received this week by John Lynskey, county certification officer. Because there are not sufficient funds to give employment to all unemployed persons, WPA is desirous of restricting employment to those most in need. Insofar as quota restrictions permit, those removed from the rolls will be replaced by other employables who are still in need. It is expected that this will result in reduction in the cost of local direct relief.

Supt. M. R. Graham will be the local manager of the 1936 sale of Christmas Seals in St. Hilaire. His appointment marks the opening of active local work upon the 1936 sale. In commenting on the coming sale, Mr. Graham states "I am certain that many hours will be given by willing workers to the Seal sale and that the Seals these workers will distribute in St. Hilaire will find more purchasers than in any recent year."

SHOOTS GRAY FOX FROM TREE PERCH

New Prague—A 16-year old Lonsdale youth, who shot a large silky-haired gray fox perched in a tree, is greatly envied by his pals. While out hunting rabbits near his home he spied an animal in a tree. Raising his gun, he aimed and fired, and down came the animal, which, to his surprise, proved to be a fox. Neighbors remarked that it was very unusual to find a fox in a tree, since the animals are not climbers, but it was thought that dogs had frightened it into leaping the distance of 18 feet to safety.

MRS. H. CARPENTER DIES AT CROOKSTON

Friends in this community received the sad tidings Saturday that Mrs. Harry Carpenter had died the previous day at a Crookston hospital. She had undergone an operation the previous week and was apparently convalescing when she suffered a heart attack which resulted in her death.

Mrs. Carpenter, nee Mabel Remington, was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Remington, who resided in St. Hilaire several years before they went to Crookston about twenty years ago. Besides her husband, Mrs. Carpenter is survived by four children, the eldest being a student at the University of Minnesota, and the youngest being twins about six years of age. She also is survived by a brother, Lloyd and one sister, Mrs. Howard Jones of Bemidji. Funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon at Crookston, and interment was made in the cemetery near that city. Among the friends and relatives attending the funeral from here were Mr. and Mrs. R. McKercher, Mesdames John Lundberg, L. Carpenter and H. Winter, Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Beebe, E. H. Stephens and members of his family, and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Stephens of Angus. E. H. Stephens is an uncle of the late Mrs. Carpenter.

Leonard Yonke, Stanley and Henry Bothman and six other Pennington county 4-H club members have returned after attending the Junior Livestock Show at St. Paul where they exhibited their poultry and livestock. Assistant Co. Agent Stanley Doten and Gerald Yonke accompanied them on the trip.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Burkee motored here Sunday from Moorhead and spent a short time with their relatives. Upon returning that evening to Moorhead, they were accompanied by Mr. Burkee's mother, Mrs. B. E. Burkee, who will visit with them a short time, and later will spend the winter with Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Martz at Minneapolis.

A repair crew of the Red River Power Company came Monday to change some of the lines about town, and to remove some of the street lamps that are now suspended over center of the street. All street lights will eventually be on masts instead of suspension type.

Balmy weather the first three days of this week has caused almost total disappearance of snow that fell here some time ago.

What Happened?

Washington — Probably sufficient time has elapsed since the election to give us something of a perspective, something of an understanding of what happened November 3. In that record-breaking vote for the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt, there lie covered perhaps the greatest number of reasons why votes were cast as they were, ever to influence a national election. The results left the Republicans stunned; they were surprising even to the Democrats and that is no secret.

I have consulted with numerous among the better informed political students and political writers concerning the basis for this deluge of votes that came so nearly making the electoral college unanimous for Mr. Roosevelt that there had been only one time in history when the opposition received fewer votes in the electoral college than Governor Landon will receive. The inquiries have brought almost as many different answers as there were people interviewed. Each one of these persons was thoroughly convinced that his diagnosis was correct and yet after hearing all of them I have a conviction that each one was only partially right. It was, in my opinion, a combination of reasons that brought about such an enormous vote for election of Mr. Roosevelt. The various reasons entering into that combination were influential individually only as regards a comparatively small percentage of the population.

How else can it be explained? Unless separate reasons operated in various sections of the country and, indeed, upon segments of voters in those various sections, no such thing could have happened as the election, for example, of Henry Cabot Lodge, a Republican, to the senate in Massachusetts, while Mr. Roosevelt carried the state overwhelmingly for himself as a Democrat. There were other instances where Republicans won in statewide elections while the state's electoral vote went to the President.

This necessarily shows that even in states that normally vote a straight ticket, either Democratic or Republican, there was some appeal which Mr. Roosevelt had for the voters that was non-existent insofar as the lesser candidates were concerned. In other words, there were split tickets and if this ever proved anything, it surely proved this year that the nation was overwhelmingly in favor of Mr. Roosevelt personally.

I think that, as always, the national ticket carried many men into the house and senate, only it is quite apparent that the percentage of representatives and senators elected this time on the strength of the national ticket was larger than usual. I mean that instead of local personalities carrying the national ticket, the national ticket swept in the local personalities because it is the tendency of a vast majority of voters to vote a straight ticket.

What I have just said seems really to complicate the whole picture. It seems to complicate it for the reason that such a paradox as the election of Mr. Lodge in Massachusetts occurred within this deluge of votes.

But whatever else can be said, nothing can overshadow the consequences of the vast power handed to Mr. Roosevelt. He is in complete control and has a right to feel that anything he does will be accepted by a large majority of the population. With the exception of George Washington, who was elected President by the unanimous vote of the electoral college, and James Monroe, who had all excepting one electoral vote with him, no President of the United States has ever been awarded such a verdict.

So, it strikes me that the outstanding question before the United States today is "how will Mr. Roosevelt use this authority?" It is in his hands to become a man of history, a man who will stand out among all of our Presidents if he uses his power wisely. It is to be suggested in the same breath that if he misuses or abuses that power he can easily become just as infamous.

Some Reasons

I said above that there were so many reasons influential in bringing about the unusual vote for Mr. Roosevelt that it was almost impossible to enumerate them. Nevertheless, I shall try to set down some of the more important ones that appear to have been operative. It must be remembered that these larger reasons embrace numerous and sundry variations. Each of the important reasons is made up of a number of less important and less significant and even less influential reasons. Each of the larger and each of the smaller propositions had its effect.

I do not want to have it appear that the order in which I name these various reasons has any significance. In fact, I think it would be utterly foolish for anyone to attempt to say that one particular reason was more influential than another. How, for instance, can any one individual know what caused particular voters to vote a particular way without knowing the individual voters concerned? So, I am simply outlining some of the reasons that the political students agree have been important:

That the federal government can or should interfere in the management of basic industries like agriculture, manufacturing, power and possibly in the commercial field of finance.

That the government can or should be centralized to a greater extent in the federal machinery as distinguished from the state machinery. This implies a disappearance to a large extent of the age-old contention for state's rights. It goes even beyond that and into the field of local government which, it must be said, has not been too efficient.

That the people, as citizens of the United States, ought not be hamstrung by rigid constitutional provisions and strict interpretation of them by the United States Supreme court. This may easily be expanded into other propositions such as modification of revision of court powers; mandatory retirement of judges when they reach a given age, or constitutional amendments giving the federal government more direct contact with individual citizens and individual businesses.

* * *

Leaders Outmoded

That the great business leaders of the last score of years are outmoded and that the time has come for a fresh start in business leadership just as the advent of the New Deal accomplished a fresh start in the political leadership. In this thought is hidden various and sundry possibilities. There are those, for example, who have become permeated with a hatred of big business. Likewise, there are those who feel that only portions of big business have been unfair and have crushed the little fellow. Aside from these two is a third group that surely feels the necessity for strict federal control of all types of business, good as well as bad, in order to prevent private initiative from getting out of bounds.

That many of our citizens are willing for the federal government to participate in business by direct competition with private initiative. This thought, expanded, naturally takes on the aspect of a broader movement for public ownership of various businesses than has been evident heretofore.

It is axiomatic that reasons effective with one person are not effective with another and reasons that operate to control the views of a county or a section of a state or even a region of states undoubtedly have had nothing at all to do with votes taken in other parts of our nation.

There are unsettled conditions. There are ten or eleven million people who are out of jobs. Some of these felt that they had been benefited by one Roosevelt policy; some felt they had been benefited by another. However one may examine the picture, it seems to me inescapable that it was a combination of reasons and not any single proposition. It may be added, as some honestly feel, that the Roosevelt political machine was able to encompass all of these factors and to show in the various sections of the country how effective particular policies had been in those particular sections. That to my mind is going beyond the scope of intelligence because strong as the Roosevelt political machine is, it had to have and had to hold the faith of an extraordinarily large number of voters in addition to those controlled by the machine in order to roll up a majority of nine million votes.

What Will He Do?

So, again we get back to the question: what will Mr. Roosevelt do with this new mandate, this fresh delegation of power that has been given to him?

Already there are signs developing among the old line, conservative Democrats of a desire to persuade him to be less radical than he was in his first four years as President. These Democrats feel that this country needs a little less of reform and considerably more of sound governmental management. How much effect they will have on general administration policies obviously is problematical. It is problematical because included among the new senators and representatives, especially among the representatives, are many men who do not impress me as having the slightest understanding of governmental functions. Consequently, from these and from those wild eyes already in the house membership, we undoubtedly will see some of the worst harum scarum pieces of legislation ever proposed in the national house of representatives.

It is such circumstances as are presented in the type of legislation that I named that will test Mr. Roosevelt's real capacity as a statesman.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Wadena—John Dahl of Perham suffered the loss of an eye as the result of an accident while at work with a wood sawing outfit.

Waseca—Arvid Sponberg of New Richland was elected president of the Steele-Waseca Co-operative Electric Association, a federal rural electrification unit.

Hutchinson—The Hutchinson city council set $41,850.79 as the amount necessary to finance the city for the coming year. This is nearly $2,500 lower than last year.

Glencoe—Doctors of McLeod county are co-operating with the McLeod county health association in putting on a smallpox and diphtheria innoculation program during the month of November.

Windom—The Water and Light commission of Windom will hold open house shortly to exhibit the new addition to the light and power plant in which two new Diesel engines have been installed.

Virginia—With the opening of radio station WHLB in Virginia the Head of the Lakes Broadcasting Company with studios in Superior and Duluth added the third point to its Arrowhead network.

Duluth—Poor relief food budgets in St. Louis county have been raised 10 per cent, A. J. Erchul, clerk of the poor commission, announced. The boost came because of increase food costs during recent months.

Mankato—Building permits issued in Mankato in 1936 up to Noevmber 1 totaled $383,171, more than double the total for the entire year of 1935. October permits, valued at $12,495, fell short of those issued in the corresponding month in 1935, however.

Kensington—With the ending of the pheasant hunting season in the state came a story of a record size bird killed by Martin Chan of Kensington, which measured 42 inches from beak to tail. The huge pheasant, shot on the opening day of the season near Alexandria, will be mounted and sent to Washington, D. C.

Minneapolis—An eight-barge tow, largest in the history of navigation on the upper Mississippi, is en route to the Twin Cities. The previous record tow was five. Leaving St. Louis, the tow stopped at Rock Island, Ill., where 40 carloads of materials was added to the original cargo. The additional consignment consisted largely of farm machinery.

Morristown—By one one-hundredths of a bushel (just about two ears), the Minnesota state and former national corn husker champion was defeated on the Baumgarten farm near here. The winner, Art Johnosn, of Bingham Lake, Cottonwood county, husked 19.79 bushels in the 66-minute contest, to defeat Ted Balko, Redwood Falls, Redwood county, whose score was 19.78 bushels. There were 20 contestants.

Collegeville—Deer have returned to central Minnesota through the medium of the St. Johns game refuge where wild life management has provided an optimum range. Father Angelo, wild life custodian of the 5,000 acre tract established three years ago, said the five deer released in the refuge one year ago have multiplied and attracted other animals. Several other deer have since taken abode in the area.

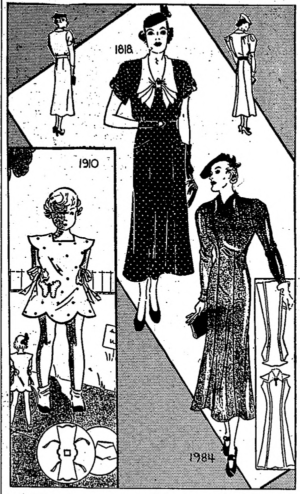
Duluth—New 1918 forest fire claims, amounting to approximately $500,000, have been paid to residents in northern Minnesota within the last 30 days, it was revealed here in sources close to litigation which brought the claims before the federal government. The $500,000 was paid to approximately 600 individuals or estates. It was reported approximately one-third of the original 8,500 claims against the government remain to be paid.

St. Paul—A warning against shooting elk was issued to Minnesota big game hunters by the state division of game and fish. Several game wardens will be stationed near the Red Lake refuge during the deer season to warn hunters they may encounter elk that have strayed from the refuge. Employees of the state forest service recently counted 31 elk in territory outside the northwest corner of the Red Lake refuge. Last year 27 were transferred from Itasca park to the refuge and they appear to be thriving.

Minneapolis—Dr. Horton Casparis of Vanderbilt university, president of the Tennessee Tuberculosis association; Dr. Caroline Hedger, noted child health authority; and Miss Frances Brophy, New York, field adviser of the National Tuberculosis association, will be guest speakers at the annual dinner of the Minnesota Public Health association to be held Friday, November 13, at the Nicollet Hotel, Minneapolis. Dr. Charles H. Mayo, Rochester, president of the state association, will preside. The dinner will climax an all-day Twin City meeting which will mark the thirtieth anniversary of the introduction of the Christmas Seal into the United States.

Minneapolis—Models of the 1937 automobiles will be displayed in the Minneapolis auditorium November 21 to 28 when the twenty-ninth annual northwest automobile show is held under sponsorship of the Minneapolis Auto Trade association. More than 100 new models will be shown, George K. Belden, association president, stated. All car dealers in the northwest have been invited to attend and exhibition space, using the entire main floor and lower exhibition hall, has been assigned

Delightful, Modish Models



MATRON, miss, or tiny maid—you'll find here the answer to your wardrobe needs. These three delightful and modish models, specially designed for those who sew at home, cover a wide range of sizes and take high honors for style and economy combined.

Pattern 1818, an unusually graceful and flattering double duty frock for the mature figure, features a softly draped collar in contrast and set in skirt panels topped with pockets. Appropriate for any of a wide range of fabrics, it will serve with equal grace as a morning or daytime frock, can be cut twice for double wear. The pattern is available in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, and 52. Size 36 requires 4¼ yards of 39 inch material plus ½ yard contrast.

Pattern 1984, the princess frock, has everything it takes for success. Taking full advantage of the current swing to princess lines, this slick number features front and back panels extending from yoke to hem and can be fashioned with long or short sleeves as you prefer. With a world of zip and a fitted waist, this simply made pattern is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42. Size 16 requires 4⅞ yards of 39 inch or 3 yards of 54 inch fabric, and there are just six simple pieces to the complete pattern.

Pattern 1910, the adorable apron, is an early reminder that Christmas is just around the corner and it's time to start now on the frocks you are planning to make for your baby daughter or a favorite niece. Your selection of materials is unlimited—percale or gingham or pique or pongee or shantung or linen. Designed for sizes 2, 4, 6, and 8 years, the pattern in size 4 requires just 2⅜ yards of 32 or 35 inch fabric.

"New Imperialist War" Coming, Says Voroshiloff

THAT a new "imperialist" war is coming soon was the opinion expressed by Soviet Defense Commissar Klementi E. Voroshiloff in an address at the 19th annual celebration of the Russian revolution, and he declared Russia would be ready to defend itself adequately in the conflict.

Voroshiloff

"The worst enemies of the toilers—imperialists of every shade and denomination — are continuing frenzied preparations for new pillage and usurpations," Voroshiloff said, "and the implacable enemies are preparing to attack Russia.

"The soviet union is firmly determined that its Red army be prepared to rout the enemy on whatever territory they may dare to appear.

"While defending the cause of peace, the soviet government is working ceaselessly to strengthen its defense power. Never will the enemies and incendiaries of war succeed in crossing the sacred and inviolate borders of the land of the soviets.

"The people of the U. S. S. R. now are more than prepared to deliver a crushing blow at all who may dare to encroach on the independence, wealth and honor of our state."

Spanish Government Flees From Madrid

WHILE the Fascist insurgents were smashing their way into Madrid and hurling shells among its chief buildings, the Socialist government of Spain, headed by Premier Fancisco Largo Caballero, fled from the capital and set itself up in Valencia on the Mediterranean coast. The capture of Madrid by the rebels seemed certain and this, it was believed, would be followed by recognition of the Fascist government by several powers, including Portugal and Italy and perhaps Germany. The first nation to accord this recognition was the Central American republic of Salvador.

It is not to be assumed that this would end the civil war, immediately or soon. Caballero, it was reported, believed the loyalists could best continue the struggle from the south, and it was claimed they had strong concentrations at Valencia, Cartegena, Alicante and Albacete. Moreover, there were indications that they would soon receive open aid from Russia and perhaps France. Leon Blum, the French premier, told a Socialist meeting that he was ready to scrap the non-intervention pact and help Caballero if Great Britain would join in such action. This caused consternation among the British statesmen.

Fighting in the suburbs of Madrid was continuous and bloody. The casualties on both sides were heavy, and the Fascist bombardment by artillery and planes killed and wounded hundreds in the center of the city. The Socialist defenders had been ordered to hold their posts regardless of losses, and they fought bravely and stubbornly.

Princess Juliana Will Be Married on January 7

IT WAS officially announced in Amsterdam that Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands and Prince Bernhard zu Lippe-Biesterfeld will be married on January 7. There will be a civil ceremony in the town hall of The Hague followed by a church ceremony in the cathedral of St. James.

Navy and Army Growth Noted in Reports

SECRETARY of the Navy Claude Swanson, who it is believed may retire from the cabinet, made his annual report to the President showing that the navy had made considerable progress in its program to build up to full treaty strength.

At the end of the 1936 fiscal year last June 30, the secretary said, the navy had under construction 79 vessels. Further, the 1937 appropriations act provided for the building of 18 vessels as replacements for over-age ships and for the beginning of construction in 1937 of two battleships. The capital ships are to be built only in the event battleships replacement construction is commenced by great Britain or Japan, the other signatories to the London treaty of 1930.

The secretary emphasized the need for auxiliary vessels, which service and supply combat vessels, as necessary to the maximum efficiency of the fleet. Present auxiliary vessels are old and unfit and should be repaced with modern craft, he said.

Chief of Staff Malin Craig reported to Secretary of War Woodring that the army in the second year of its five-year rebuilding program had gained ground toward its objective—a defense establishment up to the minimum needs of the nation.

"Our military establishment is of a type that—conforming strictly to our national policy—is designed for defense and is unsuitable for aggression," Craig said. "This fact may not be clearly understood by our people. Our establishment is of a character exclusively its own, essentially distinct from the military establishments maintained abroad and now in the course of vast expansion."

Ship Workers' Strike May Be Settled

THROUGH the efforts of Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor and the department's chief conciliator, the strike of maritime workers that tied up a large part of the shipping on the Pacific, Atlantic and Gulf coasts may be settled amicably. Negotiations between the shipowners and the union leaders were resumed in San Francisco, and in Washington Secretary Perkins said she was hopeful that a just agreement would be reached.

E. F. McGrady

On the Pacific coast the strikers had already consented to ease the plight of stranded passengers and release perishable cargoes. The joint strike committee recommended that their membership return strike-bound vessels to home ports. This promised relief for 600 stranded passengers and 900 strikers in Honolulu as well as for hundreds of maritime men idle in Atlantic and gulf ports.

Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet of the federal maritime commission had been compelled to postpone twice his fact finding inquiry but finally got it started.

Peace Move in Labor Federation Fails

FOR a day or two it seemed that the two factions in the American Federation of Labor might get together before the convention opening in Tampa on November 16. But plans for a conference between President William Green and John L. Lewis, leader of the C. I. O., fell through when the former said he had no power to reinstate the suspended unions. Lewis and his chief supporters held a two day meeting in Pittsburgh, after which he said:

"The convention will determine the future of the C. I. O. If it supports the arbitrary and insolent attitude of the executive council, that will be one thing. If it shows a disposition to give consideration of the fixed principles of the C. I. O., that will be another thing."

Mr. Lewis didn't say so explicitly, but "another thing" will be a war for domination of American labor.

Wage Increases and Dividends Declared

MAJOR producers of steel, led by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, largest subsidiary of United States Steel, and the Columbia Steel company, west coast member of the same group, announced wage increases averaging 10 per cent and in some cases running as high as 25 per cent, which will add about $80,000,000 a year to the industry's payroll. In most instances the increases were to take effect November 16. According to compilations of the American Iron and Steel institute they will affect 526,700 employees throughout the country.

Committees acting for employees at more than a dozen plants rejected the offer, demanding higher pay. Negotiations in these cases are therefore continued.

Directors of numerous big corporations authorized special dividends to stockholders and wage bonuses to workers that will release many millons of dollars. This is in pursuance of the policy of avoiding so far as possible the stiff levies imposed on undistributed profits under the revenue act of 1936; and also, in most cases, in recognition of improved business.

Household Questions

To prevent that hard crust forming on left-over cooked cereal pour a cup of cold water over it before placing in the refrigerator.

• • •

To braise roasts, steaks or chops first brown the meat, then put in a tightly covered utensil with very little water either on the top of stove or in oven and continue cooking slowly until meat is tender.

• • •

When "buttered" crumbs are called for, the best way is to melt butter, add crumbs and mix well and then sprinkle over the top of food. If butter is merely "dotted" over the top it does not evenly mix with the crumbs.

25 Years Ago

From issue of Nov. 18, 1911

Joe Hauge, who was staying at Halstad that winter, was back for a visit at home.

Frank Freund of Red Lake Falls completed arrangements for giving a picture show here each Saturday evening that winter.

Construction work was started on the new livery barn being erected by Adolph Satterberg.

Oscar Eastman fell and fractured an arm at the wrist while crossing the railroad tracks enroute home.

A very large crowd enjoyed a turkey raffle and dance that week at the Mike McAndress farm home north of the village.

E. F. Smith, who bought a tract of land near here that fall, entered the employ of the Elliot land agency. He was buying and shipping hay to southern part of the state.

TRAIL FARMER IS KILLED WHEN CAR UPSETS IN DITCH

Polk county's fifth automobile fatality in less than four days occured near Trail Wednesday afternoon when Anton Anderson, 40, Johnson township farmer, was killed on highway 92 west of the village.

Mr. Anderson met his death when his coupe rolled into the ditch as he rounded a curve coming into the village from the west. His death resulted from a broken neck which he sustained when he was thrown against the top of the car.

Mr. Anderson was a World War veteran. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Tilda Anderson, with whom he lived, five brothers and four sisters. He was not married.

CHAMPION BEEF FETCHES $1,471 AT STOCK SHOW

Miss Leona Padelford, 20-year-old exhibitor of the grand champion baby beef at the Minnesota Junior Livestock show at South St. Paul went home Friday with a check for $1,471.75 in her purse, highest price ever paid for a grand champion in the 19-year history of the exposition.

In common with 1,070 boys and girls who exhibited entries in beef, swine, sheep and poultry classes, Leona bid a tearful goodby to her pet steer at the conclusion of Thursday's auction.

Her 1,015 pound winning Aberdeen Angus Yearling, purchased by Swift & Co., for $1.45 a pound, cost the girl only $66 originally. Feed came to about $125, Leona told her friends, giving her a net profit of $1,280, plus the hearttug of being separated from the animal.

The grand champion lamb, owned by Dale Benson, Canby, sold to Wilson Packing Company, for $4.05 a pound, second highest lamb bid in the history of the show. Net sale price was $425.25. Walter Osborne's grand champion hog went to Hormel & Co. for $1.05 a pound and a net price of $378. Osborne is from Madelia.

Largest buying crowd on record at the exposition cheered as auctioneers rang up the sales.

The reserve champion lamb, raised by Shelly Jones of Morristown, was purchased by the First National Bank of Owatonna for $1.30 a pound, while the Egan Chevrolet Company of South St. Paul bought the reserve champion hog, entered by Donald Behrens of Windom, for 35 cents a pound.

WPA HEAD SPEAKS AT DEDICATION OF R. L. FALLS HALL

The new Red Lake Falls community auditorium was formally opened Friday night when crowds from Red Lake Falls and the surrounding territory filled the place during dedication ceremonies.

Dinner was served in the dining room of the new structure and the program followed with Victor Christgau, state administrator of the works progress administration as the principal speaker.

The project is one of the outstanding in the seventh district and was sponsored by the city of Red Lake Falls.

The building cost approximately $70,000 of which $38,000 was furnished by the federal government. More than $12,000 was originally invested by the American Legion post here which several years ago finished the basement and put it to use.

The structure is 122 feet long and 62 feet wide with steel girders supporting the roof. It is termed a three-unit structure offering the community a spacious auditorium, and dining hall, offices for city officials and quarters for the fire department.

The auditorium and stage occupy practically all of the first floor, providing seats for 1,000. The dining hall and kitchen are located in the basement while on the south side of the basement are rooms for city officials.

500 COUNTY MEN SALLY FORTH IN SEARCH OF DEER

Veritable army of deer hunters, including approximately 500 from Pennington county, is taking advantage of the season which opened Sunday and continues until next Wednesday. More than 500 licenses have been issud by County Auditor A. M. Senstad, about the same number as two years ago.

Among the first successful hunters to return with trophies were H. M. Olson, George Mostue, Carlie Johnson, Art Bredeson, Cliff Myrin, August Holmberg, A. J. Cloutier, James Newland, Henry Van Pelt and Willis Carlisle of Detroit Lakes who hunted with his brother W. L. Carlisle.

The largest bucks entered in a contest being conducted by the Kelly hardware store were those bagged by Newland and Van Pelt, 225 pounds each; and Ray and Lloyd Dougherty of Grygla, 195 pounds each. The contest will continue until the close of the hunting season.

NOTICE OF EXPIRATION OF TIME OF REDEMPTION

Office of County Auditor,
County of Pennington,
State of Minnesota—ss.

TO LUELLA C. GREEN:

(1) You are hereby notified that the following piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Pennington, State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit:

Northwest Quarter Section 26, Township 153, Range 42

IS NOW ASSESSED IN YOUR NAME.

(2) That on the 9th day of May, 1932, at a sale of land pursuant to the real estate tax judgment duly given and made in and by the District Court in said County of Pennington on the 14th day of March, 1932, in proceedings to enforce the payment of taxes delinquent upon real estate for the year 1930, for said County of Pennington, the above described piece or parcel of land was offered for sale, and no one bidding upon said offer, said piece or parcel, was bid in for the State of Minnesota for the sum of ($88.86), Eighty Eight and 86-100 Dollars.

(3) That thereafter, and on the 24th day of June, 1936, the said piece or parcel not then having been redeemed from said sale, was sold and conveyed at public sale by the County Auditor of said County, pursuant to the statute, to an actual purchaser for the sum of Two Hundred Eighty Dollars and Ninety-nine cents.

(4) That the amount required to redeem said piece or parcel of land from said sale, exclusive of the costs to accrue upon this notice, is the sum of ($280.99), Two Hundred Eighty Dollars and Ninety-nine cents, and interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum on ($280.99), Two Hundred Eighty and 99-100 Dollars from said 24th day of June, 1936, to the day such redemption is made.

(5) That the tax certificate of sale issued to said purchaser has been presented to me by the holder thereof and this notice requested.

(6) That the time for the redemption of said piece or parcel of land from said tax sale will expire one year after the service of this notice, and the filing of proof of such service in my office.

WITNESS my hand and official seal this 14th day of October, 1936.

A. M. SENSTAD,
Auditor Pennington County, Minn.
(Official Seal)
Approved by Attorney General.

RE-INVESTIGATION OF ALL ON RELIEF IN PROGRESS HERE

A re-survey of the work relief rolls in Pennington county was started this week to determine families most in need. Instructions in accord with WPA requirements governing the requested re-check were received the fore part of the week by John Lynskey of Thief River Falls, county certification officer, from Benjamin E. Youngdahl, director, Cordinated Field Service, which agency has been requested to conduct the survey. Because there are not sufficient funds to give employment to all unemployed persons, WPA is desirous of restricting employment to those most in need.

Revision of work relief rolls is of special importance to county officials as its first objective will be to eliminate those who, as a result of the recovery program and improvement in private employment, are no longer in need of relief. In so-far as quota restrictions will permit, those removed will be replaced by other employables who are still in need. It is expected that this will result in reduction in the cost of local direct relief.

Co-incident with the re-check will begin the termination of WPA's share of drouth relief which was started in July as an emergency measure and designed to terminate about December 1. By that time, most of the 19,000 drouth sufferers who have been given temporary employment, will have had an opportunity to earn enough cash to meet their pressing needs during the winter.

DIES WHILE PREPARING TO TAKE TRAIN ON RUN

Brainerd—A Bemidji railroad man, Frederick Moody, who was engineer on the Minnesota & International railroad, died while he was preparing to take a train out on a run from Brainerd to International Falls. He died instantly, suffering a heart attack shortly after reporting at the roundhouse to begin his run. He was a resident of Bemidji but spent the greater share of his time in Brainerd, working for many years for the Minnesota & International railroad.

BRINKS CELEBRATE 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Surrounded by members of their family and relatives, at the farm home where they had spent upward of 35 years of their married life, Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Brink celebrated their golden wedding anniversary here last Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Brink were married in Black River township on November 21st, 1886, and lived here continuously until about fifteen years ago when they went to Montana to engage in ranching. They retired from ranching this year and returned here to spend their remaining years. The gathering Saturday, which was attended by all children of the honored couple, took place at the old Brink farmstead which is now occupied by their son, Victor and his family.

At noon a three course dinner was served to 50 guests. During the dinner, Victor, the eldest son, acted as master of ceremonies, and read the messages of congratulation from relatives and friends. Rev. H. A. Larson, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church, of which Mr. and Mrs. Brink are members, pronounced grace. The first table was set for the bride and groom of fifty years, and their sons and daughter. The centerpiece was a four tier bride's cake, baked and decorated by Miss Donna Brink, oldest grandchild of the honor guests. A golden pompom chrysanthemum stood at each end of the table, and similar blossoms also decorated three other tables set for relatives and friends. At close of the meal, the entire group was photographed in the yard of the old home where Mr. and Mrs. Brink had lived. After the tables were cleared, Rev. Larson extended congratulations, and was followed by Rev. M. L. Dahle who also brot a congratulatory message. The younger people of the family connections then presented the following program:

Duet—Silver Threads Among the Gold
Mrs. T. A. Brink and Mrs. M. W. Brink
Duet—Donna and Suzanne Brink
Cornet Solo ---- Dewayne Brink
Clarinet Solo -------- Ruth Brink Duet
Raymond and Marian Anderson
Solo -------- Gladys Anderson
Reading Selection
------------ Beverly Brink
Reading ---- Betty Jean Brink
Reading by Frances Brink.

Mr. and Mrs. Brink were recipients of a substantial purse as a token of esteem and remembrance from relatives and friends.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. V. G. Brink and daughters, Donna and Ruth of St. Hilaire, Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Brink and daughter, Suzanne, of Gladstone, Mich., Mrs. Mack Brown, formerly Eda Brink, of Fresno, Calif., Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Brink and son, Dewayne, of St. Hilaire; Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Brink of Nashua, Mont.; Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Brink and daughters, Beverly Jean and Frances of Fairview, Mont.; Mrs. Augusta Peterson, eldest sister of Mrs. Brink, of Litchfield, Minn.; Miss Effie Frederickson, St .Hilaire; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jordin of Litchfield, Minn.; Mrs. Fred Hobart of Willmar.; Mr. and Mrs. Hilmer Freeberg of Crookston; Claus Adolphson and daughter, Hazel; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Anderson, Raymond and Marian Anderson, Felix Anderson and daughter, Gladys; Mr. and Mrs. Ferdie Anderson; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hallstrom; Mrs. Geo. Peterson; Mrs. Paul Thyren, Rev. and Mrs. H. A. Larson; Rev. and Mrs. M. L. Dahle; Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Wilson; Mr. and Mrs. G. K. Lindquist, Vernon and Vivian Lindquist; Mrs. Molina Swanson; Arthur Jacobson and F. W. Sweet, all of St. Hilaire. Albert Anderson, brother of Mrs. Brink, who attended the anniversary gathering, was present at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Brink fifty years ago.

The Wilful Transgressor

It is not the compelled, but the wilful transgression of law which corrupts the character.

There is nothing like the candor of boys toward each other's faults.

Now Ease Neuritis Pains Fast

Bayer Tablets Dissolve Almost Instantly

In 2 seconds by stop watch, a genuine BAYER Aspirin tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work. Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water. By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating. What happens in this glass . . . happens in your stomach.

For Amazingly Quick Relief Get Genuine Bayer Aspirin

If you suffer from pains of neuritis what you want is quick relief.

Genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets give quick relief, for one reason, because they dissolve or disintegrate almost instantly they touch moisture. (Note illustration above.)

Hence — when you take a real Bayer Aspirin tablet it starts to dissolve almost as quickly as you swallow it. And thus is ready to start working almost instantly . . . headaches, neuralgia and neuritis pains start easing almost at once.

That's why millions never ask for aspirin by the name aspirin alone when they buy, but always say "BAYER ASPIRIN" and see that they get it.

Try it. You'll say it's marvelous.

CHECK THAT COUGH BEFORE IT GETS WORSE

Check it before it gets you down. Check it before others, maybe the children, catch it. Check it with FOLEY'S HONEY & TAR. This double-acting compound gives quick relief and speeds recovery. Soothes raw, irritated tissues; quickly allays tickling, hacking. Spoonful on retiring makes for a cough-free sleep. No habit-forming, stomach-upsetting drugs. Ideal for children, too. Don't let that cough due to a cold hang on! For quick relief and speeded recovery insist on FOLEY'S HONEY & TAR.

Decline in Relief Rolls Predicted by Hopkins

IN HIS first press conference since the Presidential election Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator, asserted his belief that relief rolls this winter would be at the lowest point since the start of the depression.

H.L.Hopkins

He estimated that 3,750,000 families and single persons would be receiving federal and local aid January 1, 1937, compared to a peak of 5,316,000 in January, 1935.

"I think," Hopkins said confidently, "that we will go into January of this year caring for 1,000,000 less cases than a year ago and a reduction of about 1,500,000 from 1935."

The administrator's attention was called to the fact that latest figures showed that 3,498,012 persons were employed the first two weeks of October, an increase of 29,020 over the preceding half month. He explained this by pointing out that the drouth in the Midwest added 32,831 destitute farmers to his WPA project list.

Steel Workers Ask for Legislation

FIRST of the big groups that aided in the re-election of President Roosevelt to call on him for their reward, the steel workers have asked that the Chief Executive recommend to the next congress the passage of legislation outlawing company unions and forbidding coercion of workers by employers. George A. Patterson and Elmer J. Malol, employee representatives of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel company, carried this request to the White House.

The Carnegie - Illinois company has offered employees a 10 per cent wage increase on condition that workers sign an agreement to permit adjustment of wages to the cost of living. At his press conference President Roosevelt said living costs should not be permitted to operate to curb wage increases. Furthermore, Secretary of Labor Perkins ruled informally that the employee representatives had no authority to sign such an agreement for their fellow employees.

Labor Board Dissolves Harvester Council Plan

EMPLOYER corporations were hit by a ruling of the National Labor Relations board ordering the dissolution of the "industrial council plan" of the International Harvester company at the plant in Fort Wayne, Ind.

While the ruling dealt only with the Indiana plant, the board pointed out that the same plan also exists in the other 14 Harvester plants in the United States and Canada. It sets a precedent also for future decisions in regard to similar plans in other manufacturing plants throughout the country.

The industrial council of the Harvester company is an illegal labor organization under the terms of the National Labor Relations act, the board ruled. Under it the employees possess "only the shadow, not the substance, of collective bargaining," according to the decision. Numerous benefits conferred on the employees under the plan are admitted but the board says most of them "are granted in the form of paternalism."

A. F. of L. Council's Report on Social Security Act

WHEN the American Federation of Labor's annual convention opened in Tampa it had before it the report of the executive council dealing with, among many other topics, the social security act. The report heartily approved of a federal social security program and urged adoption of state laws that would give labor the greatest possible benefit from the federal statute. If the federal law is unconstitutional, the council said, "it is clear that its provisions must be changed or that sanction must be afforded to them through an amendment to the constitution."

The council questioned the wisdom of obtaining the necessary funds through a payroll tax "which to a great extent is to be paid directly or indirectly by the workers involved" and suggested that congress repeal this feature of the law as soon as it convenes.

In discussing unemployment since NRA's end, the council said:

"The shorter work week and the six hour day furnish the real solution to the insistent problem of unemployment. It is the responsibility that private industry must accept in order to give the necessary balance to economic expansion."

The council reported a membership of 3,422,398 on August 31—the greatest since 1921.

The council dismissed John L. Lewis' epochal rebellion with a detailed factual account of its progress during the last year. "Appropriate action" was suggested.

George L. Berry, national co-ordinator for industrial recovery and president of the Printing Pressmen's union, proposed that the controversy with Lewis and his C. I. O. group be ended by arbitration, but this was rejected by President Green and other federation leaders. John P. Frey lost no time in introducing his resolution for expulsion of the rebel unions with their membership of over a million.

President Starts on His Ocean Cruise

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT went by train to Charleston, S. C., to board the cruiser Indianapolis for a jaunt in southern waters. He said he was not certain where the ship would take him, but in Washington it was assumed that he would proceed at once for Buenos Aires to attend the opening of the Pan-American peace conference on December 1. In that case he will make stops at Port of Spain, Rio de Janeiro and Montevideo, and will not return before December 15. If his plans are changed, he will merely spend two or three weeks fishing in the Caribbean.

At his last press conference before departing the President said he had about completed drafting the 1937 budget. He said also that he had outlined to his subordinates the things he wants done during his absence, these including:

Drafting of a farm tenancy law to end evils attending the system of share-cropping and farm tenancy, now chiefly prevalent in the South.

Clarifying amendments to the social security act.

Amendments to the Tennessee Valley Authority act, permitting broader social and economic improvement of the regions served by the TVA's huge power projects.

Year's Breathing Spell Likely for Farmers

SECRETARY of Agriculture Wallace in an interview intimates that for a year there may be no new legislation for crop control along the lines of the outlawed AAA, for farmers would like to have one really good crop without forced curtailment. But he added: "We will need some legislation eventually unless the weather changes or the world demand for our products greatly improves."

Sec. Wallace

Wallace was asked whether the lack of a control plan might not result in another surplus, leaving the administration up in the air without any machinery to cope with it. He said he could not estimate a surplus ahead of time and that he would rather wait to see what would happen.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., to Marry Ethel du Pont

THE engagement of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., third son of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, to Miss Ethel du Pont of Wilmington, Del., was announced by the young lady's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene du Pont. There had been rumors of this romance for months, but announcement was delayed until after the election. The wedding will be in June after Mr. Roosevelt's graduation from Harvard, and will be a quiet affair. Miss du Pont's father is a member of the board of directors of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours company. She is a niece of Lammot du Pont, president of the company; of Pierre S. du Pont, chairman of the board, and of Irenee du Pont, another director of the board. She was presented to society on June 27 last.

Loyalists Defend Madrid With Desperation

LOYALIST defenders of Madrid, reinforced by troops from the southeast and apparently supplied with airplanes and tanks from Russia, put up unexpected resistance to the furious attacks of the Fascists, delaying the capture of the capital. The insurgents sent many planes to rain bombs on the city and there were dramatic battles in the air as well as on land. The attackers at one time smashed the defending lines at the Los Franceses bridge and forced their way across the Manzanares river and into the northwest quarter of Madrid, but probably retired, for the loyalists dynamited the bridge and captured several rebel tanks. The new supreme defense council in the capital, taking charge when the president and other government officials fled to Valencia, was reported to be functioning smoothly and was confident of ultimate victory over the rebels, even if Madrid were lost to them.

Clark Howell, Eminent Editor, Is Dead

CLARK HOWELL, editor and president of the Atlanta Constitution and one of the best known journalists in the United States, died at his home in Atlanta at the age of seventy-three after a long illness. He was one of the original directors of the Associated Press. He was elected to the position at the time of its incorporation in 1900 and held it at the time of his death.

Always active in state and national politics, Mr. Howell was a pioneer in the formation of "Roosevelt for President" clubs. He was offered his choice of several diplomatic posts in 1933 but declined, saying he felt he could better serve the President and the nation as publisher of the Constitution. He was at various times a member of temporary national commissions, but in the main devoted his time to his journalistic labors. A few years ago the Constitution won the Pulitzer prize for "meritorious service" in exposing political conditions in Atlanta.

Secretary Roper Plans Census of Jobless

NOW that the election is over, Secretary of Commerce Roper is laying plans for the complete census of the unemployed in the United States which has so long been called for. He said he would ask congress to appropriate between 13 and 15 million dollars for this count and that it would require the services of about 25,000 persons who would be given special training for several months.

Sec. Roper

"The census would not only take up an enumeration of those classified as unemployed," said Roper, "but we want to find out which trades or industries the unemployed would fall into. We would also like to help the states in classifying the unemployed from the unemployable.

"There are many economic questions involved. Some families have enough income to support them, but one or more members may be out of work. We want to obtain information on this phase."

Government Buys 9 Million Acres of Poor Farm Land

REXFORD G. TUGWELL, Resettlement administrator, announced that the government had acquired more than nine million acres of land considered unsuitable for crop production, and he added that it should buy ten times as much. The Resettlement administration is committed to pay $39,916,603 for the land, under option in 210 different projects in 44 states at an average price of $4.40 an acre.

These acres, Tugwell said, "could not support human subsistence" when used as they have been, and so were being restored to grazing, forestry, recreation, and other use for which they were naturally fitted.

Tugwell reported 5,476 families still residing on the tracts "will need aid in resettling." More than 2,000 families already have been moved, it was disclosed, and many others found new homes without aid.

Hitler Scraps Another Treaty Clause

ADOLF HITLER has torn up another clause of the Versailles treaty—the one that internationalized the German rivers and canals. He has announced that the reich has resumed sovereignty over all such waters. The treaty clause was designed partly to give Czechoslovakia free access to the sea, and that nation now has agreed with Belgium to protest formally against Germany's action. British Foreign Minister Eden rather mildly criticized Hitler's course.

Belgium Asks Specific Pledge From League

WITH embarrassing directness, Belgium has demanded that the League of Nations be specific on what help an attacked member nation "could count on." In a note, she demanded clarification of the league covenant, particularly the article applying to sanctions against an aggressor. Efforts to prevent war should be emphasized by the league, Belgium said, and measures against countries which endanger peace should be improved upon.

In a recent speech to parliament, intended to clarify a previous address by King Leopold, Foreign Minister Spaak said his country would assure both Germany and France that Belgium never would become the jumping off place for an attack on the territory of either power.

San Francisco's Bridge Formally Opened

SAN FRANCISCO'S dream of 30 years was realized when the great bridge across the bay of Oakland was formally opened with elaborate ceremony. This largest vehicular bridge in the world has been under construction since July 19, 1933, at a cost of $77,000,000, the funds being largely supplied by the Reconstruction Finance corporation. It is eight and a quarter miles long and, except for a tunnel passage through Yerba Buena island, is entirely over water.

Minneapolis—Discussion of forest fire problems and methods of improving fire protection were the principal topics at the meeting of the United States Indian Service superintendents and foresters of the lake states region.

Comfrey—Authorities are seeking the person who fired the .32 caliber bullet which seriously wounded Alex Nelson, 49 years old, marshal here, as he was walking through the city park. Nelson was taken to a hospital in Springfield.

Duluth—Funeral services for Mrs. A. B. Kaplin, 32 years old, fatally injured in an automobile accident near Hinckley, were conducted. Rabbi Harvey Wessel of Duluth officiated. Her husband was the former state commander of the American Legion.

Ely—Razing work in the demolition of the Ely community center, a public land mark here for almost a half century, has begun under a WPA project to make way for the new community building to be constructed on the site under a government WPA grant.

Collegeville—Robert M. Devitt, a graduate of St. John's University here in 1935 and now studying for his master's degree at the University of North Dakota, has been recommended as a candidate for a Rhodes scholarship. He will appear before the Minnesota Rhodes scholarship committee.

St. Paul—Probably the most expensive initiation paddle extant is owned by Robert Raustadt, pledge of the Phil Delta fraternity at Hamline University. It cost 15 cents and one right forefinger. In the process of cutting wood for the paddle on a circular power saw, Otto Lange, cut the forefinger off his right hand.

Robbinsdale—A mass immunization of school children was Robbinsdale's answer to the danger of a diphtheria epidemic. Parents, teachers and pupils co-operated in the program which made it possible for six local doctors, headed by Dr. Edward A. Colp, Robbinsdale health officer, to immunize the children in a few days.

Hutchinson—Plans have been completed by the Gopher campfire club to purchase the cock of 44 wild geese of all varieties and the five deer at the Anderson Wild Life refuge and keep them intact on a new reserve on the north bank of the Crow river in this city. The collection of geese is the most complete of its kind in the United States, officials declared.

Minneapolis—Minnesota's football schedule for 1937 is complete. The addition of the opening game, September 25, with North Dakota State rounds out the program. The Bison clash was announced by Frank McCormick, Gopher athletic director. The schedule also includes games with Nebraska, Indiana, Michigan, Notre Dame, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Northwestern.

So. St. Paul—At the conclusion of the best Minnesota Junior Livestock show in history here, prize exhibits brought record prices. Leona Padelford, 4-H club girl of Austin, raised the grand champion beef, for which Swift & Co. paid a record price of $1.45 a pound, a total of $1,471.75. Robert McCarney of Litchfeld, sold his pen of prize-winning turkeys for $2 a pound. Sales of all animals exhibited amounted to $55,000 for the 4-H club members who competed.

St. Paul—The peaceful life of Minnesota deer was disrupted when an army of hunters invaded their haunts for the opening of the annual deer season, which will continue to November 25 in sixteen counties and parts of four others. Counties fully open are Cook, Lake, St. Louis, Carlton, Pine, Kanabec, Koochiching, Itasca, Aitkin, Crow Wing, Cass, Hubbard, Clearwater, Beltrami, Lake of the Woods and Roseau. The season also will be open in that part of Kittson and Marshall counties east of the old Pembina trail, running from the north boundary of Kittson county to the south boundary of Marshall county; all of that part of Becker county east of the Soo railroad line and all of Mille Lacs county north of the Great Northern railroad tracks running through Milaca, Foreston and Beck.

Princeton — Gridiron warfare in Minnesota high school football circles drew to a close with several elevens still retaining records showing no defeats or ties. Princeton led a list of undefeated untied elevens which included Deer River, Warroad, Cloquet, Moorhead, Minneapolis Miller Vocational, Farmington, West Concord, and St. Augustine, Austin. In addition to completing tough schedules undefeated and untied, Farmington and St. Augustine were able to hold their opponents scoreless.

How Many Pennies Your Child's Life?

Don't Try to "Save" on Home Remedies—Ask Your Doctor

There is one point, on which practically all doctors agree. That is: Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first.

All mothers know this. But sometimes the instinct to save a few pennies by buying "something just as good" overcomes caution.

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy — "milk of magnesia" — many doctors for over half a century have said "PHILLIPS." For Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the standard of the world. Safe for children.

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Comes now, also in tablet form. Get the form you prefer. But see that what you get is labeled "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia." 25¢ for a big box of the tablets at drug stores.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Constipated 30 Years

"For thirty years I had stubborn constipation. Sometimes I did not go for four or five days. I also had awful gas bloating, headaches and pains in the back. Adlerika helped right away. Now I eat sausage, bananas, pie, anything I want and never felt better. I sleep soundly all night and enjoy life." —Mrs. Mabel Schott.

If you are suffering from constipation, sleeplessness, sour stomach, and gas bloating, there is quick relief for you in Adlerika. Many report action in thirty minutes after taking just one dose. Adlerika gives complete action, cleaning your bowel tract where ordinary laxatives do not even reach.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika checks the growth of intestinal bacteria and colon bacilli."

Give your bowels a real cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and stubborn constipation. Leading Druggists.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—There is an "era of good feeling" going the rounds that is quite different than anything we have had since early in 1929. It is being promoted with a great deal of enthusiasm and present results as well as indications justify the promotion work that is going on in the New Deal press agent circles.

Era of Good Feeling

This era of good feeling is quite an interesting thing from another angle, namely, politics. It is being used by the politicians again to establish President Roosevelt in the same situation as he found himself at the beginning of his first term in the White House. I am afraid he is being built up again as a superman and, in politics, a superman or his position is hard to maintain in the public mind.

Business also is indulging in this era of good feeling. Business always puts its best foot forward, just as lovers do. It wants to develop a spirit of good will on the part of the public and it wants to show its financial backers how things are coming along all hunky-dory. There is nothing wrong in the attitude. It is perfectly logical and human—and it is very interesting to see this wave of healthy feeling grow.

The important, as well as the interesting, thing about this era of good feeling is that to the expert students it shows a gradual, if not conclusive, decline in depression conditions. It proves that things are on the up grade—not that they are at the top yet, but that a momentum is being established which may carry the economic recovery to the top if the federal government settles down and treats business with fairness.

As I said above, New Deal press agents are promoting this business recovery for all that it is worth. Naturally, they are attributing it to the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt as the basic factor in this upward surge of business. They are capitalizing it to the fullest because by so capitalizing it, the political party in power gets its due share of credit. There is no doubt that they will continue on this course because everyone likes to read or hear about improved business conditions, restoration of dividend payments, increasing volume of traffic, any and all things that show the nation is slowly but surely getting back on its economic feet.

While the New Dealers are shouting from the housetops how President Roosevelt has accomplished all of these things, there comes a discordant note from business itself. Business leaders, just like politicians, want credit for whatever is accomplished, whether they are responsible or someone else. They do not care any more than politicians whether the credit properly is theirs. It is simply an exposition of the vain, glorious trait that seems to exist in nearly everyone.

* * *

Whose the Credit

Business is seeking to show that it is pulling itself together, opening new factories, raising wages, in spite of New Deal policies with the handicaps that some of those policies include. So, business is seeking to counterbalance the politicians and the politicians, speaking through New Deal press statements, are trying to fortify their own position as saviors of the country. Neither one is correct. Without doing too much debunking, I believe it ought to be said that President Roosevelt and his associates have executed some government policies that have been helpful to the business structure. With equal frankness, it ought to be said that business leaders have taken the bull by the horns and have proceeded to help materially in putting commerce and industry back on the right track again. Neither one ought to take too much credit. Some credit is due each but neither one nor both together is entitled to claim all of the credit for the recovery of business that is now underway.

The answer to the upward swing of business lies chiefly in the fact that the depression has worn itself out. It would have worn itself out just the same whether the administration was New Deal or Republican. It would have accomplished just as much in the way of expanded buying power and increased production whether Mr. Roosevelt was re-elected or whether he had been defeated and Governor Landon of Kansas had been elected at the end of the recent national campaign.

I am reminded by this discussion of a remark that the late Eugene Black made while he was governor of the Federal Reserve board. On that occasion I asked him whether there were signs of the end of the depression. His reply was, "not yet." He added, however, that the depression would destroy itself as every other depression in history had done and that when this point of exhaustion had been reached, commerce and industry would take an upward swing. Then, he added with reference to some of the economic students of the administration in power: "It will wear itself out and good times will come back again—and every doggone professor and economic theorist in the world will try to claim credit for it."

So, I think it can be said without equivocation that if anybody or anything is entitled to credit for the indicated recovery movement, we had better be fair and admit it was a combination of circumstances, not the least of which was the natural law of supply and demand. It seems utterly silly to me for any individuals or groups of individuals to attempt to corral all of the praise.

Wage Increases

Those who have access to the market pages of the great metropolitan daily newspapers must have been impressed by the rapid fire announcements coming from big industrial corporations of wage increases, bonuses for employees and melon cutting in the form of dividends for the shareholders. They must have been impressed, likewise, with the sharp rise in security prices that obviously has reflected the expanded business and increased earnings.

A prosperous nation may not always be a happy one but there is a certain psychology about a prosperous nation that makes it carefree. It is a psychology that makes the average man and woman forget to a large extent about the recent pinch of economic displacements and, as well, those same people are inclined to disregard and give no consideration to the morrow.

Let us look into those circumstances. When corporations or other forms of business have reasonable years in their particular lines, early in the winter they begin to see what the year's total will be. They can figure rather accurately what the returns will be in the last two months, say, after they have made their totals for the first ten months of the year. So, whenever they reach that stage in a reasonably successful year they can make their plans for distribution of the profits.

Now, we have a tremendously high tax rate on corporation surpluses and we have rather high tax rates on incomes of individuals. Corporations and other businesses, therefore, start figuring how to do the best they can with the earnings of the year. Some of them determine that their employees should share substantially in the profits of their labors; others want to distribute as much of these earnings as they may to their stockholders because such a showing creates a demand in the market for their shares and such a demand is influential in establishment of the corporation's credit for borrowing money if it needs to borrow from the banks. In either event, corporation managements obviously give considerations to the tax the corporation would have to pay and I think it is not a matter of condemnation for them to turn over as much of their profit as they can to those interested in the business instead of to a government which wastes so much.

To be perfectly fair, it must be said that the money now being distributed either in dividends or in bonuses to workers or in wage increases was earned before the recent election. Its distribution, however, is motivated largely on prospects for the future. In other words, those responsible for these distributions of earnings feel that they can let that money out of their hands. They may not be distributing all of the sums available but the "era of good feeling" is accepted by all of them as indicating the chances for continued earnings are bright.

How It Works Out

I have merely touched on the effect of distribution of earnings among the holders of capital. It is just as important to consider the effect of distribution of these earnings on the laboring classes. Labor has been convinced under the American system for many years that it is entitled to some share of the profits from its products. Employers are taking that same view to a greater extent than anywhere else in the world. When labor gets bonuses or gets increases in its pay, there is a reaction among those workers who have sound judgment that prompts them to do the best they can on their jobs. That is to say, they become contented workers and they are less susceptible to the propaganda of radicals who seek to promote strikes and labor disturbances to further the ends of communism. That is a part of the era of good feeling as much as the added earnings of corporations or the enthusiasm of politicians over victory.

Bob Davis Reveals

Tales from Vancouver Island; The Duelling Pistols

DURING the early 1840s, in the city of Dublin, Daniel O'Connell, distinguished among the Irish liberators, made a public speech denouncing the Dublin corporation, violently anti-Catholic, as a "beggarly group," organized for the destruction of Irish ideals in Erin's struggle for independence.

Although the broadside, in comparison with O'Connell's usual explosions, was regarded as somewhat mild, one D'Esterre, a member of the Dublin corporation, challenged the Liberator to meet him on the field of honor. So definite and provocative was the challenge that O'Connell had no option other than to accept, pistols being the weapons.

The meeting took place in Phoenix park with the result that D'Esterre received a bullet through the bladder. O'Connell, desiring only to wound his antagonist, had deliberately fired low, but the shot proved fatal; D'Esterre died within forty-eight hours. Despite the sensation that ensued, friends and families of the deceased declined to prosecute, and the affair, which happened at the very peak of O'Connell's career, was dismissed from the public tongue.

Not so, however, from the memory of the survivor, who, in his heart, felt a deep remorse to the end of his days.

Patriot Makes Amends.

Some years later, O'Connell, hearing that Mrs. D'Esterre was involved in a lawsuit, threw up two lucrative briefs, went down to Cork, pleaded her suit and won, for which he took no reward.

In after years, whenever he passed the house of D'Esterre, he was observed to lift his hat, while his lips moved as if in prayer. The Liberator, whose declining years were fraught with pain and illness, died, 1847, in Genoa, Italy, while on his way to the Vatican. His will bequeathed his body to Ireland and his heart to the Eternal city. The former is enshrined in the Cemetery of Glasnevian outside of Dublin, the latter in a crypt near the tomb of Lascaris, in the Church of St. Agatha, Rome.

After a lapse of more than a century it would seem that the O'Connell-D'Esterre affair had been entirely forgotten. Perhaps it might have been but for the arrival in Victoria, B. C., shortly before the World war of a Major Wheeler.

Pistols Travel Overseas.

While in Victoria Major Wheeler met James G. Yates, from whom he borrowed a sum of money that because of reverses he could not return. For the debt Mr. Yates accepted as payment in full a pair of muzzle-loading dueling pistols with the necessary appurtenances, all snugly packed in an oak case bearing on a small silver plaque the name "Alex Cockburn, Esq."

In 1914 Yates, with his family, moved from Victoria to Comox, on the eastern shore of Vancouver island, where I found him and learned the startling sequel to the duel fought 121 years ago.

With the Alex Cockburn weapons lying between us, snug in the velvet recesses of the historic oak box from which they were last brought forth to defend the honor of O'Connell and D'Esterre, Yates finished the story to which the preceding paragraphs are but an introduction.

"After taking up our home here in Comox, where I brought the pistols received from Major Wheeler, we soon became acquainted with the residents, among them the D'Esterre family, owners of the Elk hotel, headquarters of tourists who come from all over the world to fish for the Tyee salmon that are so plentiful in Comox bay.

Family Recovers Weapons.

"One day my daughter, in conversation with S. B. W. d 'Esterre, asked if he knew anything about dueling pistols, volunteering the information that on the inside lid of a box of weapons in my possession there was written reference to a De Destee (sic), who had lost his life. . . ."

Mr. Yates stopped abruptly, whilst I read aloud the inscription.

"Mr. Stephen D'Esterre reported the matter to his brother, Lieut.-Col. J. C. E. D'Esterre, who called upon me and asked to see the weapons," continued Mr. Yates. "When I opened the box, disclosing the weapons, he turned deadly pale. After examining both with the utmost care, he admitted that he and his brothers had ransacked Ireland and England in search of them. They had seen several pairs alleged to be genuine but of these now in Comox he had no doubt. Had not my daughter observed the name D'Esterre on the legend pasted in the box, I question whether these historic weapons would ever have been brought to the attention of his three great-grandsons, my neighbors for many years and in my opinion the rightful owners."

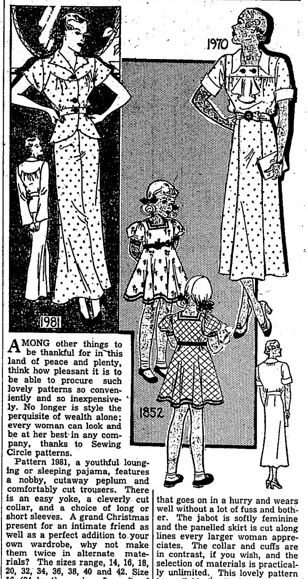
Lovely and Inexpensive



AMONG other things to be thankful for in this land of peace and plenty, think how pleasant it is to be able to procure such lovely patterns so conveniently and so inexpensively. No longer is style the perquisite of wealth alone; every woman can look and be at her best in any company, thanks to Sewing Circle patterns.

Pattern 1981, a youthful lounging or sleeping pajama, features a nobby, cutaway peplum and comfortably cut trousers. There is an easy yoke, a cleverly cut collar, and a choice of long or short sleeves. A grand Christmas present for an intimate friend as well as a perfect addition to your own wardrobe, why not make them twice in alternate materials? The sizes range, 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 (34 bust) requires 5 yards of 35 inch material.

Pattern 1852 fashions into an adorable little frock which will make small eyes dance and sparkle. Just eight pieces to the pattern, including the band and facings, you can run it up in a jiffy and have a perfect gift for your baby daughter or favorite niece. As simple as can be, it is nevertheless pert and engaging, truly a prize. Send for it in size 2, 4, 6, or 8 years. Material selection—dimity or swiss or voile or crepe or gingham. Size 4 requires just 2 1-8 yds. of 35 or 39 inch.

Pattern 1970 is a comely and graceful morning or daytime frock for matron sizes, the sort that goes on in a hurry and wears well without a lot of fuss and bother. The jabot is softly feminine and the panelled skirt is cut along lines every larger woman appreciates. The collar and cuffs are in contrast, if you wish, and the selection of materials is practically unlimited. This lovely pattern is available in all of the following sizes—36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, and 52. Size 40 requires 4 3-8 yards of 35 or 39 inch fabric plus 3-4 yd. contrast.

Send for the Barbara Bell Fall Pattern Book containing 100 well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send fifteen cents in coins for your copy.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 367 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

The Gifts Renewed

In fields but lately seared by summer's drought,
Where famine seemed to lay its withering hand,
A miracle has come to still our doubt
And spread a glad Thanksgiving through the land.

Unseen beneath the drab brown coat she wore,
The soil grew rich to nurture other seeds.
Then autumn rains released the hidden store
In verdant growths, to fill our winter needs.

So, God of Wisdom, may we learn to build
In quiet faith, through even darkest days;
Assured our destiny will be fulfilled
Through Thy inscrutable and wondrous ways.

Dwight Pennington, in Kansas City Times

Why we have Thanksgiving Turkey

THREE times a year, at Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's, the people of the United States advance upon a certain huge golden bronze fowl, cut its throat, strip it of its plumage and convert it into a savory dish which fairly makes the old table groan under the extra burden. Since we have raised this bird into a national significance which parallels to an almost equal degree that of the eagle, symbol of the government itself, it has a special interest to all Americans. Although many folks may still be "as poor as Job's turkey," says a writer in Pathfinder Magazine, they somehow manage and contrive to have turkey for Thanksgiving, whether they can or cannot afford it.

In years gone by those families who could not afford turkey turned to chicken, duck, beef, rabbit, or even pork and were glad to get it.

But now let's get back to the question of why we have or try to have or would like to have or imagine we would like to have turkey for Thanksgiving dinner. The answer of course is that the turkey is strictly an American bird and serving it at feasts of thanksgiving is an old and ancient American custom. Some authorities will tell you that we eat turkey on Thanksgiving day because after the first harvest in the fall of 1621 the Pilgrim Fathers at Plymouth set aside a period for feasting and offering thanks. To provide food for this feast hunters were sent out by Governor Bradford and they returned with a large supply of game. Hospitality was extended to the Indians, 91 of whom attended the festival which lasted for three days. Conspicuous among the game on the tables were numerous wild turkeys, then common in the woods of Massachusetts. From this circumstance, they say, arose the popular association of these birds with thanksgiving days.

The Turkey Is Regarded as an American Bird.

This of course is the true origin of the custom so far as white man has been concerned with it. But the origin of turkey feasts goes back much farther. The millions of families who plan on enjoying hearty Thanksgiving turkey dinners this year will in reality be observing a custom that prevailed ages before the Pilgrims first gathered around their festive board in New England. Smithsonian institution records now bridge the years that veil the aboriginal civilizations and show that the Indians of the Southwest domesticated turkeys and fattened them for their ceremonial feasts. While the Pilgrim Fathers, grateful for good harvests and a year of prosperity in the New World decided on a day of thanksgiving to be celebrated at a banquet of roast turkey, really gave posterity the spirit of thanksgiving, the practice of such feasts had been established long before by the cliff dwellers who actually got their birds from a pen as we do today and not from a thicket as the Pilgrims did.

According to Smithsonian records the turkey of the aboriginal Indians more nearly approximated the Thanksgiving turkey of today than the scrawny wild fowl felled by the blunderbuss of the Pilgrim huntsman. Most of our domesticated varieties of turkeys today are really descended from the Mexican wild turkey that ranged over Arizona, western New Mexico and southern Colorado — virtually the dooryard of earliest American civilization. The Pilgrim turkey was merely the wild variety of the same bird which roamed the eastern part of the United States.

When the Festive Bird Goes Into the Oven.

Just as the turkey was exclusively an American bird in the time of the aboriginal Indians, so it is today. No fowl from any foreign country approximates it. In fact, wherever turkeys are raised today, and they have been introduced to many foreign countries, the ancestral stock came from America. And so far as is known turkeys are never imported to this country. Contrary to popular opinion the turkey did not get its name from Turkey (the country of that name). The first turkeys taken from the New World (America) and sold in Spain were handled largely by Hebrew merchants. Since the turkey was frequently confused with the peacock it was quite natural that the Hebrew trades should apply to it their name for the peacock, or "tukki." More or less common use of this name followed, which easily became in English our present name "turkey."

THE JUDGE SAYS:

"THANKSGIVING is approaching—it's time we told ourselves over and over again the things about which we should be thankful. There are plenty of those things. But, most important of all, I think, is the chance given to make ourselves happy again."—Judge Harry B. Keldan.

Still Boasts Ducking Stool

The Village of Fordwich, ancient port of Canterbury on the banks of the Stour and the Thames Estuary, still boasts a ducking stool, though its only purpose is to remind Fordwichers of the gone glory of a day when pirates came ashore to raid the rich towns of Kent. Attached to the rear wall of a building behind the town hall is a huge oak beam equipped with pulley and tackle from which the stool is suspended. Culprits were bound to the stool and lowered into the waters of the Stour. Legend calls this piece of shore the Drowning Wharf.

JUNIOR CLASS PLAY FRIDAY, DEC. 11TH

The Junior class play entitled "The Million Dollar Joke" will be given at the high school auditorium Friday evening, December 11th. Percival Smith, bashful and tongue-tied, lives with two friends, Harold Bentley and Rossiter Arkwright, who take advantage of his shy and timid manner. It is not until Peggy Eustis appears on the scene that Percival is persuided to assert himself. A great change takes place when his pals vacate and he decides to become a mayoralty candidate.

It is Peggy, and a wire informing him he is heir to a million dollar estate, that does the trick. From this point on, there are many interesting and laughable situations impossible to describe. See the play yourself with the cast as follows: Carmine Highland as Mrs. Eustis; Grayce Erickson as Peggy Eustis; Maitland Carter as Percival Smith; Floyd Prestby as Bill Jones; Gordon Nohre as Harold Bentley; Ralph Biskey as Rossiter Arkwright; Harvey Sollum as David Morgan; Neoma Durheim as Alicia Morgan; Agnes Anderson as Honor Bright, and Ellen Janda as Miss Gibbs.

A matinee performance for school children will be given in the afternoon.

Guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Graham on Thanksgiving were Mr. H. W. Zimmerman, Masie, Alvert and Gordon Zimmerman of Bertha, and Alfred Uhde of Parkers Prairie. The Zimmermans are father, sisters and brother, respectively, of Mrs. Graham.

Mr. and Mrs. Arne Vik left Tuesday for Minneapolis to be present at funeral services for the late S. O. Olstad of that city, an old friend of Mr. and Mrs. Vik.

LLOYD HAUGEN DIES

Rev. M. L. Dahle of this village, conducted funeral services yesterday at Clearwater Lutheran church for Lloyd Haugen, son of David Haugen, residing southeast of here, who died Monday following an operation performed the previous Thursday. Lloyd Haugen was 15 years and 7 months of age.

TO START CAGE SEASON FRIDAY

St. Hilaire begins its 1936-37 season playing Goodridge at Plummer Hall, Friday, Dec. 4. Game is called at 8:00 P. M. Let's all turn out and give the team our support. With three regulars back from last year, we should go places—and wait until you see the new basketball suits. Keep the season schedule below for reference:

Dec. 4—Goodridge at Plummer.
Dec. 10—Plummer at Plummer.
Jan. 8—Alvarado at Alvarado.
Jan. 22—Open.
Jan. 26—Plummer at Plummer.
Jan. 29—R. L. Falls at R. L. Falls.
Feb. 12—Goodridge at Goodridge.
Feb. 19—T. R. Falls at T. R. Falls.

Plans are to play a game with Oklee and one with Thief River Falls' second squad.

VILLAGE ELECTION SET FOR TUESDAY

The annual village election will be held between the hours of 9:00 A. M., and 5:00 P. M., next Tuesday, December 8th. The polling place will be at the Bilden & Olsen hall. To be elected are a president of the village council, one councilman, a clerk, treasurer, assessor, Justice of the Peace, and a constable. As the caucus system is used this year, it is likely more than one ticket will be in the field before election day.

Annual business meeting and Aid will be held at the Evang. Mission church Friday, December 11, starting at 2:00 P. M.

Mrs. Adolph Satterberg is spending the week at the G. I. Fellman home, and with other friends and relatives in Minneapolis.

County Treasurer John Gullingsrud is back at his desk at the court house at Thief River Falls after an enforced layoff of nearly three months because of illness.

About an inch of snow fell over this section Monday. While some roads are a bit slippery because of the snow, it does not hamper auto traffic to any extent.

T. B. Folden and other members of his family motored down Thursday evening from Holt for a brief visit with his son, Walter, at the Cities Service Station.

The Norman and Hallamack boys returned last week after a successful deer hunting trip in the vicinity of Malcolm. Several other hunters from here also were successful in getting their deer.

A WPA crew was here recentley and painted the letters ST. HILAIRE across the roof on Larson Bros. building as a guide to airplanes that may pass over. Similar markings are being made in every town in the state.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Black and daughter, Mrs. K. O. Gigstad and children, Klemens and Evelyn, returned Sunday after having spent Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Gigstad at St. Paul. They also visited other relatives while away.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Gieseke and family have returned to their home at New Ulm after a visit at the home of Mrs. Gieseke's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ulrich. The Gieseke family were residents southeast of here about six years ago before removing to New Ulm.

After today there are only 18 shopping days remaining before Christmas. Shop early and mail early is urged upon everyone by tradespeople and those who handle the mails. Better and quicker service is available to those who heed the oft-repeated injunction to "Shop early, and mail early."

HANDICRAFT CLASS DEC. 10

The Adult Education handicraft class, under direction of Mrs. Esther Franks of Plummer, will have its next meeting at the home of Mrs. Harold Holmes at the usual hour, Thursday, December 10. A very interesting meeting was held Tuesday this week at the home of Mrs. M. H. Jackson.

WINTER SHOWS OPEN AT CROOKSTON FEB. 8

Preparations have already started for the Northwest School Farmers Week and Red River Valley Winter Shows which will be held at Crookston during the week of Feb. 8. The opening day will be devoted to numerous livestock and farm crops judging contests. Following the contests, a banquet will be held at which time silver trophies and other awards will be presented to winners. An outstanding speaking program will be presented this year. Speakers of state and national prominence have been secured. Other features will be fully as good as in any previous year, and officials in charge of arrangements are anticipating a record-breaking attendance.

MRS. E. E. ANDERSON DIES WEDNESDAY

Mrs. E. E. Anderson, a pioneer settler in this community, and one of the oldest, if not the oldest resident of Pennington county, died shortly after 10 o'clock last evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hilda Gigstad. Mrs. Anderson was 92 years of age last September, and her death was caused by infirmities incident to old age. In her immediate family, she is survived by four daughters and one son, Mrs. R. Wallen of Minneapolis, Mrs. Ida Anderson of Bowbells, N. D. Mrs. Albin Olson of Resholt, S. D., Mrs. Hilda Gigstad of this village, and Anton E. Anderson of River Falls. Funeral services will be held Monday at 2:00 P. M., at the Swedish Lutheran church with Rev. H. A. Larson officiating. Interment will be at the cemetery east of the village. A complete obituary will be published next week.

Mrs. N. E. Beebe left last week for a visit with relatives at St. Paul, Mankato and Rapidan, Minn. She planned to be gone a week or more.

Mrs. Edla Martin of Seattle, Wash., came a few days ago for a visit with her father, P. A. Hallstrom, and with other relatives in Polk Center and in St. Hilaire.

1ST MEETING HELD IN WHIST TOURNEY

First of a series of meetings contemplated for the whist tournament to be given here during the winter months, was held Tuesday night at the hall in the Bilden & Olsen building. Two teams, the White and Orange, were selected from among nearly fifty players present the first night, to compete for championship honors during the series. The Orange team worsted their opponents the opening night, and enjoyed a free lunch as the result of their combined efforts, lunch for the occasion being served at both cafes. It was decided at this meeting to have the next gathering on Tuesday, Dec. 15, starting at 8:00 P. M. Time and date for the women's meeting in the B. M. Club rooms was set the same as that above, to permit couples from country and town to attend together, altho the games for men and women are held in separate halls.

CHRISTMAS SEAL SALE UNDER WAY

With funds obtained in the 1935 sale of Christmas Seals, important work in prevention of tuberculosis has been done in St. Hilaire during the past year, according to M. R. Graham, general Seal sale chairman. The Pennington County Public Health Ass'n feels valuable work has been done in the past, and hopes continued support of friends of Christmas Seals will make possible an even better job in 1937. Tuberculosis has taken many lives in Pennington county. 335 men, women and children have been killed by this disease in this county since 1909, the first year Christmas Seals were sold in Minnesota. Among the projects financed by Christmas Seals in Pennington county was the health survey in the rural schools and in Goodridge and St. Hilaire during this year when 1,020 children were inspected by the Christmas Seal nurse, and 20 home calls were made.

Pennington county schools have also benefited by receiving first aid supplies, cup dispensers and paper cups, towel cabinets and paper towels. Every cent spent for Seals is spent for a good cause.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Johnson motored here last week and spent Thanksgiving with relatives. They visited at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Allen, and at the home of Mr. Johnson's mother and sister, Mrs. M. Bjerk and Mrs. Oscar Haugen.

Trade Leaders Ask That Work Relief Be Ended

THAT work relief as administered by the federal government be gradually discontinued is the recommendation of the board of United States Chamber of Commerce. The board adopted a report of a committee headed by John W. O'Leary of Chicago which held that the work relief "proves in operation to fall far short of its purposes and to create new problems."

J. W. O'Leary

"The committee," said the report, "does not propose sudden and instantaneous stoppage. Those gradual steps should be taken which are always essential when adjustments have to be made upon a considerable scale.

"There is at present danger that, ceasing to have work for unemployed persons as its function, this activity will undertake to replace some of the functions of private enterprise in advancing recovery. There can be no substitute for private enterprise in the development of improved economic conditions."

These five general conclusions from its study were set forth by the committee:

Experience has demonstrated the difficulty of attempting to obtain accurate figures on unemployment through census methods.

Estimates of unemployment on national basis are necessarily inaccurate and lend themselves to exaggeration.

Projects of work relief should not be allowed to take the place in any degree of established agencies for performance of government functions.

Projects of work relief should not be permitted to compete in any degree with private enterprise for workers, skilled or unskilled, and should be so conducted as to encourage workers to seek private employment.

It is evident that further advance in business activities will require the services in private enterprise of persons now on work relief at public expense.

Divided Court Upholds Work Insurance Law

NEW YORK'S state's unemployment insurance law was upheld by an equally divided United States Supreme court, Justice Harlan Fiske Stone being absent on account of illness and taking no part in consideration of the case. There was no formal opinion and no announcement of the lineup of the court.

In the opinion of legal experts the court's action has wide implications affecting not only state employment insurance and other social legislation, but also the administration's social security program.

C. I. O. Unions to Remain Suspended by A. F. of L.

BY A vote of 21,679 to 2,043 the convention of the American Federation of Labor approved the action of the executive council in suspending the ten union that are with John L. Lewis in his Committee for Industrial Organization movement. However the convention accepted the advice of President Green and voted to renew the council's offer to talk peace with the rebel unions and to give the council power to call a special federation convention and expel the rebels if peace negotiations fail.

Labor Wants More Money for La Follette Inquiry

WHILE it was figuring what to do in the matter of the suspended C. I. O. unions, the American Federation of Labor in convention at Tampa dealt with a number of other topics. Among these was the adoption of a report of the committee on legislation demanding of congress additional appropriations for the special senatorial sub-committee investigating violations of civil liberties. This group, headed by La Follette of Wisconsin, has confined its investigations almost wholly to activities of employers in combating unions or in protecting their plants against mob violence during strikes. A large part of the testimony taken has concerned agencies which furnish professional strikebreakers or which sell arms and tear gas to industrial corporations.

The report said: "Millions of dollars will be available to defeat the La Follette investigation. If our reports are as accurate as we believe them to be, then the greatest and most adroit lobby that has ever operated in Washington is being organized to kill this astounding expose of the raising, financing and directing of private armies."

Officials of detective agencies that supply guards for industrial plants assert the real purpose of the La Follette investigation is to make conditions easier for John L. Lewis' committee on industrial organization to promote unionization of steel, coal, and textile workers according to the industrial union plan. They said Lewis delivered several million votes to Franklin D. Roosevelt last November 3 and is in a position to seek a pay off.

In Washington, John J. Abt, counsel for the La Follette subcommittee, announced the dispatch of questionnaires to 700 detective agencies in all parts of the country.

J. E. Davies Appointed Ambassador to Russia

JOSEPH E. DAVIES, wealthy lawyer of Washington, has served the Democratic party in various ways for many years and has contributed liberally to its campaign funds, and now he has been rewarded. President Roosevelt has appointed him American ambassador to Soviet Russia, to succeed William C. Bullitt, who was transferred to the Paris embassy.

J. E. Davies

Mr. Davies, whose wife is the former Mrs. Marjorie Post Hutton, heiress of the big Post cereal fortune, is a native of Wisconsin and practiced law in that state until 1913, when he went to Washington. He was chairman of the federal trade commission under President Wilson in 1915-'16, and was taken along by Wilson as an economic adviser to the Versailles conference. Before that he had served as western manager of Wilson's campaign and as secretary of the Democratic national committee and he was offered in 1918 the ambassadorship to Russia, to Italy and the governorship of the Philippines. He declined, however, so he could run for the United States senate from Wisconsin. He was defeated. He was active during the recent campaign, serving on the advisory committee at Democratic headquarters in New York.

President Roosevelt signed the Davies commission before he left on his South American cruise, but the announcement was withheld until word was received from the soviet government that Davies was persona grata at Moscow.

Spanish Rebels Recognized by Italy and Germany

MUSSOLINI and Hitler threw Europe into spasms of alarm by suddenly calling into session the ministerial councils of Italy and causing them to recognize formally the Fascist government of Gen. Francisco Franco as the legal government of war-torn Spain. It was taken for granted that Austria and Hungary would follow suit. Maj. Ramon Franco, brother of the Spanish insurgent chieftain, had been in Rome and probably informed Il Duce that the general, whose attacks on Madrid were meeting with unexpected resistance, might lose the war unless he were given active support by the nations that sympathized with his cause. Mussolini and Hitler did not immediately announce that they would quit the international agreement for intervention in Spain.

Gen. Franco

Great Britain and Russia were stunned by the action of the two dictators and cabinet meetings were hurriedly called. The British are determined not to be drawn into the Communist-Fascist conflict but they believe that Italy and Germany, especially the former, have designs in the Mediterranean that would peril Britain's seaway to the Orient and are preparing to meet any such threat. Russia's reaction was awaited breathlessly, and the soviet government was being provoked still further by the fact that General Franco declared a blockade of the port of Barcelona, capital of the almost independent province of Catalonia. This move certainly was made to stop the landing of munitions and food from Russia destined for the Spanish loyalist forces. England, France and other nations were greatly concerned over the blockade, for the port is largely used by their shipping. The Spanish rebels have created a strongly fortified port at Palma on the island of Mallorca that can be used as a base for bombardment of Barcelona from the sea.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the house of commons that British ships on the high seas would be protected against interference by either side in the Spanish war.

According to the loyalist government, submarines, "either Italian or German," attacked Spanish government warships at the entrance to the Cartagena harbor and torpedoed the cruiser Miguel de Cervantes.

President Warns Business to Aid Employment

SAILING from Charleston aboard the cruiser Indianapolis for Buenos Aires and the Pan-American peace conference, President Roosevelt directed the release of a statement in which he announced that the government will continue to spend money on a work relief program until July 1, 1938 at least. It is estimated that congress will be asked to appropriate as much as $1,500,000,000 for relief in the next session.

Although he professed himself gratified at the inroads upon unemployment by industry, the President commented upon the fact that private business has not yet absorbed vast masses of the unemployed and that millions of persons remain on the Works Progress administration pay roll and other governmental agencies.

Mr. Roosevelt declared it was "widely known" that many of the largest industries will not hire workers over forty years of age. To a large extent, he charged, this policy is responsible for the relatively large number of older workers on relief. And industry must expand opportunities for the hiring of unskilled workers, he said.

The mayors of the United States, in annual conference in Washington, were gratified by assurances from both Harold Ickes, head of the PWA, and Harry Hopkins, head of the WPA, that the administration will not cease its spending efforts to keep alive the emergency organizations intended to deal with the unemployment problem.

Rex Tugwell Resigns to Join Molasses Concern

REXFORD GUY TUGWELL, known as the No. 1 braintruster, has resigned from his posts as undersecretary of agriculture and resettlement administrator and accepted the executive vice presidency of the American Molasses company, of which another braintruster, Charles W. Taussig, is president, and a third, A. A. Berle, Jr., is a director. In accepting the resignation the President wrote to Mr. Tugwell: "Later on I fully expect to ask you to come back to render additional service." Mr. Tugwell will serve on a special committee of 38 just appointed by the President to study the farm tenancy problem. The new resettlement administrator is W. W. Alexander, who has been first assistant.

R. G. Tugwell

John G. Winant, who resigned as head of the social security board to take part in the Presidential election campaign, has resumed that position at the urgent request of Mr. Roosevelt and is directing the big task of enrolling the future old age pensioners.

Germany and Japan Unite to Combat Communism

COMPLICATING the already complex European situation and directly threatening war is the alleged fact that Germany and Japan have united to fight the spread of communism, and that their pact is expected to be adhered to by Italy and perhaps various central European nations. This is of course directed mainly against soviet Russia, and Moscow is actively aware of the menace. It is understood that the agreement provides that Germany and Japan shall keep strong military forces in East Prussia and Manchukuo respectively; that the two nations shall exchange military information and orders, and that in certain contingencies Germany shall supply Japan with war materials.

Russia sent word to Tokio that it would not co-operate further in granting Japanese fishing concessions until the reported Japanese-German military pact was canceled.

An immediate source of friction between Russia and Germany was the conviction at Novosibirsk of E. Strickling, German engineer, on charges of sabotage and plotting against the soviet regime. He and eight other defendants were sentenced to death and were said to have confessed their guilt. The German ambassador to Moscow asked that Strickling's execution be postponed until the embassy had time to study the evidence and file formal protest.

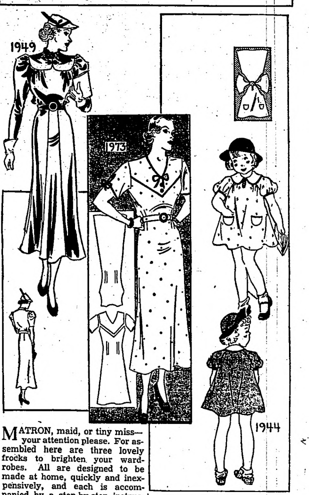
Two More Unions Join the Maritime Strike

EDWARD F. McGRADY, assistant secretary of labor, was still trying to bring about a settlement of the great strike of maritime workers, but didn't seem to be getting along very well. Indeed, the situation was made worse by nationwide strike calls to the Masters, Mates and Pilots association and the Marine Engineers union. Federal operation of emergency ships to Alaska and Hawaii was discussed but not decided.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, Great Contralto, Is Dead

MME. ERNESTINE SCHUMANN HEINK, one of the greatest operatic and concert contraltos of the period, died in Hollywood, to the sorrow of the nation generally and especially of the men of the A. E. F. for whom she sang throughout the war. A German by birth, she loved her adopted country.

Simple But Smart Models



MATRON, maid, or tiny miss—your attention please. For assembled here are three lovely frocks to brighten your wardrobes. All are designed to be made at home, quickly and inexpensively, and each is accompanied by a step-by-step instruction chart which makes sewing a real pleasure and recreation.

The lovely and graceful daytime or afternoon frock, Pattern 1949, features a novel yet simple yoke and collar treatment, a clever swing skirt, and youthful sleeves, long or short. Chic and stylish, yet as simple as can be, it will make up beautifully in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20 (30 to 38 bust measure), and size 14, with short sleeves, requires just 3⅞ yards of 39 inch material.

The comely morning frock which steals the center, Pattern 1973, is available in a wide range of sizes and takes top honors for comfort and versatility. Requiring just five simple pieces including the belt, it goes together like a charm, to fit perfectly and make your morning chores so much lighter. The pointed yoke is slimming, the set-in sleeves are free and open, and the skirt is dart fitted at the waist. As easy to make as to wear, this pattern is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, and 52. Send for it today. Size 38 requires just 3⅝ yards of 35 inch fabric, dimity or percale or gingham or seersucker.

The tempting model for tiny tots, Pattern 1944, is likewise utterly simple to make, yet as cunning as can be. Good for party or for play, it is a pattern you can cut twice and save for future use in any of a wide range of fabrics. The tiny puff sleeves are cut in one with the shoulder with just two simple pieces for the front and back of the dress. The size range—six months, one, two and three years. The one year size requires 1⅝ yards of 36 inch material, and if you wish you can make the pockets, cuffs and facings in contrast.

Send for the Barbara Bell Fall and Winter Pattern Book containing 100 well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send fifteen cents in coins for your copy.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 367 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill. Patterns 15 cents (in coins) each.

Marshall—Burglars entered the Olson and Lowe clothing store here and stole 186 suits of men's clothing valued at approxiamtely $5,000. The thieves gained entrance by lowering one of their group on a rope through a skylight.

Biwabik—Another deer hunting fatality was recorded with the death of Carl Lester Wantonen, 14, who was killed while playing in a field near here by a stray bullet. No trace of the origin of the bullet could be found, but authorities believed it was fired from the rifle of a deer hunter.

Duluth—Excavation and construction of the basement of the new state hospital for the insane at Moose Lake was started, with remaining major contracts to be let within the next month, L. G. Foley, chairman of the state board of control, said. The basement will be constructed at a cost of about $50,000.

Ironton—A conference here between R. I. Wahl, general manager of the Inland Steel Company at the Armour No. 1 mine and the employees' representatives resulted in a minimum rate of pay of 53 cents an hour with specific increases in all rates above that level based upon a revaluation of the particular classification.

Minneapolis — Minnesota's annual Christmas tree harvest is already well under way, Grover Conzet, state forester, reported. Thousands of Yule trees, 90 per cent of which are black spruce, are being felled and transported to warehouses. It is estimated 1,750,000 trees will be cut in Minnesota this year and that 600,000 will be used in the state.

Spring Valley—Although voting as a citizen for nearly 35 years, a former Spring Valley man was ruled by the state attorney-general never to have been legally naturalized. A. N. Farmer, once school superintendent at St. Cloud and prominent in education at several Minnesota cities, unknowingly had voted and acted as a citizen—though he never was one.

Minneapolis—Joan Dahl, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dahl, 3240 Forty-fourth avenue S., received the grand national prize of $250 for the best picture of a child taken in any one of 200 photo studios in department stores throughout the United States. Joan's picture was selected from nearly a quarter of a million submitted in the contest sponsored by Parents magazine.

St. Paul—Two-year-old Eugenia Loeber is the northwest's first baby wired for sound. Her father, Carl Loeber, inspector for the federal communications division, rigged up a microphone over Eugenia's crib and attached it to the radio loudspeaker downstairs. Now Mrs. Loeber can even hear Eugenia's breathing, and if she plays in her crib instead of going to sleep, the radio tells Mrs. Loeber.

South St. Paul—Richer by some $55,000 as the result of the auction of their animals and poultry at the Minnesota Junior Livestock show, 1,075 4-H club boys and girls were back at their homes in all parts of the state laying plans for next year's competition. The $55,000 which S. E. Sheehy, sales chairman, estimated was paid for the animals and poultry is a new high record, topping last year's total by some $3,000.

Minneapolis—Minneapolis has played to the tune of $2,500,000 in the last six weeks. The sum was poured into cash registers throughout the city in the greatest spree of spending for amusement, recreation and relaxation since the depression. Better times and Minnesota's Golden Gophers combined to loose the pursestrings of Minneapolis residents and visitors. Not even the avid interest in state and national election campaigns contrived to put a halt to the spending.

Minneapolis—The University of Minnesota board of regents was advised by Attorney General Harry H. Peterson that it alone has authority to administer the institution's financial affairs and details of management. Peterson's opinion, regarded as sweeping aside even questions concerning legislative authority in university affairs, developed from a demand by the state division of veterans relief that the university waive tuition for needy children of World war soldiers.

International Falls—Frank W. Brunskill, 56, former Minneapolis chief of police, who resigned last March from the department after 25 years of service, died of a heart attack while on a deer hunting trip near here. The former chief, who quit the department after a colorful career to become associated with the Yoerg Brewing company of St. Paul, awoke about 1:30 a. m. and complained to Dr. L. R. Koller and Dr. Henry Lysne, Minneapolis physicians and members of the hunting party, that he felt ill. Both doctors arose and attempted to relieve Brunskill but he died a short time later.

St. Paul—Eight hundred members of Veterans of Foreign Wars posts and auxiliaries throughout the state attended the fifth annual VFW school of instruction and pow wow in the Hotel Lowry. Speakers were Alexander Miller of Des Moines, judge advocate general; Governor-elect Elmer A. Benson; Senator-elect Ernest Lundeen; Victor A. Christgau, state WPA administrator; Governor Hjalmar Petersen, Mayor Mark Gehan of St. Paul and C. D. Hibbard, regional director of the United States veterans' bureau.

"TED, dear, if you don't keep your playthings from under foot, why I'll have to attend to them." Helen stepped over the toy train of cars in her hurried effort to reach the end of the veranda and look towards the newly planted garden. "There!" she exclaimed. "I thought so! Scratching up that seed again! I'll attend to that chicken!" Helen darted down the steps.

Her four-year-old son thoughtfully hauled his train of cars to one side and in the spring sunshine of late afternoon stood watching his mother's pursuit of the elusive squawking chicken. When it was captured and housed he sighed approvingly.

"If daddy forgets to bring home that chicken wire and attend to the new runway, why I'll attend to him!" Helen's eyes snapped whimsically as she breathlessly mounted the steps and went inside.

Ted nodded solemnly. Then he heard a light step. Turning, he saw his Aunt Dorothy coming up the path. She was twenty-one and lived with them. Ted rushed into her arms.

Presently Tom Hills hustled into Helen's welcoming kiss and cordially greeted his sister-in-law. Then he caught Ted up in his arms as the child pointed gleefully to a roll of chicken wire which Tom had set down.

After supper Helen and Tom, seated in the breakfast nook, became absorbed in a discussion of household matters. Ted sought his train of cars. Dorothy, starting for her room, turned back when the doorbell rang.

"That's Mr. Elderbird, I'll bet," grimaced Helen.

"I suppose so," Dorothy answered perplexedly. Then softly she ran towards Ted, catching his little hand. "Come with Aunt Dorothy, dear, and talk to Mr. Elderbird."

"No; don't want talk t' ol' bird."

"Oh," gasped Dorothy, "who said——" she glanced reproachfully at Tom, who grinned guiltily. "Just let him hear your nicknames," she warned quietly, "and you'll never get those letters of introduction."

Tom shrugged good-naturedly.

Dorothy demurely admitted the large, complacent Mr. Elderbird, who was about forty-five, with ogling eyes and dyed hair. Repressing a weary sigh, she ushered her wealthy caller into the living room. She knew the line of talk to which she must listen and give evasive answers, until she could get rid of him without invoking his displeasure. He was so influential, so able to hasten Tom and Helen along towards Easy street.

Then, as often before, the doorbell rang again.

Dorothy flew to the door, this time greeting Carl Kennedy, twenty-two, alert, eyes of keenest blue and hair of reddish sand color. He scowled when she murmured. "Mr. Elderbird's here," and coldly civil was his recognition of the bland visitor who occupied the biggest and most comfortable chair.

Dorothy steered conversation into general channels. Mr. Elderbird apparently enjoyed Kennedy's ill-concealed jealousy, the younger man every now and then stifling some remark he had almost said aloud.

When finally Mr. Elderbird, with a farewell smirk, bowed himself out, Carl exploded:

"You're afraid of hurting his feelings, you say! What about mine? I've reached the limit! All I could do to sit here and not land him one in the jaw every time he leered at you!" Carl had jumped to his feet and began striding back and forth. Suddenly he went to Dorothy. In gentler voice he pleaded: "Say that you won't let Elderbird call here again—to see you personally, I mean!"

"But—please listen—"

"Oh, perhaps you do like him?" an ominous note in his voice.

"You know—"

"I know that you allow him to call—" interrupted the tempestuous young man, "pretending you can't get rid of him. Certainly looks as if you cared somewhat—"

"Carl!"

"—else you couldn't endure his presence. Very well! I'm done! I quit!" He flung himself towards the door.

"Please—Carl!" she begged. "Just listen!"

"Never again!" he hurled mockingly, and the front door banged after him.

On startled tiptoe Helen came toward Dorothy. Ted, sleepy-eyed, trudged behind.

"Darling, what's happened?" Helen's arms closed around Dorothy's trembling shoulders.

"We—quarrelled, I guess. And—Carl's gone—forever!"

"What do you mean? Carl's crazy about you!"

"Not now. Because—of Mr. Elderbird."

"Say! Haven't I said all along we don't care whether that rich old guy ever introduces us to his big-bug friends or not? Tom's smart enough to go on his own. We're not going to sacrifice your happiness just to flatter Mr. Elderbird. Tom would say so, too, if he weren't sound asleep. I do—wish," she rushed on, "you'd let me speak my mind to the old pest. Oh, I'd attend to him!"

"No," Dorothy choked, dabbing her eyes. "We mustn't be rude to him. But why—why on earth can't he see I care nothing for him? Why does he persist in calling? And, oh—Carl!" She began to sob, just as a tired little voice said:

"G'night, Auntie Dor'thy."

"Good-night, sweetheart." She kissed the roseleaf face ere Helen whisked the child upstairs to bed. Dorothy followed, trying to be brave.

On the following evening when the doorbell rang, Dorothy dragged herself to the door. Mr. Elderbird seated himself. Ted betook himself to his own small rocking chair, which he dragged to a position between his aunt's chair and that of the visitor. The child seated himself, clutching a box cover in his chubby hands.

To Dorothy Ted's presence was a godsend, but Mr. Elderbird's eye indicated that the child was a nuisance. He glanced significantly at his watch. "Time for little fellows like you to be in bed, isn't it?"

Ted rocked in silence.

Mr. Elderbird cleared his throat, apparently determined to ignore the child's presence. "Have you decided, Miss Miller—Dorothy, if you will permit me—what your answer should be?"

"Why, yes — no. I mean — you see—"

Ted stopped rocking with an abruptness that opportunely diverted his aunt's attention. He gave her a fleeting, half-guilty glance, then quickly turned his head towards the caller, upon whom for a second the child's dark eyes rested accusingly. A chubby fist then shot upward in the air and the painted box cover was brought down forcibly upon the knee of Mr. Elderbird — clap!

"Ted!" exclaimed Dorothy.

Mr. Elderbird grinned condoningly.

"You here ev'y night!" Ted's voice piped up. Dorothy gasped, then started an animated conversation.

Whack! Again a sharp blow on Mr. Elderbird's knee — another — followed by two swifter and more stinging raps before Dorothy could seize the belligerent Ted. But his tongue she could not control.

"You here ev'y night. Wha' for? Aunt Dor'thy don't like you!"

Mr. Elderbird bit his lip. "Is that true, Miss Miller?" he frowned.

"Go 'way!" shrilled Ted.

Dorothy's eyes were downcast.

"Shall I go?" demanded the visitor icily as he rose to his feet.

Silence.

"And not return?"

Dorothy nodded.

He went.

Three days later, at sunset time, Carl Kennedy drove furiously by the house, eyes straight ahead. Ted saw him and shouted joyously. The car slowed up. Backed.

"Hello, Ted!" called Kennedy huskily. His eyes softened as he cast one sidelong glance towards the house. Ted scrambled up on the running-board.

"Why you not here ev'y night?"

Carl winced. "I—er—"

"Ol' bird—'at's what daddy calls him—isn't here any more."

"W-h-a-t-?"

"I 'tended to it."

"Huh? You — attended to — Elderbird? What yer mean?"

"I 'tended t' him. C'mon, Carl."

Town Criers Are Still Heard in French Villages

The town crier with his bell has virtually disappeared from England; but what corresponds to him in France has survived more generally, especially in the country districts. This picturesque figure goes about wearing a shabby cap of semimilitary design, and a leather baldric with a brass plate on it as his sole uniform over the clothes in which he tills his little plot of land. However, he has duties and they consist of village policeman, bill-sticker and frequently bellringer for Sunday church and daily angelus.

If the place is larger than a village, the "Tambour" may be a separate official. In either case he can be hired by private persons to make commercial announcements, or to proclaim lost property. This strange semi-official is in danger of disappearing. The authorities are thinking of changing his professional association from the drum or bell to the microphone, when loud speakers would make his voice heard at each of the cross-roads where he has hitherto repeated his message to the countryside.—Los Angeles Times.

Paint Mill Is Landmark

The famous landmark in Boston, known as the "Boston Stone," is an old paint mill, which was imported from England about the year 1700 by a painter who had a little shop on Marshall lane. It consists of a round stone, about two feet in diameter, which was the grinder of "muller," and a stone beneath. The stone was rolled back and forth in the trough hollowed out in one side of the larger stone underneath it and thus ground the paint. It has the words, "Boston Stone, 1737," cut in its side.

Should Not Yield

"We should not yield too far to the authority of youth," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown. "If I join my young nephew, Yoo Hoo, in the fascinating sport of kite flying, how can I command him to follow my example and study the precepts of Confucius?"

On to Success—

◆ With It Comes Boldness in New Ideas; Our Sphere of Friends and Activities Expands

A POOR salesman may be a genius at gardening; an indifferent stenographer sometimes never suspects her own gift for cookery, for dress design, for ability to pick up foreign languages. By thinking candidly about yourself, by being as friendly to yourself as you would be to another, you can often draw up a picture of your tastes, abilities, desires and hopes which will astonish you.

Take an inventory of yourself, paying special attention to the things you like but which you have little of in your daily life. Then start putting them into it.

From Interest to a Specialty

Often we have to begin slowly—reading, or finding courses of instruction within our means, or working out a program for ourselves in solitude; but every day something can be done toward the new way of living. It can grow from an interest into a hobby, from a hobby into a side line, from a side line into a specialty. Then comes the day when the unsatisfactory work can be given up (to someone who will find it as satisfying and as absorbing as we find our own new field) and success is at last really and noticeably on its way to us—or we are on our way to it.

Vitalizes Character

Then living begins to be fun. We meet people with the same tastes, not just the chance acquaintances who come our way in an uncongenial profession. Having succeeded once, we begin to show a little daring; we try new ideas more boldly, and our world of friends and activities expands even more. Chances we couldn't even imagine until we got inside our real work turn up on every hand. Best of all, even a small success has a vitalizing effect on character.

That is the most interesting discovery that success brings in its train: those who are living successfull, make the best friends. They are free from malice and spitefulness. They are not petty. They are full of good talk and humor.—Dorothea Brande in Cosmopolitan.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Marshall—Burglars entered the Olson and Lowe clothing store here and stole 186 suits of men's clothing valued at approxiamtely $5,000. The thieves gained entrance by lowering one of their group on a rope through a skylight.

Biwabik—Another deer hunting fatality was recorded with the death of Carl Lester Wantonen, 14, who was killed while playing in a field near here by a stray bullet. No trace of the origin of the bullet could be found, but authorities believed it was fired from the rifle of a deer hunter.

Duluth—Excavation and construction of the basement of the new state hospital for the insane at Moose Lake was started, with remaining major contracts to be let within the next month, L. G. Foley, chairman of the state board of control, said. The basement will be constructed at a cost of about $50,000.

Ironton—A conference here between R. I. Wahl, general manager of the Inland Steel Company at the Armour No. 1 mine and the employees' representatives resulted in a minimum rate of pay of 53 cents an hour with specific increases in all rates above that level based upon a revaluation of the particular classification.

Minneapolis — Minnesota's annual Christmas tree harvest is already well under way, Grover Conzet, state forester, reported. Thousands of Yule trees, 90 per cent of which are black spruce, are being felled and transported to warehouses. It is estimated 1,750,000 trees will be cut in Minnesota this year and that 600,000 will be used in the state.

Spring Valley—Although voting as a citizen for nearly 35 years, a former Spring Valley man was ruled by the state attorney-general never to have been legally naturalized. A. N. Farmer, once school superintendent at St. Cloud and prominent in education at several Minnesota cities, unknowingly had voted and acted as a citizen —though he never was one.

Minneapolis—Joan Dahl, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dahl, 3240 Forty-fourth avenue S., received the grand national prize of $250 for the best picture of a child taken in any one of 200 photo studios in department stores throughout the United States. Joan's picture was selected from nearly a quarter of a million submitted in the contest sponsored by Parents magazine.

St. Paul—Two-year-old Eugenia Loeber is the northwest's first baby wired for sound. Her father, Carl Loeber, inspector for the federal communications division, rigged up a microphone over Eugenia's crib and attached it to the radio loudspeaker downstairs. Now Mrs. Loeber can even hear Eugenia's breathing, and if she plays in her crib instead of going to sleep, the radio tells Mrs. Loeber.

South St. Paul—Richer by some $55,000 as the result of the auction of their animals and poultry at the Minnesota Junior Livestock show, 1,075 4-H club boys and girls were back at their homes in all parts of the state laying plans for next year's competition. The $55,000 which S. E. Sheehy, sales chairman, estimated was paid for the animals and poultry is a new high record, topping last year's total by some $3,000.

Minneapolis—Minneapolis has played to the tune of $2,500,000 in the last six weeks. The sum was poured into cash registers throughout the city in the greatest spree of spending for amusement, recreation and relaxation since the depression. Better times and Minnesota's Golden Gophers combined to loose the pursestrings of Minneapolis residents and visitors. Not even the avid interest in state and national election campaigns contrived to put a halt to the spending.

Minneapolis—The University of Minnesota board of regents was advised by Attorney General Harry H Peterson that it alone has authority to administer the institution's financial affairs and details of management. Peterson's opinion, regarded as sweeping aside even questions concerning legislative authority in university affairs, developed from a demand by the state division of veterans relief that the university waive tuition for needy children of World war soldiers.

International Falls—Frank W. Brunskill, 56, former Minneapolis chief of police, who resigned last March from the department after 25 years of service, died of a heart attack while on a deer hunting trip near here. The former chief, who quit the department after a colorful career to become associated with the Yoerg Brewing company of St. Paul, awoke about 1:30 a. m. and complained to Dr. L. R. Koller and Dr. Henry Lysne, Minneapolis physicians and members of the hunting party, that he felt ill. Both doctors arose and attempted to relieve Brunskill but he died a short time later.

St. Paul—Eight hundred members of Veterans of Foreign Wars posts and auxiliaries throughout the state attended the fifth annual VFW school of instruction and pow wow in the Hotel Lowry. Speakers were Alexander Miller of Des Moines, judge advocate general; Governor-elect Elmer A. Benson; Senator-elect Ernest Lundeen; Victor A. Christgau, state WPA administrator; Governor Hjalmar Petersen, Mayor Mark Gehan of St. Paul and C. D. Hibbard, regional director of the United States veterans' bureau

ATTENDING TO THINGS

"TED, dear, if you don't keep your playthings from under foot, why I'll have to attend to them." Often we have to begin slowly —reading, or finding courses of instruction within our means, or working out a program for ourselves in solitude; but every day something can be done toward the new way of living. It can grow from an interest into a hobby, from a hobby into a side line, from a side line into a specialty. Then comes the day when the unsatisfactory work can be given up (to someone who will find it as satisfying and as absorbing as we find our own new field) and success is at last really and noticeably on its way to us—or we are on our way to it.

Vitalizes Character

Then living begins to be fun. We meet people with the same tastes, not just the chance acquaintances who come our way in an uncongenial profession. Having succeeded once, we begin to show a little daring; we try new ideas more boldly, and our world of friends and activities expands even more. Chances we couldn't even imagine until we got inside our real work turn up on every hand. Best of all, even a small success has a vitalizing effect on character.

That is the most interesting discovery that success brings in its train: those who are living successfull, make the best friends. They are free from malice and spitefulness. They are not petty. They are full of good talk and humor.—Dorothea Brande in Cosmopolitan.

WOMEN'S WHIST CLUB

Women of the community are putting on a whist tournament similar to that being sponsored by the B. M. Club. First meeting was held Tuesday night in the club room at the Bilden & Olsen building. About twenty women were present at the first gathering, and all report having a fine time. The next meeting will be held Tuesday evening, Dec. 15, and every woman is cordially invited to attend. Arrangements for lunch are different from those of the men's club, lunch being served in the club room by a committee of three women at each session.

WINS IN 4-H CLUB FOOD CONTEST

Lettie Hauge, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hauge of Bemidji, was recently proclaimed Beltrami county champion in the 1936 4-H Club Food Preparation and Preservation Contest held at Bemidji.

More than 250,000 4-H girls from all parts of the United States participated in this contest competing for the three college scholarships which go to national winners to be announced at the 4-H Club Congress in Chicago during the week of Nov. 27-Dec. 5. Winning of the contest in the county entitles Miss Hauge to the Servel Electrolux gold medal of honor which is awarded by sponsors of the project, Servel, Inc., manufacturers of kerosene operated refrigerators for farm use.

ATTORNEY GENERAL TO SUPREME BENCH

Attorney General Harry H. Peterson will take a place on the supreme bench of Minnesota on December 15th, succeeding Associate Justice I. M. Olson of New Ulm, who retired last week because of ill health.

On the same date, William S. Ervin, assistant attorney general, will succeed Mr. Peterson as the state's chief legal advisor. The appointments were made by Governor Hjalmar Petersen when Justice Olson announced his intention to retire. Justice Olson will be paid full salary of $8,500 a year until expiration of his term, Jan. 1, 1939 after which he will receive half pay the rest of his life.

THIEF PLAYS ROLE OF GAME WARDEN

St. Cloud—The man who assumed the role of game warden, later turned out to be the thief. A group of local deer hunters, who were returning from their hunting trip, stopped in Brainerd, the fenders of their car loaded down with game, and were approached by a man who introduced himself as a game warden, demanding that the hunters show their licenses. They left the car and the deer and when they returned one of the deer had vanished. Investigation of the situation revealed that description of the man who had borrowed a knife, used in cutting the rope with which the animal was tied to the car, also suited the "game warden."

TOURIST INDUSTRY GIVES MINNESOTA 90 MILLION IN '36

Breaks All Records for Past Seven Years, State Bureau Reports

The largest annual income in the tourist industry in seven years, and the third largest annual income in the state's history poured into Minnesota in 1936, according to figures just released by George H. Bradley, director, Minnesota Tourist Bureau. Three high years in the records are 1929, the peak year, when 2,994,000 tourists spent $97,232,000; 1927, with 2,514,000 visitors expending $95,204,000; and 1936, with 2,652,000 tourists pouring $90,539,000 into the various channels of trade within the state.

While generally improving economic conditions played the major part in bringing about the gross income increase, appropriation of $80,000 by the 1935 legislature for advertising the state and its recreational endowements was responsible in large part for the gain, because it enabled the state to capitalize upon gains in the business world, according to Mr. Bradley.

Gasoline taxes paid directly into the state treasury, one reliable index of tourist income, showed a gain of 25% in 1936 over 1934, rising to a total of $4,412,084 for the months of June, July and August this year, as compared to $3,510,506 in the same three months of 1934, a gain of $901,578, or more than 22 times the amount the state expended upon advertising. At the same time, nonresident fishing licenses reached an all-time peak, yielding an income of $160,000 in 1935, as compared to $130,000 in 1934. This year, on November 15, with returns still incomplete, gross income from tourists from this one source alone had reached 186,000 or $80,000 more than the total expended upon fish propagation by the Game and Fish department for the entire year.

Of the average tourist dollar, 25 cents went directly into the channels of retail trade: 21 cents for transportation, 20 cents for food, and a similar amount for lodging. Recreation, including licenses, tackle, golf clubs, etc., accounted for eight cents out of every dollar, while the balance, six cents, was spent for souvenirs and refreshments.

Thirteen Miles Paving Contracts Are Awarded

Contracts for the construction of 13.4 miles of concrete paving in Cottonwood, Watonwan and Wilkin counties, and a bridge approach job in Hennepin county have been awarded by N. W. Elsberg, state commissioner of highways. The contracts total $340,413. The concrete work will get under way in the spring but the grading will start at once. Two of the paving jobs are on Trunk Highway No. 60, in Cottonwood and Watonwan counties, and will improve more than nine miles of this road between St. James and Windom. The other paving job will be between Breckenridge and four miles north on T. H. No. 75, in Wilkin county, slightly less than four miles in length.

Plummer Will Levy No Village Taxes in 1937

As was the case in the current year, no tax for municipal purposes will be levied in Plummer for 1937, it was announced last week by A. H. Carlson, mayor of the village. He stated that the profits from the successful operation of the municipal liquor store have retired all indebtedness and pay the running expenses of the village government.

LIGHT VOTE CAST IN VILLAGE ELECTION

Only about half of the registered voters in St. Hilaire expressed their choice at the polls for village officers at the annual village election held Tuesday. L. F. Olson was re-elected president of the council for the coming year; S. M. Olness and Arthur Hanson were re-elected as recorder and treasurer, respectively; Elmer Johnson was re-elected assessor for two years; A. Bilden was elected Justice of the Peace, and Harwood Olsen was named constable. For the village council, Clarence Hallstrom succeeds M. A. Highland for a three year term. Use of the caucus system of selecting nominees, and in balloting, was a bit confusing to the voters since the Australian system had been in use for many years here. Now that the electorate has become familiar with the caucus plan, it is believed there will be more interest taken in future village elections.

JUNIORS PRESENT CLASS PLAY FRIDAY

The Junior class play entitled "A Million Dollar Joke" will be presented at the high school auditorium Friday evening this week starting at 8:00. Members of the cast include Maitland Carter, Grace Erickson, Harvey Solum, Neoma Durheim, Agnes Anderson, Floyd Prestby, Gordon Nohre, Ralph Biskey, Ellen Janda and Carmine Highland.

WHIST GAMES TUESDAY

Next meeting of the mens' and women's whist tournament will be held next Tuesday evening at the Bilden & Olsen hall. A cordial invitation is extended to everyone in the community to take part. Lunch will be served following each session.

Tollef Thompson and son, Ed, of Spooner, and his son, Anton of Bend, Ore., were here last week for a visit with relatives and friends at Hazel and St. Hilaire. Anton left from here enroute to his home in Oregon after having spent several days at Spooner. The Thompsons were formerly residents of this village.

START BUILDING PROJECTS

Crews of men were put to work this week excavating basements on some of the lands acquired by the government for re-settlement purposes. Materials for new buildings to be erected on these lands have already begun to arrive at Thief River Falls, and if weather conditions continue favorable, some building will be done during the winter months. At least four sets of new buildings are contemplated for this locality next spring.

MRS. E. E. ANDERSON RITES LAST SUNDAY

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. H. A. Larson at the local Swedish Lutheran church Sunday at 2:00 P. M., for the late Mrs. E. E. Anderson, who died Wednesday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hilda Gigstad. Because some relatives being unable to stay longer, time of the funeral was changed from Monday, as first announced, to Sunday.

Mrs. Anderson, who was 92 years of age, was born in Aalan, Sweden on September 12, 1844. She was united in marriage to Erick E. Anderson in that country in 1865 and they came to America in 1882. They made their home in Chicago for a short time before coming to St. Hilaire in 1883 to make their home on a farm in Rocksbury east of here. Her husband preceded her in death many years ago. Surviving are five children: Anton E. Anderson, Hazel; Mrs. Hilda Gigstad, St. Hilaire; Mrs. Ericka Wallen, Minneapolis; Mrs. Ida Anderson, Bowbells, N. D., and Mrs. Lydia Olson, Rosholt, S. D. With exception of the latter, all children were present at the funeral. She also is survived by 19 grandchildren and 26 great-grandchildren. Acting as pallbearers at the funeral were six grandsons and grandsons-in-law of the deceased.

Despite her advanced age, Mrs. Anderson was a very active woman, and she enjoyed excellent health except for periods of illness during past two or three years. For many years past she insisted upon spending summer months at her farm home where she kept house alone and did the usual duties about the place. "Grandma" Anderson was highly esteemed by all who knew her, and will be missed by her old friends.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Don't miss the Junior class play Friday night this week.

Rev. H. A. Larson is the owner of a new Ford V-8 coach purchased this week.

Dr. Horn was here Monday and Tuesday from Ulen to attend to his local dental practice.

Mrs. N. E. Beebe, who is visiting relatives at Mankato and Rapidan, is expected home in a short time.

Next meeting of the Woman's Club will be held at the club rooms Wednesday night, December 16th.

It hardly seems possible, but school closes next week for the annual Christmas vacation of two weeks.

Regular meeting of the village council was held Monday night at the council room in the village building.

Co. Commissioner Paul Roy was at Thief River Falls both Monday and Tuesday to preside at meetings of the county board.

The regular bi-weekly meeting of the B. M. Club was held Monday night at the club rooms. Following the usual business session lunch was served.

Hans L. Hanson became ill last Saturday and was taken to the hospital at Thief River Falls for treatment. He is somewhat improved at this time.

After spending ten days here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Brink, and with other relatives, Mrs. Mack Brown left Saturday for her home at Fresno, Calif.

Wendell Corbet motored today to Crookston to consult a specialist concerning his eyes which have not resumed normal state after they were operated upon some months ago.

Just a reminder that only 11 shipping days remain before Christmas. The day having the shortest time of daylight during the entire year will be here in the same number of days.

Ole C. Johnson, formerly with the Carlson Mercantile Company here, and now located at Moorhead, called briefly on friends in the village Tuesday while enroute from Thief River Falls to Bemidji.

Mrs. R. Wallen and daughter, Hazel, came Saturday from Minneapolis to be present at the funeral services for Mrs. Wallen's mother, the late Mrs. E. E. Anderson. Miss Hazel returned home Sunday night, and Mrs. Wallen departed Monday.

Some very good skating is being enjoyed down on the community rink by the young people.

BRINKS ENCOUNTER SNOW

A card received Wednesday from Al Brink, who left here last week with his family to spend the winter in Texas, states they were snowbound a day in southwestern Iowa. They encountered some very icy roads from that point on, but stated they had reached dry roads in southern Kansas and hoped to reach Dallas, Texas by Monday night or Tuesday.

DEFEAT GOODRIDGE IN OPENING GAME

The high school basketball quint began its season with a flying start by defeating Goodridge by a score of 14 to 12 in a fast game played Friday in the community hall at Plummer. Altho the local boys are handicapped by lack of a floor on which to practice and play, they offset this Friday by putting in just the right amount of "pep" to connect for the winning score. The boys presented a very natty appearance in their new suits. Having had initial experience on a full sized floor, and tasting the fruits of victory, the boys are "rarin" to go in remainder of their scheduled games.

NEW COMMUNITY CALENDARS HERE

A supply of the 1937 community calendars sponsored and distributed by the B. M. Club arrived this week and are now ready for distribution. The calendars are similar in size and makeup to those distributed a year ago, containing a large amount of useful household and other information. It is the desire of the sponsors that these calendars be distributed as widely as possible, and every household in the community is entitled to a copy. As has been customary in years past, no calendars will be given to children as this tends to duplication in distribution, and as supply is limited, it would be exhausted before every household received one.

Ed. Moren returned home Tuesday after a visit with relatives at Minneapolis. He also made a trip on the fast train from Minneapolis to Chicago and spent a few days in the latter city visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Hjalmar Johnson. He found them in good health and spirits, and brot back greetings from them to their many friends in this community.

These Cuddle Toys Solve Gift Problems

"Eenie, Meenie, Minie, Mo"—it's hard to decide which to make—but why make just one, why not all! Delightful cuddle toys, these, and just the soft, warm playthings for a baby's arms. There's nothing to the making of them, for each is composed of but two pieces, with the exception of the bear, whose jacket is extra, and the chick, whose flapping wings are separate. Your gayest cotton scraps can go into the making of these winning gifts. In pattern 5609 you will find a transfer pattern for the four animals; instructions for making them; material requirements.

Wilson Policies Fail

Washington. — In proposing a peace pact for the western hemisphere, President Roosevelt in his speech at Buenos Aires has directed attention to two important positions that the United States has taken in its foreign relations. Whether Mr. Roosevelt so intended or whether it is by the very nature of the circumstance, he nevertheless has set up before the American people the necessity for re-examination of the age-old Monroe doctrine and has brought up for fresh scrutiny the policies of President Woodrow Wilson that were designed to establish eventually world peace by collectivist action.

I think that it must be admitted that the Wilson policies for international peace have not worked. Anyone who examines them squarely and frankly must recognize one outstanding inescapable fact: they have proved to be the illusions of an idealist.

They constitute a landmark, however, and in so doing it seems to me they should serve as a guide on what not to do. Candidly, the Wilson policies, beautiful in theory that they were, have been shown to be futile because they did not consider the perfidy nor the chicanery of European statesmen. They were predicated upon a belief that the world leaders were sincere in their desire for peace—and it is sad but true that such is not the case. In other words, the Wilson theories that were builded up into a supergovernment to be called the League of Nations overlooked the element of human fallibility.

It requires only a brief review of the history of the League of Nations to reveal the definite conclusion that there is an absolute lack of sincerity on the part of the European statesmen. Each one has been concerned only with gains and advantages accruing to his own nation. His actions have been permeated to the core with selfishness, sometimes aggravated with desires for personal distinction. The league fell down in dealing with Russia's Stalin and Germany's Hitler. It took a mighty flop in the movement to check Italy's Mussolini in Ethiopia. Having flattened out, none of the three above mentioned has any respect for the league authority. When you add to this the absolute dismissal of the league as a world influence as was done by Japan, you have less than nothing left.

Wilsonian Illusions

Mussolini said the other day that in order to straighten out the European tangle it would be necessary to wipe out all of the "Wilsonian illusions." He could have referred only to the Wilsonian slogan upon which we entered the World war, namely, the "war to make the world safe for democracy." Later, it will be remembered, the World war was "the war to end war." Neither of these slogans bore fruit. Each was an illusion, a dream of world peace held by a great man whose only weakness in assuming world leadership was that he trusted other statesmen as he trusted the American people, to arrive at a sound conclusion and stick to it.

I am not prepared to say that the Wilson policies led us in a wrong direction. The fact remains, however, that the war that was to make the world safe for democracy led directly into destruction of democracy and the establishment of fascism and communism in various parts of the world as an important factor in the government of peoples.

All of this, of course, was not visible nor predictable at the time the policies were initiated. It is all too plain now, however, and that is why President Roosevelt can very well be governed in his new move with the Pan-Americas. He can proceed upon a Pan-American basis with at least a hope of success because it is quite apparent that the Americas, North and South, can protect themselves if arrangements for prevention of war relate only to the western hemisphere. International affairs will have to be considered, obviously. But among those authorities with whom I have talked about this problem, there seems to be little doubt that if the idea of collectivist action, first enunciated in the Wilson policies—is to avail anything, it must be applied not to the world but to a section of the world.

No Boss Wanted

I noted in the official agenda, the program outline of the Buenos Aires conference, that no reference at all was made to the Monroe doctrine. Apparently, that course had to be followed. The Monroe doctrine is a ticklish matter among our neighbors to the south. Frankly, they do not like it.

Considering all of the factors involved in the Monroe doctrine, there seems no conclusion ahead but eventual abandonment of that pronouncement. When I say that, I do not mean that the principles of the Monroe doctrine need be thrown into the ocean. Yet, the name has been the focal point around which much antagonism has been built up and the romantic Latin blood of South America can hardly be expected ever again to subscribe to the Monroe doctrine by that name.

What, then, is the course?

The Monroe doctrine, whether it was ever so intended, has placed the United States in a position where it is made to appear as a boss. No nation of people enjoys being bossed. So, if the Buenos Aires conference is to result in a definite understanding by which the peoples of the western hemisphere are welded together in an effective group, some understanding must be evolved which will replace the ill will engendered by the Monroe doctrine. Possibly, that understanding lies in the direction being followed by President Roosevelt. Apparently, he is willing to subordinate the Monroe doctrine and concede to those other peoples on behalf of the United States the end of our overlordship.

Undoubtedly, it will be a slow process. Present generations throughout the South American nations will be suspicious for a time and will move with caution but there are many who believe in eventual agreement among the western nations on a general policy that will keep us all out of European and Far Eastern entanglements to a greater extent than ever before.

The thing that may break down the apparent Roosevelt plan is the circumstance of drawn swords and cocked rifles in Europe at the moment. It is entirely possible that before concrete adhesion among the North and South American peoples can be accomplished, explosions in Europe may take place. If they do, propaganda agents of the conflicting powers will be abroad instanter. Attempts will be made to alienate various nations in the western hemisphere, to align them with one side or the other in the European controversy. It may well be that this condition will ruin the Roosevelt program before it gets under way but a start has been made and succeeding generations will profit if the peoples of North and South America can come to regard themselves as an individual group that is willing to make sacrifices necessary to cut off European connections when the European statesmen insist on fighting.

There is yet one more thought concerning the South American sessions. There are students of international affairs who already are saying that history has repeated itself and that the United States has lost, as usual, in its diplomatic dealings. They are saying that the revision of the Monroe doctrine and the rebirth of that policy under a new name represents a gift by the United States. It may well be that such has occurred. But among saner minds, I believe the conviction is that the Monroe doctrine already has undergone so many alterations and revisions that a major operation on its structure will clarify the picture. The Monroe doctrine was designed originally, of course, to prevent European nations from gaining a foothold in either of the Americas. That danger is definitely past. Why, then, is it necessary to perpetuate an antiquated policy that has no purpose any longer? Thus, it seems to me that if a revision, even a casting out of the Monroe doctrine can eliminate suspicion of our government's purposes among those peoples inhabiting the same hemisphere, it is not too much to pay.

Birthday Observed

There was a great banquet held at one of the hotels in Washington a few days ago. It is not unusual for great banquets to be held in the capital city but most of them are just banquets. The one to which I refer, however, had a significance that is quite unusual. It commemorated the establishment of the United States patent office and celebrated its one hundredth birthday.

Something like eleven hundred inventors, research scientists, representatives of industry and patent office officials entered the great dining room by candlelight. Then, the toastmaster waved a wand over one of the greatest inventions of modern times and the room was bathed in an electric brilliance the like of which has never been seen. The action typified, told the story of, scientific development in the United States and elsewhere.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Duluth—The M. E. Farr left Two Harbors with the last load of iron ore of the season from that port.

Hibbing—A proposed $100,000 legislative appropriation to the State Drivers License Bureau was indorsed by the St. Louis County Safety Council.

Chatfield—Claude Barrons, 40-year-old laborer, hanged himself in the wood-shed at his home in Cummingsville near here. Relatives could give no reason for the act.

Bemidji—C. L. Klockman of New Ulm, a deer hunter was fined $100 following his plea of guilty on a charge of killing an elk near Malcolm. Elk were protected by law.

Minneapolis—Bernie Bierman, head football coach at the University, said at the close of this year's schedule that Minnesota was assured of another first class team in 1937.

St. Paul—The annual Farm and Home week will be held at the University Farm school Dec. 28 to Jan. 1, with fully 3,000 persons expected to attend. More than 200 lecturers and demonstrations are scheduled.

St. Paul—Proposed safety legislation, to be submitted to the 1937 state legislature was drafted at a meeting of the uniform highway traffic act group of the Minnesota public safety committee at the state capitol.

Duluth—The federal government will pay approximately $226,000 to farmers in northeastern Minnesota this year for participation in the department of agriculture's soil conservation program last summer.

Essex—The 15,000 bushel grain elevator here of the Eagle Roller Mill Co., of New Ulm, was destroyed by fire. Loss was estimated at approximately $15,000 including the building and 6,000 bushels of stored grain.

Rochester—Samuel C. Confer, 57, Minneapolis realtor since about 1900, died in Colonial hospital here. Mr. Confer underwent an operation November 11, and a second operation was performed a few days later in an effort to save his life.

Granite Falls—Should heavy snows come this winter the highway department of Yellow Medicine county will be better prepared than ever before to battle with the drifts. The county commissioners have purchased three new push plows which will be delivered within a few days.

St. Cloud—Weather recording instruments attached to six stratosphere balloons released at St. Cloud were carried to a height of 16 miles, soaring through temperatures of 72 below zero, before being found near Albert Lea, less than 15 miles west of were the balloons went aloft.

Wabasha—Stockholders of the Wabasha-Nelson Bridge Company of Wabasha voted authority to the board of directors to enter into a contract of agency with John R. Foley of this city to sell the toll bridge to the state or government. The agency is to run two years, or until the sale is made.

Minneapolis—Big Ed Widseth of the Golden Gophers was named on the United Press' all Big Ten football team. And so is Andy Uram, who is conceded the title of the best ball carrier in the league. Bud Wilkinson, Charley Schultz and Earl Svendsen made the second team.

Askov—This community, largest rutagaba shipping center in the United States, is seen facing the loss of its chief industry if freight and Canadian tariff rates are not substantially changed. Dealers here point out that Canadian rutabagas can be laid down in Chicago at 18 cents per hundredweight, while Askov rutabagas are shipped at a cost of 92 cents per hundredweight.

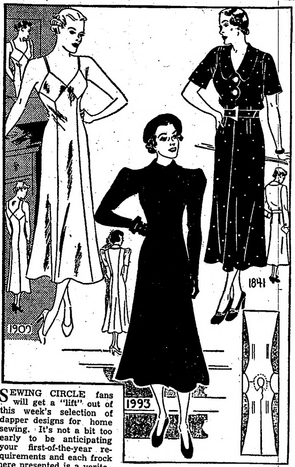
St. Paul—Because a large number of hunters mistook fawns for does during the deer season, Minnesota may revive the one buck law. The ban on fawns was recommended by the state conservation department at the request of many sportsmen's groups, but reports received during the season, indicate the experiment was not generally approved. Many hunters shot fawns by mistake.

Elk River—Charles M. Babcock, former Minnesota highway commissioner and father of the state's vast road system, died of a heart attack at his home here. He was 65. Mr. Babcock had just returned from a trip to Wyoming in behalf of the National Safety council, with which he was connected as an adviser on safety and good roads. He suffered one attack while on the trip but appeared to have rallied from it.

Minneota—Minneota, badly in need of a new water suply, called upon Mr. Martin, well driller, and after suggesting two or three places where wells might be drilled finally allowed him to look around and pick his own spot. This he did, claiming that he could strike water at about 40 feet. The well, now completed was drilled to 42 feet, and apparently has struck a fine vein. A pump will be placed over the well and a reservoir constructed nearby.

Hastings—An example of local pride shown by WPA workers in their project is to be found here, where a crew has volunteered to complete, on its own time and without pay, a series of concrete tennis courts. The original application covering the project was insufficient to complete the work and a supplemental application became necessary. Rather than risk leaving an uncompleted project, the workers continued on the project, completing it when they were not regularly employed on other units of the new athletic field at Hastings.

Several Standby Designs



SEWING CIRCLE fans will get a "lift" out of this week's selection of dapper designs for home sewing. It's not a bit too early to be anticipating your first-of-the-year requirements and each frock here presented is a veritable winner in its individual class.

Temptation

TO RESIST temptation once is not a sufficient proof of honesty. If a servant, indeed, were to resist the continued temptation of silver lying in a window when he is sure his master does not know how much there is of it, he would give strong proof of honesty. But this is a proof to which There is a degree of temptation there is a degree of temptation which will overcome any virtue. Now, in so far as you approach temptation to a man, you do him an injury; and, if he is overcome, you share his guilt.—Dr. Johnson.

Buenos Aires Receives Mr. Roosevelt Warmly

President Roosevelt

AS THE cruiser Indianapolis and its convoy, the Chester, entered the harbor of Buenos Aires, a salute to President Roosevelt boomed from the guns of eleven warships, ten squadrons of airplanes wheeled overhead, and thousands of cheering citizens crowded the water front. Argentinians generally approve of Mr. Roosevelt's policies and he was welcomed to their capital as "a great benevolent dictator." They had planned to give him an elaborate reception, but it was toned down somewhat at his request. President Justo, who already had greeted the distinguished guest by wireless, met him at the dock and accompanied him to the American embassy. Then Mr. Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull and members of the American delegation to the peace conference made a formal call at the government house.

Next day, after a ride about the city, President Roosevelt attended the extraordinary session in the legislative palace to open the Pan-American peace conference which he initiated. A formal dinner for him at the government house and a reception for all conference delegates followed. The event of the third day was a luncheon at the American embassy in honor of President and Mrs. Justo. Then Mr. Roosevelt embarked and started on the return trip, with a brief stop scheduled for Montevideo, capital of Uruguay.

On his way south President Roosevelt stopped a few hours in Rio de Janeiro, where half a million citizens turned out in the rain to give him an enthusiastic welcome. President Vargas showed him the magnificent Brazilian capital, and he addressed an extraordinary session of the parliament with an eloquent plea to all peoples of the western continent to keep out of war and settle their problems with good will and understanding.

"Mystery Man" Zaharoff Dies in Monte Carlo

THE cause of world peace should be the gainer by the death of Sir Basil Zaharoff in Monte Carlo. Known as the "mystery man of Europe," he was for many years the master salesman of armaments and amassed an immense fortune in that and other business enterprises. Born in Odessa, Russia, of Greek parents, Zaharoff had all of Europe for his field of operations. He was knighted in England, became a citizen of France and married a Spanish duchess. He gave valuable aid to the Allies during the World war, founding chairs of aviation at Paris and Petrograd and presenting 25,000 pounds sterling to the British government for a similar purpose.

Litvinov Attacks Nazi Foes of Soviet Russia

M. Litvinov

WHAT Russia thinks of the Nazi leaders of Germany and their anti-communism pact with Japan was set forth in plain words by Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinov in an address before the all-union congress of soviets in Moscow. Italy, which has just concluded a similar agreement with Tokio, was included in his denunciations. Litvinov asserted that Germany and Japan were joined in a secret military alliance for the purpose of launching a war which would spread to all continents, and added that soviet Russia still stood irrevocably for peace. Said he:

"Fascist countries make one challenge after another to peace-loving democratic states and we hope before long those states will stand up to them.

"The soviet union has no reason to change its position, which was and always will be—peace. It wants peace for itself and for all other countries.

"It wants no words—there has been too much talk—but action from others.

"The soviet union begs no one to be its partner. It does not ask for unions, alliances or combinations. The day will come when the Red army and navy will be forced to defend the Fatherland. Then they will show unprecedented courage and heroism and fighting ability.

"I am sure the soviet union will stand as a fortress against the filthy waves of a Fascist sea."

How well prepared Russia is for war if it comes was indicated by a report that her naval forces have increased 1,700 per cent since 1933, and that she soon will have 7,000 airplanes and 100,000 pilots. "If the German Fascists threaten our country, woe unto them," declared Corps Commander Krhipin, assistant commander of the Red army air forces.

V. M. Molotov, president of the council of commissars, professed love for the German people but intense hate for their leaders, who, he said, "have well earned their appellation of 'modern cannibals.'"

Japan announced her intention to build as quickly as possible an army equal to that of Russia; and Minister of Marine Nagano said the Japanese navy also would be enlarged. Premier Leon Blum, saying that the international situation "never has been as serious or as dangerous in the last three months as it is now," declared pointedly that France, second only to soviet Russia, possessed the "most powerful military force in continental Europe."

Green Is Re-Elected by Federation of Labor

William Green

WILLIAM GREEN was reelected president of the American Federation of Labor before the closing of the convention in Tampa. Secretary Frank Morrison and the 14 vice presidents also were chosen for another term. In his speech of acceptance Mr. Green made a renewed plea to John L. Lewis and his C. I. O. associates to "come back to our home and fight the common foe." This the insurgents show no sign of doing. The 1937 convention was awarded to Denver.

The convention refused to concur in four resolutions attacking the Supreme court. It instructed the executive council to have a bill for the six hour day and five day week introduced in congress and declared the 30 hour week to be the "paramount objective" of the A. F. of L.

League Council to Deal With Spanish War

SPAIN'S government appealed to the council of the League of Nations to deal with the menace to "peace and good will among nations" allegedly created by Italo-German recognition of the fascist rebel junta. Secretary J. A. C. Avenol thereupon convoked the council, though at this writing the date for the meeting is unsettled. It was believed Italy would refuse to attend the session; Germany is no longer a member of the league. French statesmen didn't approve the Spanish action, feeling that it complicated an already serious situation and could do no good.

Excitement over the torpedo attack on a loyal Spanish cruiser by a submarine which the Madrid government more than hinted was a German vessel was allayed by the report that the undersea boat was a Spanish submarine that had gone over to the rebel side.

Madrid was being continually hammered by rebel shells and bombs, and there was intense fighting daily in University City, the northwest section of the capital, where the insurgents had penetrated. The American embassy was closed on orders from Washington and Eric C. Wendelin, charge d'affaires, gave protection to those Americans who wished to go to Valencia to board a United States warship. The German and Italian embassies, abandoned by their staffs, were seized and sealed by the defense junta and a number of Fascist refugees were arrested in the former. Berlin scoffed at this action but Rome called it banditry.

Alleged Japanese Plan for Inner Mongolia

TROOPS of Suiyuan province in China recently captured the stronghold of Prince Teh Wang, rebel leader in Mongolia, and some secret documents seized there reveal a Japanese plot to set up an Inner Mongolian puppet state to be known as the Great Yuan empire. This would extend westward from Jehol to Sinkiang. The documents disclosed that Japan has already spent 50,000,000 Chinese dollars on this project and is prepared to spend about 400,000,000 more.

Military Revolt in Quito Is Speedily Suppressed

ONE regiment of the Ecuadorian army attempted to start a revolution in Quito, the capital, but the uprising was quickly suppressed in a battle in which 50 persons were killed and 100 wounded. Many persons were arrested, including Pedro Velasco Ibarra, brother of former President Velasco Ibarra, and several unidentified foreigners. The daily newspaper El Dia was closed and its director, Ricardo Jaramillo, was imprisoned.

When Christmas Grew

By Frances Grinstead

HE WAS a small boy named Tim who had never been more than ten miles from his home in the Ozark hills. His teacher said he couldn't even bound Arkansas, his own state, but what his teacher didn't know was how well he knew the mountain "crick" and the hill slopes circled with green-gold pine trees that bounded his father's tiny farm. He also knew what it took to keep a family of six children and that for as long as he could remember his father's farm had scarcely been able to produce enough to stretch over every need.

It was just before Christmas time that he heard his father tell his mother that if there was to be anything "extra" to give the day its meaning for the children, he'd have to get the ax and hack out a few ties. Her face went white, for she knew what that meant. So often had they been forced to remain on the hacking of a few ties to be sold to the railroad for dire necessities that practically all their timber available for that purpose was gone. And trees don't grow over night. She could tell by the look on her husband's face that he was taking a desperate and back-breaking chance of finding a few logs tough enough for the commission man to buy.

As she looked out of the window and saw the passing cars of winter "touristers" on the new scenic road the government had built through the hills, she wondered by what magic folks could come to own automobiles and take time off like that to go traveling. But she hadn't many moments to spare on such thoughts, for her husband had returned to say that the ax was gone. Could one of the children have taken it?

The father had borrowed an ax from a willing neighbor but on the day before Christmas he was silent as he unhitched his team in the wagon lot. Christmas tomorrow and he had been forced to bring back the load from town. The commission man had been truly sorry, for he did need ties; yet none of these were large enough.

He crept up to a window, lost in the sense of failure that made him ashamed to walk to his own door. There an odd sight straightened him. Inside were Tim and his mother joyously trimming a Christmas tree. Tim raced to the door to keep the younger children from bursting gleefully into the room and learning its great secret.

When the father entered the house, no one asked him about the ties. "Dad, dad!" Tim shouted. "Do you know those red berry trees that grow way up the crick? Awful hard to get to, but when I found 'em I thought they were so purty I took some to school. The teacher said, 'that's holly' and then I read about holly and learned that folks will pay for it to have it for Christmas. So I gathered a lot of it and made me a holly stand up on the new road just hopin' they would. And dad, they did buy it! Stopped their cars and said, 'Why it's holly; who would have thought we'd find it here!' They wanted so much I had to work awful hard getting it, but gee, it was fun! I wanted to surprise mom and you, and now I'll tell you both that I made $27.82. There's $20 right now in that bureau drawer left after buying our Christmas. Gee dad, I love this old farm! It's got lots of surprises on it yet. This one ain't the last one."

Christmas HOLLY for Sale

The father brushed a tear from his eye and kissed his wife. Then he shook hands with Tim. "You're the kind of son a man can be right proud to own," he choked.

"But dad, will you forgive me?" the boy suddenly implored.

"Why Tim, forgive you what?" the father asked in surprise.

The boy led the way to the kitchen. "You see dad, I just had to have it?"

The father pretended to frown as Tim pointed and then he winked. "Well, being as it's just about Christmas for us, as well as the rest of the world, I guess I'll have to overlook it." For there in a far corner of the room stood the ax. It was Tim who had borrowed it.

Keeping Christmas Faith—

Spirit of Happiness Much Needed in the Days Prior to the Festival

WHATEVER you do in the way of preparations for Christmas, be sure to preserve the happy Christmas spirit in the home. Nothing is more at war with the atmosphere of Merry Christmas than cross words, wrangles, disputes, and anything that mars good nature in yourselves or those in the home. The pressure of work, the haste that makes waste, the beauty of home life, the conflict of problems, each of which seems imperative to solve on the instant, are not conducive to an atmosphere of concord. It takes a person of remarkable poise not to be influenced by the speeding up of work and activities prior to the festival.

Personal Influence

Because this is true, every one of us should be on guard over ourselves. We have an influence. No one can escape this. It may do us good to realize that we are not totally insignificant. Many persons feel this is their fate when they are very modest or shy, and crave to be among the group of those who attract attention. By the negative method of induction we can discover our influence is not negligible. It exists, perhaps to our surprise, and certainly to our dismay, when we see the effects of our disagreeable conduct.

Beneficent Effects

It is a comfort to realize that in reverse order, the better side of our nature is equally impressive. Our good nature, our cheery attitude, our soothing words, and our hearty happiness leave their beneficent effect upon those who know us—our family, our friends, and even those who are but acquaintances.

It is this fine attitude that is brought out in the real Christmas spirit. It is one that is needed in the rush before Christmas as much as on the day itself. Our patience and such sweetness of temperament as we are by nature endowed, or by cultivation possessed of, is called into action to help keep atmosphere serene when there is a trend toward querulousness in children, or adults. Little folk are quick to sense strain and tenseness, and they react to it by nervousness and contrariness, and an atmosphere of love and beauty is harshly disturbed.

Keeping Faith

On the adults falls the responsibility of keeping faith with Christmas by showing the Christmas spirit in these days of expectations of holiday happiness, and preparation for the great festival.

Ideal Companionship

TRUE love must be built upon absolutely true friendship; there can be no other foundation for it. . . The man and the woman must have the all-powerful sense of ideal companionship between them. They must be able to say with truth to themselves that the world will always be richer to them together than apart. There may be many other elements in love but there can be no love at all without this element. — Harold Frederic.

What with all the excitement of the Christmas season our artist has found it rather hard to keep away from the toy department. Of course, he goes there purely in the interest of the kiddies, and not for his own amusement, he claims. The excitement seems to have gone to his head, however, as we notice several bad mistakes. For example, the word "hosiery" is misspelled. Can you find 15 other mistakes? The answers are given above.

Federal Land Bank Loans Being Repaid Promptly

Principal payments and special payments in full on federal land bank loans made during the first 9 months of this year were more than $40,000 greater than the amount of principal installments that normally would have come due for payment in that period.

This surprising situation was revealed this week by President Roy A. Nelson of the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, who analyzed the repayments as indicating an encouraging disposition of farmers to wipe out their farm mortgage debts as rapidly as possible. He said:

"It is significant that such a volume of repayments in excess of requirements is being made. This means that agriculture in many sections of our district, though not in all, has passed out of the depression period and is now in position to meet financial problems in a normal way."

GOLF BALLS USED TO POISON SKUNKS

Detroit Lakes— Chloroforming skunks, and 66 of them, heads the list of the season's prize hunting stories. The feat was performed by Walter Elsenpeter who collected a number of golf balls, soaked them in chloroform and rolled them down holes perforated in the ground six miles south of here. By plugging the openings, which he knew were skunk tunnels, 66 skunks were exhumed, and the polecats had no opportunity to behave in the distasteful manner for which they are so famous.

"SAY, Jen, where's the star for the top?"

Dick Dartmouth smiled down at the girl who stood at the foot of the ladder. "How does it look?" he asked.

"Fine, Dick. It's almost like being home," she exclaimed, and then her face sobered.

"Here!" said Dick, and descended. "Don't you dare let me down. It's a darn shame that the whole school piled off for the holidays and left you behind with me, but still, if you hadn't stayed, what would I have done?"

"And if you hadn't stayed, what would I? I couldn't nearly afford the trip home."

"But at least, Jen, you have a home," he said wistfully.

"I know. I'd been thinking of that." She straightened. "Come on, let's get through. What shall we do with the mistletoe?"

"I'll take it." He began twining it around a lamp fixture. "Do you know, Jen," he said musingly, "I'm surprised some of the other girls didn't invite you to visit them."

She was silent for a moment. "They did, Dick. But I preferred to stay here with you."

"Honestly, darling?" He laughed happily. "And I turned down three chances just to stay with you."

And quite naturally he discovered what to do with the mistletoe.

Each in His Own Way...

—by—

Frances Grinstead

EVERY family has its own way of celebrating Christmas. Do you have the tree on Christmas eve or Christmas morning? It seems all wrong to me to take off its gifts at any other time than the dark early morning of Christmas itself. Yet I have a friend who considers that Santa Claus can only arrive in the candle-lit twilight, so that visions of sugar plums already seen, as well as those to be found in the stockings at dawn, may dance through the heads of the young ones.

Among my Christmas memories are years when our household could not afford trimming a tree, and there was no mantelpiece for hanging stockings. Some people might think that a combination to knock merriment into a cocked hat! They should have seen our excitement at hanging a stocking from the back of each chair, and the delighted squeals when we discovered in the morning that Santa had filled the chairs as well as the dangling hosiery with appropriate gifts. If they were cheap and the tinsel and holly conspicuously lacking, only the grown-ups knew it.

There was always a box of dominoes in somebody's stocking, since my father liked to play. We usually spent Christmas morning in a family game, and I have just this moment suspected it wasn't the children who started it! I've another friend whose father insists on making popcorn balls Christmas morning, and her mother must always fry sausage. So, Merry Christmas, each in your own way!

Christmas and December

Christmas is not nearly as old as the month in which it falls. December was the last month in that old ten-month calendar o' ancient Rome. The name comes from the Latin word, "decem," meaning "ten." In the beginning the month was known as Decembris, but during the many centuries that followed the name changed so that it now comes to us in its present form. The old Saxons, recognizing December as the beginning of winter, called it Winter-Monath (winter month). They also called it Heligh-Monath (holy month) because of the fact that Christmas fell on one of its days.—Pathfinder Magazine.

SCHOOL RECEIVES BEQUEST

Of much interest to many people now residing here, and to many more who were here during and before mill days, is a little bequest recently received by the local school. This consists of pictures showing the first school building in the village, and was given to the school by Mary Kyle, one of the first teachers here. Miss Kyle left here about thirty years ago, was married and lived in Wisconsin up to the time of her death. Several of the middle-aged business people in St. Hilaire were pupils of Miss Kyle when the first school was erected west of the tracks back in the nineties.

SCHOOL CLOSES FRIDAY

School closes Friday for the annual holiday vacation of two weeks. All the non-resident members of the teaching staff plan to leave that evening to spend the holidays at their respective homes.

Many people from this locality, together with their little folks, were at Thief River Falls last Saturday to see Santa Claus in his advance trip to that city. Santa arrived as per schedule, by a special train over the Soo Line. After a parade thru the business section, Santa was the central figure at a meeting at the Auditorium where remembrances were distributed among the children.

CARL SWANSON IS DEAD

Members of the Walback family received word Monday that their brother-in-law, Carl Swanson, had died Monday at his home at Crookston after a brief illness. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Sumpter and others of the Walback family motored yesterday to Crookston to be present at the funeral service.

SPECIAL SESSION OF LEGISLATURE

Governor Hjalmar Petersen has called a special session of the legislature starting today for the purpose of passing an unemployment insurance bill. Committees have been busy the past few days conferring with federal and state officials and going over details of federal requirements and the setup the state will have to furnish in its unemployment insurance.

Legislators hope to get the bill passed before Christmas and sent to Washington so it can be approved before the end of the year.

Rev. Chas. W. Erickson of Iron River, Mich., recently took over the pastorate of the Augustana Lutheran church at Thief River Falls. He and his family have already taken up their residence at Thief River Falls. Rev. Erickson is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Karl J. Erickson of Rocksbury northeast of here.

Construction is progressing rapidly on the new Oen store building at Thief River. Brick work is now above the second floor. Lower part has been inclosed to permit of finishing work during the cold weather. It is expected the building will be ready for occupancy by early spring.

With the mercury hovering around the freezing mark, weather conditions have been ideal this week. At present there is not enough snow to provide good sleighing. Practically all roads are open for auto traffic.

With upward of three hundreds of extra fine birds, the 19th annual Pennington county poultry show closed Friday at Thief River Falls.

Several entries from choice flocks of chickens and turkeys from this vicinity were among the exhibits this year.

Mrs. N. E. Beebe returned home Tuesday after visiting a couple weeks with relatives and friends at Rapidan, Mankato and in the Twin Cities.

A fair sized crowd attended the Oldtime dance given last evening at the Bilden & Olsen hall. Selmer Olson and his orchestra furnished music for the occasion.

Manford Dahle, who attends Rush Medical College at Chicago, is expected home Tuesday or Wednesday to spend his holiday vacation with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. M. L. Dahle.

Gordon Martz, who is employed at highway survey work in the vicinity of Halstad, motored up last evening and visited a few hours with his brother, Clint, and with friends.

H. L. Hanson, who has been a patient at a Thief River hospital for about ten days, returned home a few days ago. He is feeling better, but is unable to be around yet.

Creamery Patrons — During weeks beginning December 20 and 27, cream will be taken at the creamery on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. The plant will be closed Christmas and New Years days.

Arrangements are being made to run a line from the Olness corner down past the park site to furnish electric light for the skating rink. During the next summer season the line may be used in lighting up the park.

Al Brink writes that himself and family have arrived at McAllen, Texas where they are now getting settled and expect to spend the winter months. Al says the weather is balmy down there, and he is pleased with the country as a winter living place.

BIG CROWD ATTENDS JUNIOR CLASS PLAY

A crowd which taxed the capacity of the school auditorium, witnessed the presentation of the Junior class play "A Million Dollar Joke" given last Friday evening. The play was replete with interesting situations from start to finish, and was very well received by all who saw it. All the young people in the cast took their parts exceptionally well, and much credit is due them as well as their director for the fine manner in which the play was staged.

Robert Collins is back home after having been employed a few weeks at constructing lumber camp buildings near Malcolm.

HOLD 2D MEETING OF WHIST TOURNEY

Second meeting of the whist tournament with sixty players in attendance, was held Tuesday night at the hall. Staging a rally in the opening games, the White side took a lead which they held until the fifth round. In the fifth and sixth frames, the Orange side made substantial gains and wound up with about seventy points to the good. The woman's tourney, conducted at the B. M. Club rooms at the same time, had sixteen players occupied. Following their games, lunch was served in their room while the men players partook of lunch at both the cafes. No time was set for the next meeting, but this will be announced thru these columns some time after New Years.

WOMAN'S CLUB MEETS

A meeting of the Woman's Club was held last evening in the B. M. Club rooms. Since this was the last meeting before Christmas, the Christmas motive was carried out in the hall and table decorations, as well as in the program. A very enjoyable evening was spent by the women.

HAPPY NEW YEAR MUSH

By Luella B. Lyons

LEAH MERWIN had been the one elected to stay at home when the others went into town in the old flivver to the morning New Year's service at the church. Someone had to remain at home to watch the stock and, too, Leah hadn't a new or even a decent coat. Jake Merwin was having tough sledding in financial affairs without one more need being voiced, so Leah never told him of her need.

"I wouldn't have minded if it hadn't started snowing the minute their backs were turned and now—they won't tackle driving home in this weather," but Leah's words stopped at once as she made out in the swirling snow a car that was stopping in the barnyard. The plump figures of a man and a woman were making a wild dash for the protection of the house.

"We saw we couldn't go another turn of the wheels," the sweet, friendly woman told Leah—the lady who introduced the two of them as Mr. and Mrs. Tom Madison, 11 miles to the east of Borger. "We hoped to spend New Year's and visit at our son's, Tom Junior's over at Borger, but now—well, we want to buy our dinner here from you. May we, my dear, without putting you out?"

They were such a jolly pair and Leah even forgot to be embarrassed when she had to serve them the only thing she had prepared, a feast of delicious fried mush and butter and syrup and plenty of fresh milk and coffee. Supper consisted of the same fare and so did breakfast the next morning, but by that time the Merwins were able to break the drifts and reach the farm and the Madisons, via those breaks, went on their belated way.

"It will be a happy New Year every day for a year for us, Momsy," Leah shouted when the Madisons were out of sight. To a smiling but perplexed family, Leah explained that Mr. Madison owned a small chain of meat markets and small cross road grocery stores and that he had given her sufficient orders for slabs of cornmeal mush just like she had served him and his good wife, for all those stores for one year at least. "The labels on this mush, he said, are to read 'Lady Leah's Prize Mush'." When the trio had quieted down a bit she added: "The money end of the contract will settle all our financial difficulties for the year and who knows, maybe forever!"

Beginning of the Year

As early as 251 B.C., the Romans accepted January as the beginning of the year. They named the month in honor of Janus, the two-faced god, as looking both into the past and the future. During the Middle Ages the year was made to begin at various dates. In England, in 1751, January was made the first month by act of Parliament.

Travelogue For Life

By MARTHA B. THOMAS

"I'VE just had a thought," said Marcia, "and it's a grand one."

They were tucked cosily beneath a bear rug in an old-fashioned sleigh, gliding along under the stars to the silvery jangle of bells.

"Tell me at once," commanded Jerry, "I collect grand thoughts as a hobby."

Marcia laughed. "Tonight is New Year's eve, and if," she sat up straighter in her eagerness, "the sun were shining, and we were going with it, just as fast, I mean—we could yell down Happy New Year to the whole world as we rolled along!"

Jerry was amused and indulgent.

"Don't you see," continued the girl, "we're all so used to thinking of events happening just where we are, and not following them on and on . . . The idea rather gets you."

"Around the world in 24 hours at New Year's. A zippy travelogue?"

But she was serious. "See here, Jerry, you and I are going to be married soon, and I sort of hope we can, well, keep our thoughts up and off the ground."

"What an odd idea. Usually coming brides are chattering of linen and silver."

She pressed her hand on his arm. "Stop the horse a minute, please. There—let's both lean back and look up at the sky, and fill our eyes with stars, and space . . . and time-going-on. Maybe, if we drink deep enough," her voice was husky with feeling, "we won't get all tangled up with trifles. I'm a little afraid sometimes, of our days ahead, Jerry."

"Afraid?" The man's voice sounded hurt.

"Only that I'll get a habit of low-visibility."

"You mean," Jerry leaned over to take her hands "you want always to remember that new happiness, new ways of thought, and New Years, go ringing around the world with the sun; that time does not circle around one small set of people or circumstances?"

"Yes, yes, Jerry! Let's make a pact together, now. Not to think little thoughts about little events that happen to our little selves."

"Fine. I'm with you!"

"And to remind each another now and then, to stop, and get the true sense of time and space and world-bigness going on and on."

"Done, darling! New Year's resolution for a happy life: KEEP THE SUN, MOON AND STARS IN YOUR THOUGHTS . . . and you'll never be narrow-minded!"

Jerry kissed her.

"Hear the bells ringing in town? Aren't they far and sweet?" whispered Marcia. "Midnight circling the world. New Year's in a minute!"

NEW YEAR'S BELLS

FROM the earliest times the ringing of bells has been employed as a method of announcing death, and the use of bells at New Year's eve symbolizes the death of the old year. In England it was formerly customary to ring muffled bells just before twelve, and at twelve to remove the wrappings and to allow the bells to ring loudly.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Deerwood—A school police patrol has been organized at the school here by William J. Soderstrom of the state highway patrol.

Northfield—A class in home landscaping is being planned for the winter months. C. M. Larsen, high school agricultural instructor, will conduct the class.

Perham—Fire, believed to have started from an overheated furnace, threatened to destroy the New Grand hotel. Flames were, however, confined to the barber shop in the hotel annex.

Currie—Dogs have caused great havoc among sheep herds on several farms near Currie during the last ten days and a survey shows that sheep valued at over a thousand dollars have been killed.

Worthington—Merchants of this city are very optimistic over the approaching holiday season. The most conservative of the store men believe this year's holiday buying will reach the high mark of 1929 and 1930.

Minneapolis—During a loud and stormy session, the board of public welfare, meeting as a committee of the whole, voted to increase food allowances for families 10 per cent, and for homeless men an additional 15 cents daily. Homeless men now get 45 cents daily.

Farmington—Indignant dairy farmers, numbering nearly 500, converged on the Farmington Farmers Cooperative milk plant in protest against a rumor that a strike was threatened at the plant. The plant, one of the largest milk concentration points in he state, closed temporarily to avert disorder.

St. Paul—Complete federal income tax returns made to Washington last March by approximately 65,000 residents of Minnesota are to be made available, the bureal of internal revenue announced to Minnesota state taxing authorites, for checking, should they be desired and the governor requst them.

Minneapolis—Purchase of more than 1,000,000 bushels of spring wheat and other grains to total 2,650,000 bushels for seed to be resold in ample time for planting next spring in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana was announced by the drouth committee of the agricultural department in Washington.

Clayton—Nearly a thousand persons attended a barbecue given by the Slayton Civic and Commerce Club for members of county 4-H clubs in the club's building on the fair grounds J. O. Christianson of the state agricultural school spake at a meeting in the high school auditorium which followed the barbecue.

Duluth—Congressman William A. Pittenger announced he will return to law practice, following the two terms he served in congress as representative from the eighth congressional district. He has opened offices in Duluth where he will also conduct his congressional office until his term expires on January 3.

Mahnomen—Mistaken for an animal by her husband while hunting, Mrs. Gilbert Elfring, 21-year-old mother of a six-week-old baby, died of gunshot wounds. Mrs. Elfring was returning home from the mail box when the shooting occurred. She was passing through underbrush and her husband said he thought she was an animal.

Rochester—Lloyd Goerge, 16, of St. Charles, is in serious condition in a hospital here following the harrowing experience of lying paralyzed for three days in the woods after he accidentally shot himself in the abdomen while hunting. A volunteer posse found the youth after he had dragged himself more than a mile, seeking help.

St. Paul—With the approach of winter, sportsmen and conservationists are again asked to co-operate with the division of game and fish in feeding game birds. A leaflet containing instructions for building bird shelters and feeders may be obtained upon request from the division of game and fish or the Youth Administration, Minnesota building, St. Paul.

Minneapolis—Earle Brown, former Hennepin county sheriff, Republican candidate for governor in 1932 and a nationally known breeder of Belgian horses, has bought an old estate near St. Jonsbury, Vermont, and is considering making it his future home. The estate valued by attorneys at $250,000, consists of a 42-room house, two dairy farms, a cheese factory, creamery and stable for horses.

Fairmont—The Martin county board of commissioners hit the ceiling and bounced back when, at its monthly session, the clerk read a letter from a Fairmont woman who asked the board to allow her $2 a month to pay for the family washing. She said she was not able to carry water and that her husband slept all the time. The family has a boy in a CCC camp sending home $25 a month.

St. Paul—Supervisory positions paying almost three times as much as the $30 paid monthly to CCC enroles will be opened within the next month to approximately 1,000 members of the conservation corps eligible for promotion. The jobs, which will give selected workers the title of "junior assistant to technician," will carry salaries of $85 a month. One junior assistant is to be appointed for each CCC camp now in operation, the director said. Simultaneously, another CCC enrollment starting about January 1, was announced.

Decorating for Christmas—

Some Handsome Window and Room Ornaments That Are Inexpensive

WHILE windows may have been decorated for Christmas before now, the arrangements indoors seldom are made until the day before the holiday. The freshness of the beauty is wanted without any diminution. If the novelty has worn off, some of the zest of Christmas is lost. This is so true that many homemakers refuse to have windows trimmed more than a day or so prior to Christmas.

If you happen to be among this latter group, let me suggest that you take sprays of a tree that is misshapen and so very cheap and make a splashing bow of red crepe paper for each and hang one in every front window downstairs. Or have one in each downstairs window that is discernible from the street.

You can dot the spray with holly berries, or whatever you have in addition to the green. Or you can dip popped corn in red stain or dye, and touch the kernels with glue and secure them to the sprays. These notes of red, with their irregular shapes, are intriguing, sometimes being mistaken for berries and sometimes for flowerets.

Bank the mantelpiece over the fireplace where the stockings are hung, using sprays of the green intermingled with holly, mistletoe, pine cones, bayberries, or silvered or other metal painted motifs such as acorns, fine twigs with many fronds, etc. When everything is fixed to your fancy twine a string of wee colored Christmas tree electric lights through the greens. These will look ornamental by day and have a glamor when lighted during the evening.

Baskets filled with greens and dotted with the novelty units lend notes of appropriate Christmas decoration. Any small baskets will do for this purpose. There generally are some about a house, but if not, metal paint or green stain some of the little market baskets such as strawberries, brussels sprouts or tomatoes come in. Make a rope or lengths of paper braid for the handles, painted or stained to match the basket. If a length of picture wire has been wound with the strands of paper rope and braid, these handles will keep their shape when ends have been thrust inside the baskets close to their opposite sides. The handles can be wired or glued to the baskets.

Bouquets of Christmas greens in vases can be put in rooms other than the living room and dining room, and give their beauty of Christmas about the house. Be sure to use vases and bowls that have broad standards lest the uneven weight of the greens tips them over.

Royal Measles Would Gratify Gracious Mayor

A pendant to the historic incident of Queen Elizabeth and Sir Walter Raleigh is this gem, surely—supplied by Arthur Croxton:

The courtly mayor of a small town in the Midlands had the honor of dancing at some public ceremonial with Queen Alexandra (then princess of Wales). She smilingly warned him that she had just had measles in her household, and that she hoped that she would not give him the disease. Bowing low before her, the mayor answered:

"Your royal highness, I should be most happy to take anything at all from so charming a source."

TRACTION MEANS GROUND GRIP!
GROUND GRIP MEANS "FIRESTONE"!

TRACTION on unimproved roads in bad weather is a problem which has long baffled tire engineers. Sure footing on a muddy football field is also a problem. But during the wet, slippery football season of 1936, thousands of players depended upon the cleats of their shoes to bring them through for the winning play.

During 1937 thousands of car, truck and bus owners will depend upon the rugged rubber cleats of Firestone Ground Grip Tires to pull them through snow, mud, sand, or over any unimproved roads.

The scientific tread of the Ground Grip Tire is so distinctive in design and so unusual in performance that it has become known as "the tire that makes its own road." It is almost unbelievable how these super-traction tires dig in, grip, and pull you through. They are self-cleaning. Chains are not necessary. Equip the rear wheels of your car, truck or bus with a pair of Ground Grip Tires and save time, money and trouble.

If you have not already equipped your tractor and farm implements with Ground Grip Tires do it now—they will save you 25% in time and fuel costs, reduce vibration, and provide greater comfort.

Call on your nearby Implement Dealer, Firestone Tire Dealer, or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store today. Start now to reap the many advantages of the Firestone Ground Grip Tire—the greatest traction tire ever built!

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Dr. High Predicts

Washington.—Observers of affairs in the national capital frequently get a different slant on statements by "close advisers of the President" or activities of "those on the inside" than persons living at distances from Washington. They are less likely to be misled in their conclusions as to the meaning of such statements or actions, come as they may from "high sources," than others not closely in touch. But even this close contact by observers here does not always produce for them a definite finality on their conclusions because some things are simply impossible of proof.

The above statements are by way of directing attention to the inability of the corps of correspondents here to tell whether Dr. Stanley High was speaking with the approval or even the acquiescence of President Roosevelt when Dr. High voiced the opinions in Liberty Magazine recently to the effect that Mr. Roosevelt is in a mood to discipline the newspapers of the country. Dr. High, to summarize many words in his magazine article, rather forecast Mr. Roosevelt in his new term of office will not abandon his liberal policies but probably will chastise his enemies less than occurred during his first term—except the press. Certainly, Dr. High gave us all reason to believe that Mr. Roosevelt is pretty much disgusted with certain types of newspapers in this country and that he may be expected to "crack down" on them.

The consensus among the writing fraternity in Washington is that Dr. High has an opportunity at least to know the Presidential mind. He has virtually lived with it during the last six months and there can be no doubt that he had opportunities during that time of talking formally and informally with the Chief Executive in a manner not permitted more than a few persons. On this basis, if on no other, one would be led to believe that Dr. High was writing in a sense a reflection of Mr. Roosevelt's thoughts, yet, as I said at the beginning, none of us can be sure.

While Dr. High definitely is in a position as an adviser to the President to know the trend of Mr. Roosevelt's mind, he was delightfully general in the discussion of the President's future program except as to the press. Again, it may be much ado about nothing. So many of the Presidential advisers and insiders have been writing and talking and acting in the last three years that it is difficult to tell which is the real story. It may be, therefore,—and I believe this is the best answer—that Dr. High has turned loose a toy balloon. If this balloon is blown the wrong way by comments from the nation, you probably will hear no more about a discipline for the press. If the comments are friendly, another story may be expected and its nature is not now to be forecast.

Hit Unfair Journalism

Assuming now that Dr. High has faithfully presented the President's thoughts on the newspapers of the country, it seems entirely proper that the suggestion be examined from the viewpoint of national welfare.

Dr. High, to be sure, made clear in his article that the President's efforts to reform the press will be addressed only to those newspapers which engage in misrepresentation, color their news or are guilty of unfair journalism. I believe that the vast majority of our newspapers properly are jealous of the integrity of their policies. I believe that the vast majority of our editors regard the responsibility of leadership as something quite sacred and not to be tainted. In the same breath that we mention the President's purported thoughts and the attitude of most newspapers, one cannot help but recall that at least three-fourths of all newspaper circulation in the recent Presidential campaign was opposed to President Roosevelt's re-election.

Thus, and in view of these circumstances, it may be disconcerting to a good many people to read the strong language that Dr. High has used in reflecting the implications of the Presidential mind. To that school of thought, the Doctor's language, if it means anything, means that Mr. Roosevelt proposes to take steps, directly or indirectly, to make the entire press of America conform to his ideas of what constitutes "fair journalism." In other words, if their interpretation of the High article is correct, there can be intimidation of the press from the White House.

The intimidation could come from Presidential tongue lashing of newspapers or any one individual newspaper which the President believed was guilty of "unfair journalism." The net result of such a course, naturally, would be a fearful press and a fearful press obviously never has presented and never will present its impartial judgment; it will never answer back and it probably will never fight out the issues in which it believes and to which it may have been committed theretofore.

I do not defend unfair newspapers and I do not believe anyone else can defend them. Newspapers, because of their position as leaders, must conform to the maximum of honesty. I think, however, that the number of unfair journals is declining because public sentiment gradually drives them out of business. If Mr. Roosevelt actually has in mind the things presented by Dr. High, then a wave of resentment is likely to arise and that wave of resentment in itself will not help in the movement to drive out unfair newspapers. At least, that is the conviction that seems to prevail among the several hundred capable observers here in Washington. Only a few, as far as I can discern, believe that the President can get away with the program which Dr. High outlined in his behalf.

Slow to Change

Colonel Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the senate, recently has had compiled some facts and figures on proposals for constitutional amendments that are strikingly interesting. First, the fact that there have been 3,759 proposals for constitutional amendments in the nation's history, and only 21 of them succeeded and became a part of the Constitution, is to me most significant. It shows very definitely, I believe, that our people are slow to make changes in the fundamental law of our country and that they do not make these changes until there is something approximating unanimity of belief that they are necessary.

Colonel Halsey's compilation disclosed the further interesting fact that economic conditions have a direct link with and reflect rather accurately the desires of the people to alter or revise the Constitution. It seems that when there is plenty of work and plenty of profit and the nation is going along happily, even few of the demagogues have thought about amending the Constitution. But let hard times descend upon us, let there be millions of unemployed and hundreds of thousands of persons destitute and forward comes a perfect deluge of proposals to change the Constitution.

Very accurate proof of the above statement is given in the records for the last ten years, that is, from 1926 to 1936. The most important political question agitating the congress during the first part of this decade was the proposal to change the date upon which the President and Vice President and congress take office. Latterly, and after the prosperity bubble burst, the depression brought its own flock of proposals for changing the Constitution.

Colonel Halsey disclosed that there had been 20 proposals which would authorize congress to deal with working hours and wages; 7 which would have given congress authority over agricultural production and 9 limiting the power and authority of the Supreme court to declare acts of congress unconstitutional or otherwise modify court jurisdiction. There were two suggested amendments that would have placed in the hands of congress virtual power to control the general welfare of the nation.

The Halsey document also reflects maneuvers of various blocs and schools of thought and likewise tells a very clear story of our nation's sashay into the field of national prohibition. National prohibition was a long time in coming and there are many who believe that it was forced upon the country too soon. That is to say it was made operative before a sufficiently large majority of the poeple were in favor of it. This seems to be substantiated by the figures which show that during the last decade, there were 135 proposals for repeal of the 18th amendment out of a total of 479 resolutions for constitutional amendment. In other words, had there been anything like the necessary popular majority in favor of prohibition, we would have seen very few attempts in congress to repeal the liquor control amendment.

Stools Before Chairs

Chairs, which we take for granted nowadays, were not in common use until the last part of the Seventeenth century. Before that time hard wooden stools were the only seating conveniences known. Museums preserve some of the first chairs of history, stiff, uncomfortable objects of puritan austerity. The backs were of solid wood, often in carved design, and the seats, too, were solid. They were known as "wainscott" chairs.

ONE of the best of the many special Christmas broadcasts this year will be one that brought pleasure to thousands last year—Lionel Barrymore's appearance on the airwaves on Christmas evening with a dramatic version of Dickens' "Christmas Carol."

The part of "Scrooge" has always been one of his favorites. And his performance last year was received so enthusiastically everywhere that CBS signed him to a five-year contract. Whether he likes it or not, he's become a tradition!

There's one man in Hollywood whom all the male stars go out of their way to be friendly with — and all because they don't know when he may take a shot at them. Not a shot with a camera, either—a shot with a gun. His name is Sid Jordan, and you've seen the effect of his work in a lot of pictures. In "The Prisoner of Shark Island" he nicked fragments from the stone walls of Fort Jefferson just over Warner Baxter's head. In "Lloyds of London" he shot bits out of the decks of Nelson's flagship. And when you see "Banjo on My Knee," you'll see Joel McCrea swimming the Mississippi with shots hitting the water near his head—shots fired by Sid Jordan.

After Fred Allen appeared in "Thanks a Million" he declared that he was through with acting in the movies. Radio was enough for him (it should be, since he writes his programs as well as acts in them). So he turned down a contract to make more pictures and retreated to New York in good order, with "Town Hall Tonight" his main activity.

Now he's been talked into changing his mind. He's signed a contract with Twentieth Century-Fox, and so has his wife, Portland Hoffa.

The Spanish revolution has seriously affected the lives of Grace Moore and her husband, Valentin Parera. They had planned to adopt Mr. Parera's four-year-old niece, who lived near Madrid, but for some time now they have had no word of the child, or of Mr. Parera's mother, brother and two sisters.

It seems pretty funny, but it's true. When Anna May Wong arrived in Shanghai six months ago for a visit she could not speak a word of Chinese. Now that she's off for London she speaks it very well indeed—but in England she's not likely to need it.

There's still a lot of argument going on about Leslie Howard's performance in "Hamlet" on the New York stage. Hollywood stars arriving in New York make a bee line for the theater; whether it's good or bad, they want to see it for themselves. The general public seems to feel the same way.

The dramatic critics, with a few exceptions, have taken their axes to the Howard "Hamlet." They feel that it's pretty bad, and have not hesitated to say so. Mr. Howard has been moved to defend himself in curtain speeches. This "Hamlet" production has been dear to his heart for a long, long time, you know. Apparently he was not prepared for the roasting the critics gave him. But anyway the box office receipts are good.

Screen idols, undaunted by what happened to them the last time they spent a vacation in New York, plan other ones there in the immediate future. Their prinicpal hazard is autograph hunters. It's a curious thing about autograph hunters; they seem to have a sixth sense that tells them when a celebrity is in the vicinity. It's hard on the celebrities, of course, but take it from me it's harder on the friends or relatives of the famous ones, who have to stand by and wait while the signing goes on. The fans just elbow them out of the way. The expression on Mrs. Gary Cooper's face while her husband obliges the fans is something to remember!

Odds and Ends . . . Homer Rodeheaver, who leads that Wednesday night Community Sing on the air, commutes from Indiana to New York to do it . . . Slim Summerville has a new five-year contract . . . You'll like Joan Crawford and Clark Gable in "Love on the Run" . . . John Boles, Texas born, has been made a member of the staff of the Governor of Texas . . . When ZaSu Pitts sailed for England she wore that gorgeous mink coat of hers— one of the most beautiful in the world—which she really bought so that later she could give it to her daughter!

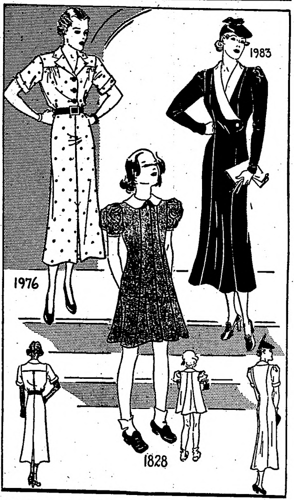
It's Princess Lines Again



AGAIN princess lines are riding the crest of the fashion wave. Good news for members of The Sewing Circle, for princess lines have always been favored by those who sew at home. And for morning wear, the timeless shirtmaker, a perennial choice for busy housewives. Check your wardrobe. It's time to start sewing again, and here are three topnotch selections.

The smart shirtwaister (Pattern 1976) is a utility frock distinguished for its trim lines and as easy to make as it is to wear. Suitable in any of a wide range of fabrics for a wide variety of needs from sun-up to sun-down, this extremely wearable number is available in a wide range of sizes. The notched collar is pert and youthful, there is fulness at the yoke, and the set-in sleeves fit well and wear forever. Send for Pattern 1976 in size 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, and 50. Size 36 requires 4⅜ yards of 35 inch gingham or percale or shantung.

The slick little princess model (Pattern 1828) needs little comment for the picture tells the story. An utterly simple little affair which buttons all the way down the front, it will make an instant hit with your growing daughter and you can slide it through your machine with the greatest of ease. Just seven pieces to the pattern, including the collar and sleeve band, it is available in sizes 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. Size 8 requires 2⅛ yards of 35 inch fabric plus ¼ yard contrast.

The lovely daytime princess frock (Pattern 1983) is a model which can be made and worn successfully by 36's as well as 50's. There is a choice of long or short sleeves and there is just enough contrast in the graceful collar to give the frock a smart touch of distinction. Likewise simple — just eight pieces including the collar and cuff—this pattern is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, and 50. Make it in satin, silk, crepe, sheer wool, broadcloth, challis, or linen. Size 38 requires 5⅜ yards of 39 inch of 3¾ yards of 54 inch fabric. Less with short sleeves.

Don't miss these grand numbers. A detailed sewing chart accompanies each pattern to guide you every step of the way.

Send for the Barbara Bell Fall and Winter Pattern Book containing 100 well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send fifteen cents in coins for your copy.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 367 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

Good Fortune

A man reprimanded his little son for eating nothing but cakes at tea-time.

"When I was your age, I got nothing but bread and butter at tea-time," he said.

"You must be awfully glad you came to live here, daddy," observed the boy, brightly.

FAMILY IS SAVED BY DOG'S ALARM

Hastings—An Airdale dog is credited with saving the lives of three persons when his frantic scratching and howls awakened his mistress, Mrs. Clyde Rivers, in time for her to rescue herself and her two children from their blazing home in South Hastings. The fire, which had started on the first floor from an overheated pipe of a coal stove, had burned for several hours before Mrs. Rivers, who was asleep upstairs with her two children, was awakened. Upon arrival of the fire department almost the entire ceiling of the living room had burned away and there was a large hole in the second floor ceiling.

State Farm Bureau Head Placed On U. S. Board

F. W. White, Lyon county farmer, and president of the Minnesota Farm Bureau, was elected to the board of directors of the American Farm Bureau Federation at the national convention held in Pasadena, California, on December 9-11. Mr. White's elevation came during his first year in office as president of the state federation and on his first attendance at a national farm bureau convention. His predecessor as president of the M. F. B. S., A. J. Olson of Renville, was a member of the national board for many years. Mr. White is well known as a leader in farm cooperative organizations being secretary of Land O' Lakes Creameries, member of the board of the Minnesota State Jersey Breedrs Association.

SANTA CLAUS STILL LIVES IN ONE TOWN

Albert Lea—There is at least one town where there is a Santa Claus who will be host at a turkey dinner on Christmas day to all needy persons in Albert Lea. He has announced that all the unemployed and those who have no funds may receive tickets for the dinner to be held in a local cafe and that when the dinner is over he will pay everyone's checks. The "Goodfellow", as he is named because of his unknown identity, has for several years put on the Christmas dinner, which is attended annually by one hundred needy persons.

BLOOD AFFLICTION TAKES BOY'S LIFE

Brainerd—A strange and rare blood affliction, similar to the dreaded hemophilia, a hereditary disease that has pursued the Spanish royal family and its offspring for years, struck a humble Crow Wing county family when it exacted as its toll the life of a five-year old boy, Robert Chamberlain of Crosby. He died after a blood transfusion failed to stop the spontaneous flow of blood spurting out at intervals from different parts of his body. The boy's affliction was described as an acute condition which strikes its subjects without warning or, as far as science knows, without a definite cause. It is characterized by the refusal of the blood to clot making it impossible to stop the flow that spontaneously crops out under the skin on any place of the body. Robert's condition was diagnosed by injection of a hypodermic needle with a minute point from which blood trickled for 36 hours defying all attempts to halt it.

S. J. AMBLE DIES AT GRAND FORKS

S. J. Amble, pioneer resident of Grand Forks, and former resident of St. Hilaire, died Thursday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. T. Skarsbo at Grand Forks, at the age of 82 years.

Born in Sogn, Norway, February 4, 1854, Mr. Amble came to this country with his parents at the age of 17 years. The family resided at Minneapolis until 1878 when Mr. Amble went to Grand Forks. In November of 1883 he was united in marriage to Miss Carrie Johnson of that city. In the late eighties he operated lumber yards at Devils Lake and Washburn, N. D., and later engaged in business at Grand Forks until 1906 when he and family moved to this village, and he established the Park Ridge Nursery which he operated until 1923 when he and Mrs. Amble again returned to Grand Forks to make their home. Mr. Amble enjoyed excellent health until about two years ago when he suffered a stroke. He visited St. Hilaire regularly every year, and had a host of friends in this locality who will miss his cheery greetings and visits.

In addition to Mrs. Amble, he is survived by four daughters, Mrs. A. V. Jacobson of St. Hilaire, Mrs. Lawrence Boese, Mrs. F. W. Purvis and Mrs. A. T. Skarsbo of Grand Forks; one son, James Amble of Grand Forks, 18 grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at 2:30 P. M., Saturday in the Pierce funeral home with Rev. O. T. Ness officiating. Burial was at the Memorial Park cemetery at Grand Forks. Pallbearers at the funeral were four grandsons, Arlo Jacobson, Stanton Amble, William Purvis, and Robert Purvis, and two nephews, Everett and Donald Brenna.

Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Jacobson and family, Ed. Stark and Norman Holmes of this place were present at the funeral.

Monday was the shortest day of the year, that is the day having the shortest period of daylight. Gradual lengthening of hours of daylight will not become very much apparent until after New Year. Only twelve weeks remain until official beginning of spring.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

A fair sized crowd attended the old time dance given here Wednesday night of last week.

Friends of Hans L. Hanson will be pleased to know he is showing improvement following his recent illness.

Walter Folden, manager of the Cities Service station, received word Tuesday that his uncle had died that day at his home near Holt.

Manford Dahle, medical student at Rush Medical College at Chicago, arrived here Sunday morning to spend the holidays with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. M. L. Dahle.

Miss Helena Erdmann, who teaches in the Brainerd high school, came home Saturday to spend the holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Erdmann.

Mrs. Mabel Dickerson and two daughters came Tuesday from Cavalier, N. D., to spend the holidays at the home of her brothers, Carl and Albert Weberg, in Rocksbury.

While we are enjoying this wonderfully fine weather as we prepare for the holidays, it may be interesting to know the mercury was down to 25 below zero a year ago this week.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Giese and family, accompanied by Mrs. H. Nelson, motored here Sunday from their farm home in Euclid community and were guests at the H. O. and M. H. Jackson homes.

While it is a bit unusual to have thawing weather in this part of the state during Christmas week, the mercury was up to near 40 yesterday. Snow along the streets changed into slush like on an early spring day.

Following short programs in each room, school closed Friday for the annual Christmas vacation, and members of the teaching staff departed to spend the holidays at their respective homes. School re-opens Monday, January 4th.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferdie Brown motored down Sunday from Grygla and spent the day at the home of Mrs. Brown's sister, Mrs. Jennie Carter.

Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Graham and daughter, Marlys, left Saturday morning to spend the holidays with relatives at Bertha and Wells, Minn.

The regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the creamery was held Monday, and checks to patrons for cream delivered the previous month were issued that day.

Miss Grace Dahle, instructor in the high school at Rhame, N. D., came today to spend her Christmas vacation with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. M. Dahle.

Oscar Kolstad motored here Monday from Duluth to spend a few days with relatives. He plans to spend Christmas at the home of his sister, Mrs. Lawrence Wilson at Warren, before returning to Duluth.

Mike Fricker is a man who believes in doing things by halves—that is half dozens. When renewing his subscription this week, he also did the same for five other members of his family, making a half dozen in all. Thanks, Mike.

Regular meeting of the B. M. Club was held Monday night at the club rooms. At election of officers for the coming term, Clarence Hallstrom was elevated from vice president to president, O. Gunstad was elected vice president, and Norman Bergh and H. L. Holmes were re-elected secretary and treasurer, respectively.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

When the next issue is printed Christmas will have come and gone for another year. In keeping with the spirit of the holiday season the publisher takes opportunity to wish each and every reader of the Spectator, as well as other friends, a very Merry Christmas, and that good health, abundant happiness and good cheer will be your lot during the holiday season.

Would you prefer to start at a low price with a fine new dependable 2 volt Zenith? You can do so.

Then by paying a few extra dollars later you can add the miracle-working Zenith Farm Radio Power Pack, and presto in one minute, you can change your 2 volt Zenith into a full fledged 6 volt Zenith Battery Radio—and dispense with all batteries except a 6 volt storage battery.

COME IN FOR DEMONSTRATION TODAY

Let me actually show you how Zenith Power Pack slips in and out of the new Zenith Farm Radio. OUT . . . and it's a 2 volt radio. IN . . . and it's a 6 volt. Either one the best at the price. We'll let you judge which type of Zenith you want to buy.

SWAN JOHNSON DIES AT TURLOCK, CALIF.

Swan Johnson, for many years a resident of this community, passed away Wednesday morning at his home at Turlock, California. The deceased was born in Smaland, Sweden, and was 77 years, 8 months and 11 days of age at the time of his death. He immigrated to this country with his parents at the age of 10 years. He came to Minnesota when a young man, and took a homestead in Kittson county where he was married to Hulda Udd. They came to St. Hilaire 38 years ago and resided on their farm east of the village until they moved to California 9 years ago. He is survived by his wife and eleven children, and 8 grandchildren. The children who live to mourn his loss are Elmer, Harvey, George and Loyd Johnson and Mrs. Arvid Dahlstrom of St. Hilaire, Mrs. Henry Braaten of Manvel, N. D. Mrs. Thomas Belland of Washington, D. C., Philip, Theodore, Oliver and Arthur Johnson of Turlock. He also is survived by a sister, Mrs. Anna Gran of Chicago, and by two brothers, Charles Johnson of Michigan City, Ind., and Frank Johnson of LaPorte, Indiana.

The body will be shipped here for burial in the cemetery east of the village. Funeral arrangements have not been completed at this time.

RESETTLEMENT BUILDING STARTS

Crews of men have been at work the past week or more excavating basements on four tracts of land a mile west of here, which have been acquired by the federal government for use in connection with the Resettlement project. If weather conditions continue so that work can be done during the winter, foundations will be put in and construction work started on four complete sets of farm buildings, two of them to be located on the half section south of the Kalinowski place, and two on the 240 acre tract east of the same farm. A well drilling outfit moved in yesterday and commenced work at sinking artesian wells at each of all four locations. Five other similar projects east of town will get under way in the near future, making nine new places in this immediate territory. Unless change in plans is made in the meantime, all of these farmsteads will be built up and ready for occupancy by midsummer or early next fall. As all of these buildings and other improvements will be made on lands that heretofore have been vacant and unoccupied, the project will be a big boost in upbuilding of this immediate territory.

HANS SANDE BUYS THE CHELIN HOUSE

Mr. and Mrs. Hans L. Sande of Thief River Falls have purchased the Chelin residence property opposite the Norwegian Lutheran church on Water street. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hanson, who have occupied the place under lease for several years, are seeking new quarters, and as soon as they vacate, Mr. and Mrs. Sande will take possession of their property. A hearty welcome is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Sande upon their becoming residents of St. Hilaire.

L. E. Healy, special deputy examiner, was up yesterday from Red Lake Falls to attend to business matters.

SEASONS GREETINGS

National Topics Interpreted

To Control Business

Washington — Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming has prepared a bill for introduction early in the new congress that will set up, if it becomes law, a comprehensive mechanism to control and regulate some of the principal activities of business corporations. It is a far reaching proposition, as it now stands, and it cannot be passed off lightly. There is support for it in a number of quarters. While it undoubtedly will not become law in its present form, it must be regarded as the opening wedge.

The Wyoming senator's principal idea is to require businesses of an incorporated character to take out a federal license. If they do not comply, the proposed law would deny them the right to ship goods into retail trade between states.

While the main theme of the proposition does not seem anything about which one should get excited, it is the things that can be done behind such a general requirement that must and will be examined by congress and the country before it takes a step of the kind advocated by Senator O'Mahoney. For example, if the federal government is permitted to require businesses to obtain a license or charter from Washington, those businesses may be compelled to meet all manner of requirements before such a license or charter is granted. In the reverse, if after they have the license, they fail to observe the provisions laid down either by congress or bald - headed bureaucrats, revocation of the license is the penalty that may be exacted. It should be added that exaction of a penalty of this kind, once the license provision is established as a federal government right, becomes a powerful weapon and the limit to which that power may be exercised is scarcely to be forecast.

While, as I said, the O'Mahoney legislation may not be expected to become law in its present form, its terms and provisions give a hint of what can be expected of any legislation of a similar character.

Take this provision, for example: "Rates of pay shall be increased and hours of work shall be reduced in accordance with gains in the productive efficiency of the industry, arising from increased mechanization, improvements in technological methods, or from other causes, to the end that employees shall have an equitable participation in the output of industry, and that employment and mass purchasing power may keep pace with industry."

* * *

Dictatorial Powers

It seems quite obvious that under such a basic statement of principles, a business could easily be made to agree to collective bargaining among its employees, to establish minimum wages and to follow the dictates of some bureau or commission in Washington in actual management and promulgation of policies. Indeed, it is set forth in the O'Mahoney draft that the federal trade commission would be authorized to obtain all "relevant and detailed data as to production costs, prices and profits."

As I see this sort of thing and from the views of experts with whom I have consulted, I cannot escape the conclusion that such legislation simply extends to the federal government dictatorial powers over virtually all private business.

It means, moreover, that politics and politicians would be the guiding force and that if union labor leaders were in control of the agency having supervisory powers over business or if communists or conservatives or any other class were in control, business would be directed in accordance with the economic views of that school of thought. Since our nation frequently hands the responsibility of government control from one political party to the other, the implications of such legislation as this are tremendous, to say the least.

Constitutional questions enter into this legislation and it may be that the basic theory advanced by the Wyoming senator will not hold at all. As I understand it, Senator O'Mahoney is holding no pride of authorship as to the language of his bill but to the principles he strongly adheres. So, it is made to appear at least, as I said above, that this proposal constitutes an entering wedge on an entirely new theory of government's relation to private business. For that reason, it is one of the most significant propositions to come forward in recent years, more significant, I believe, than the ill-fated NRA. It certainly is a proposition that should be watched closely by all citizens.

Mixing in Love Affairs

Affairs of the heart are all right privately, our American Department of State holds, but it reserves the right to horn into any love affair that involves an American foreign service officer. It is all perfectly open and above board. The Department of State has put its conclusions into writing, into an official regulation, and hereafter no foreign service officer can marry an alien while he is in the foreign service unless he gets the consent of "father" State department.

It is immensely interesting but not significant in an international way that the State department's order concerning international marriages should have been promulgated during the heat of the British constitutional crisis over King Edward's determination to marry the American - born Wallis Warfield Simpson. It simply happened to come along at the same time, but since all the world loves a lover, in Washington one hears reference to the Simpson-Edward affair mentioned many times in the same breath with the State department decree. This obtains because nearly all of our foreign service people have relations or friends in the national capital and the decree forbidding international marriages set many tongues to wagging.

But the State department ruling ought to be treated with utmost seriousness and sincerity. It is important. It is necessary to stretch the imagination a great way in order to assume that international marriages of the type banned by the State department would "shake an empire" after the manner of international marriages among royalty. On the other hand, it seems to me to be quite fair to say that international marriages among official representatives of a nation can very easily prove embarrassing to the government by which the foreign service officer receives credentials. In fact, there are instances on record where such marriages have proved to be serious obstacles in the settlement of disputes between governments.

Then, it must be considered that there is a genuine possibility of war in Europe in the next few years. A tremendous tragedy is being prepared there. While obviously any governmental decision that has the effect of keeping lovers apart arouses antagonism, a sympathetic feeling among all with tender hearts, in this circumstance, the rule seems well justified. In addition to following the lead of other nations on the point, our State department has banned these international marriages largely in order to keep our nation free from any possible entanglements in event of that European tragedy that looms like red fire on the horizon of the future. Marriages heretofore contracted, of course, will not be disturbed by the new ban, but elimination of that source of potential difficulty for the future is regarded as likely to be valuable.

I have heard criticism of the State department's order on the ground that affairs of the heart are private affairs—which indeed they are. But it must be remembered that where an individual accepts the rights, prerogatives and privileges of official position, he accepts at the same time certain definite responsibilities. In the case of a foreign service officer, his acceptance of the government title makes him at once and the same time a part of that government in a most peculiar way. Because foreigners do not understand our government any better than we understand foreign governments, when an American foreign service officer speaks, he speaks actually as the American government. One need not amplify this further than to say, therefore, one of that official's responsibilities is to carry out policy. National policy can be arranged only at its proper sources, namely, the President and the Department of State.

So, while budding romances may be blighted, heartaches may arise, soft lights in the eyes of men and maidens may be dimmed by the cruel and cold words of official regulations, it needs must be said that the welfare of a great nation must supersede the personal desires of a lonely man for a mate.

Thus, where any of our American diplomats or consular officers hereafter feel they cannot tread life's highway without the accompaniment of a foreign-born princess of their dreams, they simply will have to resign from their jobs and bring the lady home.

Enrico Caruso

The greatest of modern tenors, Caruso, was a bricklayer in his younger days. He was the 18th son of his parents. Every one of the first 17 children died in infancy. Caruso joined the Metropolitan Opera in 1903 and during the next 17 years sang over 607 times, for which he was paid over a million and a half dollars or an average rate of $2,785 a performance. Offered $4,000 a night at one time, he protested that $2,500 would be quite enough. Caruso refused to sing in his home town—Naples—because he was once hissed there. One of his favorite stunts was that of breaking glasses by singing to them, his voice, at a certain note, causing a vibration that glass could not withstand.—New Biography.

TAKE the word of a New York hairdresser for the fact that Mrs. Clark Gable "doesn't look ten years older than anybody, much less Clark!" Mrs. Gable dropped in the first time, wearing red, and a beautiful fur coat, and capitivated the entire establishment with her good looks and charm.

Incidentally, on her husband's recent trip to New York, it was said that he left the studio somewhat in doubt about just where he was going when he departed for New York — the general impression seems to have been that he was just going on a hunting trip. Another version was that he hoped to settle once and for all the matter of a divorce. However, nothing apparently happened. Clark spent a few days in New York and then went back to Hollywood.

Fredric March

You can't accuse Fredric March of high-hatting his old friends. Long ago, when he was a young actor just trying to get somewhere on the stage, he lived with two other chaps who also were just trying to get along in their professions. One of them was better off than the others so he paid the rent and bought meals.

The meal-buyer is up against hard times now. Fredric March isn't. If he were like some of our stars, he'd conveniently forget the past. But when he's in New York he looks up that old friend and nobody'd know by his actions that he'd climbed to the top of the ladder. In other words, he deserves the highest tribute that electricians and carpenters and other workmen around the movie studios can pay a man, "He's regular."

Do you listen to the Kate Smith programs, on which various unsung heroes and heroines appear, tell their story, and then receive votes from listeners-in? If you heard seven-year-old Mary Louise McCroskey and liked her you'll be glad to hear that she was voted for by 215,000 people, and received the weekly award of $500.

Loretta Young fell in love with the beautiful costumes that she wore in "Ramona," and couldn't bear to have them returned to the wardrobe room, to be cut up and made over. So she bought them, had them remodeled slightly—and now has four new evening dresses.

Jack Oakie

At last Jack Oakie, that gay comedian of the screen, has his heart's desire — a master of ceremonies job on the air. It's odd that he hasn't been signed up before, for he is one of the few comedians who are as good on the air as they are on the screen — you've probably heard some of his guest performances; he was on with Bob Burns while Bing Crosby was in Honolulu. He got the idea for this new program from his work in "College Rhythm." He's going to be a college president, but hasn't announced yet just what that will lead to. He's admitted that he'll have "guest professors"—Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor, Burns and Allen and others.

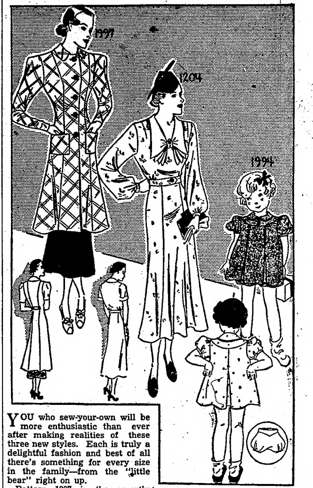
Showing Three New Styles



YOU who sew-your-own will be more enthusiastic than ever after making realities of these three new styles. Each is truly a delightful fashion and best of all there's something for every size in the family—from the "little bear" right on up.

Pattern 1997 is the smartly styled smock that probably has an option on a little portion of your heart right now. Fair enough, follow the dictates of your heart and you can't go wrong. This little wardrobe nicety will serve you becomingly and well. It will add to your comfort too. Make it of broadcloth, gingham, sateen or chintz for prettiness and easy maintenance. There is a choice of long or short sleeves and the shiny gold buttons offer just the sort of spicy contrast one likes in informal apparel. Available for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 34 requires 3½ yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1204—This new day frock for sizes 36 to 52 is the final word in style and charm in any woman's language. To don this flattering fashion is to step blithely into the realm of high fashion. The soft feminine collar is most becoming and it serves as an excellent medium for contrast. The sleeve length is optional. Slender lines are the main feature of the skirt and a very pleasant effect results from the wide and handsome flare. Satin or sheer wool would most assuredly win your friends' approval and perhaps just a little of their envy. This pattern is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 4⅜ yards of 39 inch material. Less with short sleeves. The collar in contrast requires ⅞ yard.

The adorable little number for Miss Two-To-Eight, Pattern 1994, is surely without competition in the way of downright intrigue. It's the essence of youthfulness with a lot of grown-up technique added to make it a crackajack. Why not do things up right and cut this model twice—panties too, naturally—using sheer wool for the "best" occasion frock and gingham or seersucker for school, play and all-purpose use? Pattern 1994 is available in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Size 4 requires 2½ yards of 39 inch material plus ¾ yard of bias binding for trimming.

Send for the Barbara Bell Fall and Winter Pattern Book containing 100 well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send fifteen cents in coins for your copy.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 367 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

Luke's Christmas Money

by Martha B. Thomas

LITTLE LUKE, watching his father splice rope, was suddenly struck with an idea. "It's just one strand after another, isn't it dad?" "Yes, just one strand after another that makes the rope that holds the ship. It's the way most things are accomplished, boy, when you come to think of it."

A cold wind blew around the fish shed back of the wharves. Other men were busy, too, tying snood-knots on trawls, hoping a good day would come for fishing tomorrow.

Luke walked away and up the hill. Christmas coming in a week! He knew his father and mother had been busy planning something for his happiness then. But what had he done? Nothing at all. He stood stock still, his thoughts all mixed up in a queer way, with the strands of rope that made the line, the hundreds of snood-knots the fishermen were tying. "Just one thing done, and then another to make the whole," he reflected.

Then, walking slowly again he seemed to see two one-dollar bills folded away in his pocket-book. And trailing back from the money a row of different pictures of himself, working hard to earn those two dollars. Planting seed potatoes in the spring, hoeing them, weeding in the hot sun, even watering his own plot when the weather was dry. Then, in the fall digging them up. Selling them . . . for two dollars. One bit of work after another. What next? He took more steps. Money was earned by the work of one person to buy something which was the work of another. Luke smiled. He knew "what next," very well indeed.

So, on Christmas morning, though Luke was delighted with his own gifts, he had an almost dizzy pleasure in watching his father and mother unwrap a pair of bedroom slippers and an apron he had given them. "My potato money!" he shrieked. "I got it by doing one thing after another . . . just the way the rope grows, strand after strand."

Luke's father looked puzzled, but his mother kissed him and said "Merry Christmas, dear!"

The Mistletoe Hunt

By FRANCES GRINSTEAD

"By-O Baby Bunting,
Daddy's gone a-hunting"

When the mothers of young children in the east Oklahoma countryside sing this nursery song to their little ones they may out of loyalty to Mother Goose add the next two lines:

"For to find a rabbit skin,
To wrap the Baby Bunting in."

But that isn't exactly what daddy does down there. When it comes the time of year that the baby needs warmer covering, daddy takes his gun and goes out to shoot down mistletoe! This he sells for the Christmas trade and buys Baby Bunting a different kind of raiment. For mistletoe, with its well-known holiday meaning, grows in abundance there and is always found high among the bare winter branches of the native elm. Little boys climb for it, of course, but the quickest way to gather it for commercial use is to shoot it down.

"Open season" for mistletoe hunting begins about the last of November and the demand increases steadily until Christmas. Truck loads of the green sprigs with their wax-white berries are driven to the cities of the north for the holiday trade. As the mistletoe is not always uniformly ripe at the time it is wanted, much "hunting" is required to find sprigs whose berries are at a stage to suit the demands of the buyers. At such times the roadsides may be strewn with discarded mistletoe, for the condition of the berries cannot be seen until the sprig has been shot down. But such waste is not lamented, for mistletoe is a parasite that reappears in abundance each year, however ruthlessly it may be treated.

Asylum, Pennsylvania Town

The town of Asylum, in Bradford county, Pa., is 10 miles southeast of Towanda. In 1793, when the revolution in France was raging, Col. Hollenbach was employed by the Governor of Pennsylvania to procure a place of retreat for the royal family at some secluded spot on the Susquehanna, and he purchased Asylum township, to which place came the French colony. The royal family never came for the reason that they lost their heads. So wrote H. C. Bradford in 1891.

Land Source of Power

The gentry of the Middle Ages thought little of trade and business, but were obsessed with the desire for land. Land to them was the source of power and wealth, for which men strove, and this was the explanation of the castles—these safeguarded the land.

Christmas in the Air

By Martha B. Thomas

OLD MR. SADDLER had the most unique and delightful ideas. Unquestionably he was the happiest man in town, though he hadn't much money, and lived in quite a modest way, in quite the smallest house. People loved to drop in for a chat. Old men came for a smoke by his fireside. Women brought their children to spend the afternoon when they were busy. Mr. Saddler welcomed everyone as if he were a king in a palace.

One snowy day when every footstep creaked underfoot, and the whole world looked buried under white wool, several people on their way here and there dropped in to see Mr. Saddler. A bright fire crackled on the hearth. A green wreath hung above the mantelpiece. There was a distinct smell of a rich pudding having been recently cooked.

"This place has more Christmas about it," declared one guest, "than any place I've seen. How do you do it? After all, there's only one green wreath."

"Well, I hardly know how to tell you," said the host. "I guess it's just that I feel Christmassy . . . and maybe it sort of fills the room like steam from a pudding. I know," he smiled at them, "you think me peculiar at times, but it's what goes on in your heart that makes the outside you live in, pleasant. And here's another thing. Laugh if you like, I shan't mind. I like to think that all the happy chimes of church bells at Christmas keep traveling around the world until it's time to ring them again. Why not? And the fine songs and anthems and all the joyous laughter of children. We speak of planets being so many 'light-years' away from the earth . . . and sound taking thus and thus a time to reach a certain place. Well then," he smiled at them," I guess I just sort of hear those things. Maybe I have a good receiving-set in my head. And perhaps I sort of," he waved a hand around, "broadcast my happiness here in this room."

The guests nodded. "Maybe you do," they said, "Anyhow we feel chock full of Christmas."

SURRENDER yourself to the Spirit of Christmas! Let its joy thrill you—let its peace steal softly across your heart! Open your ears to the magic of its message—open your eyes to the miracles it accomplishes!

Read again Dickens' Christmas Carol, the best known and most inspiring of all the Christmas stories. And don't feel ashamed, if at the end, as Tiny Tim whispers, "God bless us, every one," you find your own eyes wet with tears.

Open the Book of Books, and let Luke tell you about that first Christmas—of the long journey to Bethlehem, of the birth in the humble manger, of the shepherds keeping watch over their flocks. Listen to the heavenly music that was heard upon the hills, to the thrilling words of the angel, "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." Bow your head and give thanks for the Prince of Peace who came, saying with the angels, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Let Matthew tell you of the coming of the Wise Men from the East, with their gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh, which they presented to the Christ Child.

Then, with the Spirit of Christmas in your heart, go forth and help make Christmas a brighter and a happier day for others!

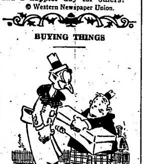
BUYING THINGS



Tom—Has your wife done all her Christmas shopping yet?

Dick—Oh, yes; last month. Now she's started to buy a few things.

Why Not Be Polite?

Jud Tunkins says politeness compels you to wish a man Merry Christmas even in cases where you may not honestly believe he deserves it.

VILLAGE TREASURER'S ANNUAL STATEMENT
For the year ending November 15th, 1936

Filed this 8th day of Dec., 1936.

ARTHUR HANSON,
Village Treasurer.

State of Minnesota,
County of Pennington,
Village of St. Hilaire—ss.

I, Arthur Hanson, Village Treasurer, hereby certify that the within is a true statement of all the moneys received by me into the Village Treasury of said Village and the source from which the same were received and their respective amounts, and also the amounts paid out by me and the purposes for which paid during the year ending Nov. 15, 1936.

Given under my hand this 8th day of Dec., 1936.

ARTHUR HANSON,
Village Treasurer.

System of Subdividing Public Lands Very Old

The system of subdividing public lands, whereby we can describe any parcel of land by the number of its section, township or range dates back to the very dawn of our country's existence as a nation. It was embodied in a report adopted by the Tenth Continental congress in 1785, states a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Thomas Jefferson was the chairman of the committee to whom the subject had been previously referred, and there is little doubt that we owe the main features of the plan to his brilliant and practical genius. There were some minor changes of it, however, before its adoption. He divided the land into divisions, called "hundreds," which were to be ten miles square, each of them to be subdivided into plots one mile square, numbered from 1 to 100.

When the report was before Congress an amendment was offered by James Monroe reducing the principal divisions to six miles square, to be called "townships," each township to be subdivided into sections one mile square, containing 640 acres. This amendment was adopted, but the general plan of survey remained as it had been originally introduced, and in the same form is still in use.

Macaroni Club Figured in "Yankee Doodle" Song

The word "macaroni" in the song, "Yankee Doodle" is more than merely nonsense. It is a remnant of eighteenth century English slang, declares a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

About 1772 a group of young Englishmen of wealth and leisure, most of whom had spent considerable time on the continent and particularly in Italy, formed a fashionable organization which they called the Macaroni club. The name was taken from the fact that as one of their peculiarities or individualities, they served macaroni at the club dinners. The dish was then little known in England, and was practically introduced in that country by the Macaroni club.

The Macaronis also sought for singularity in dress and manners. They wore immense knots of artificial hair, projecting behind very small cocked hats; carried walking sticks adorned with tassels of bright colors, and affected very tight jackets and knee breeches. "Macaroni" soon came to be a derisive term for an effete man, but in its earliest popular use it had something of the suggestion of such expressions as "ritzy" and "high hat."

Kelley's Island

Kelley's Island, in Lake Erie, known originally as Cunningham's Island, was a favorite resort of early races of men, a fact which is revealed by the remains of mounds, burial places and implements. Here, also, is the famous "Inscription Rock," which scientists have attributed to the Erie or Cat tribe, annihilated in a wholesale slaughter by the Iroquois in 1655. "Inscription Rock" lies on the south shore of the island. Its greatest length is 32 feet, its breadth 21, and its height about eleven. It is of the same stratification as the island, its top smoothed by glacial action. Upon this surface are cut figures and devices in the pictographic characters of the Indian. The human figures, pipe-smoking groups and other symbols are believed to represent various episodes in the long history of the Eries, the Wyandots, and the eventually triumphant Iroquois.

Discovery

ON THE tenth day Lieutenant Annister sighted the snow-capped peaks looming high above the southernmost limits of the Ice Barrier. Two days later he was able to see the vertical cliffs slashing their black and scarlet flanks across the white wilderness of Antarctic snow. It would take three or four days more to reach Captain Lampson's stricken party at the foot of Mawson's Glacier.

Annister, in a steady lope behind the skimming sledge, cracked his long whip at the Malemute leader and swore. The ninety-mile gale tore the oath from his lips and shredded it into a sullen echo behind him.

For years Captain Lampson had been basking in the sunlight of public adoration. Adulation from the mobs, ovations from the press, medals from congress! To him had gone the credit for being the first explorer to cross Antarctica from sea to sea. Yes, and he was the discoverer of the Luber range, the Lampson inlet, the—Bah! A grandstand player, that's what he was! And it was typical of the American populace to make a hero out of a handsome stripling whose courage and resourcefulness had never been put to the test.

Day after day Annister plodded southward. He came at last to a weird region of crevasses and tumbled ice blocks. Presently he found the portable hut Lampson had erected before leading his expedition up to the Polar Plateau.

Annister halted his team at the door, his wind-chapped forehead puckering in a frown of puzzlement at the snow heaped in front of it. He kicked the snow away from the entrance, pushed the door inward, and stood for a moment squinting at the interior darkness. He went in then, pulling the door shut behind him.

When his eyes were adjusted to the gloom he saw two forms, encased in sleeping bags, lying inert upon the floor. In a corner he saw a gaunt-faced, bewhiskered man rise weakly before a Primus stove. It was Lampson.

A sneer sprang to Annister's frost-cracked lips, but it died unuttered . . . The dull misery and grief in the young captain's eyes was terrible to see. He was staring idiotically at the lieutenant. After a moment his lips began to move, soundlessly. Then, when his voice came, it was faint and hollow, as if he were muttering to himself, "Steepton—made—it?"

Annister wet his lips with his tongue. He found himself suddenly drained of anger, bitterness, resentment.

His glance wandered to the still figures on the floor. Divination came like a knife thrust then. Dralmer and Kent were dead! They'd been dead for days, possibly for weeks. Lampson, too, was dead—dead save for the fact that he still stood upon his feet!

"Dralmer and Kent?" asked Annister, turning. "What happened?"

The young captain pivoted slowly until he was looking at the motionless figures. "On the Plateau," he murmured. "Dralmer fell—in a crevasse. Concussion. Kent lost—both feet—with frost bite. Both—died. But—I—sent—Steepton—home—to the—base." He still spoke in a curiously dead voice, like one uttering his thoughts aloud.

Annister's mouth dropped open. He stared at the younger man incredulously. Lampson had not sent for aid! He had only "sent Steepton home." Good God! There had been food and dogs enough to get one man through—and Lampson had chosen to die with the two he couldn't save!

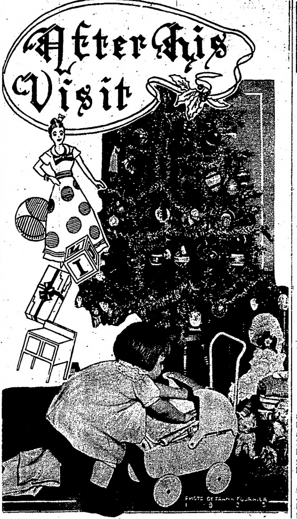
Annister's hard face softened, and he felt his heart churn within him. During countless hours the young captain had waited for death to end his suffering and loneliness. Day after day, night after night he had listened to the screaming wind, endured the awful silences.

He was regarding Annister fixedly, yet with a vacant stare that seemed to have no definite focus. Impulsively Annister went to him, threw his arm about the other's waist. Under the deceptive furs he felt the sword thinness of Lampson's body.

Not until then did the glaze go from the captain's eyes. His upper lip twitched, and a flicker of awareness, of recognition, passed across his face. He raised a thin hand, placed it exploringly upon Annister's arm. The fingers tightened weakly, experimentally, before he whispered: "Annister—Tom? Here?" He slumped in the lieutenant's arms.

With a muttered growl of pity Annister lowered him to the floor. "You're damned right, I'm here!" He turned and started for the door. He'd have to get some fire and food—he stopped suddenly and stared at a map lying outspread upon the table. A new mountain range had been marked upon it—and in small blue letters were printed the words: "The Annister Mountains."

The lieutenant wheeled slowly and looked at the unconscious form of Captain Lampson. "A new discovery, eh? Thanks, old man." He wagged his head. "But it's nothing compared to what I've discovered!"



The Vanquished

MY GRANDFATHER HOXIE fought with the Union army in the Civil war, and he was a member of the G. A. R. But you didn't have to see him in his uniform to know that, for he was always killing Confederate soldiers—at the dinner table, in the fields, or at the Sunday picnics we used to attend. Maybe he would start with Gettysburg, or at Lexington. It didn't matter much, just so he got started!

We moved into town right opposite the old Jennings place. Dad Jennings, who liked his mint juleps and fried chicken, had fought with the Confederate army, and he was just as loud in his praise of Robert E. Lee as my grandfather was of General Grant. The day they first met they squared off like a couple of bantam roosters, sizing each other up with the cold-eyed appraisal of prizefighters waiting for the bell.

One afternoon I heard my grandfather say, "Is that so! Well, you don't know what you're talking about." And from then on they would meet each other, either in the Jennings yard or in ours, and violent arguments ensued. My grandfather's voice was high-pitched when he grew excited and from my room I could tell who was winning the argument. Dad Jennings would let my grandfather talk, then suddenly he would say, "Now wait just a minit. You said 'while ago—" and when grandfather grew angry he'd start stuttering.

Then one day Dad Jennings struck my grandfather in the face with his gnarled fist and knocked him down. He was in bed for three days.

Meanwhile precautions were taken to prevent further hostilities of a physical nature. An iron fence was erected around the house and front yard. Everyone but grandfather was provided with a key to the front gate, and we were all instructed to lock the gate when we came in or went out.

The fence became the talk of the town. The local paper even wrote it up. "Civil War Still Being Fought," one headline ran.

The first time the two old veterans met after the fisticuffs was on Memorial day. It was of course a day of considerable importance in their lives. Columns were lined up facing each other—one line of gray and one of blue—to form a lane for the mayor and distinguished guests. For just a moment I saw my grandfather's eyes on his neighbor, and they were like slits of icy blue. But nothing happened, fortunately, to mar the day.

After the ceremony at the cemetery was over and we had returned home, I saw my grandfather out at the pickets, looking across the street at his neighbor who was busily watering his roses.

After a while I manged to go out without remembering to lock the gate. In half an hour I came back, but my grandfather was not in sight. Neither was Mr. Jennings.

A couple of hours passed, and finally some one missed grandfather.

"Why," exclaimed my mother, suddenly, in great alarm, "the gate is open. Oh, do hurry across the street and see if he's all right!"

I assured her I would find him immediately. But there was no one about the Jennings yard. I knocked on the door and got no answer. Then I heard voices.

"If it warn't for this here uniform," I heard my grandfather say. Then Dad Jennings interrupted with, "Comrade, it is a day of peace and brotherly love—" but the street noises prevented my hearing more. Careful lest my footsteps be heard on the concrete walk, I tiptoed down the cellar steps and stood in the shadows listening and watching.

At a table sat my grandfather, a glass in front of him, and on the opposite side sat Dad Jennings, a glass in his hand. They were drinking mint juleps. My grandfather had on the gray uniform, which fitted him quite well, while Mr. Jennings wore the blue.

"Anyway," my grandfather was saying, "we give you a good lickin' at Gettysburg."

"So you did," Mr. Jennings said, "so you did. A d—d good licking." He leaned back, the better to survey the neatly creased trousers of the blue uniform he was wearing. He then said solemnly:

"What desecration, Comrade. What if General Lee could see me now!"

"Lee?" my grandfather said. "Who was he? . . . Oh, yes—Lee, to be sure. Surrendered to Grant. I remember him now."

"I believe he did," Dad Jennings said. "Now there was a great soldier—Grant."

"You said it," my grandfather chirped. "You said it, Comrade. Supposin' Grant saw me in this Confederate get-up! Or Lincoln. Why, I'd be court-martialed — that's what!"

I left them then and went back across the street. Left them to their dimming memories and mint juleps—and insults.

Then, suddenly, I remembered a thing I had heard Mr. Jennings say to my grandfather one afternoon during one of their heated verbal tilts.

"You Yankees never knew when you were licked."

Jain Order of Celibacy

The Jain order of celibacy, both for men and women, is one of the most austere in the world. Members eat only such food as is guaranteed not to have involved any killing, even going to the extreme of abstaining from boiled water because it involves the killing of microbes. There have been instances of rich Jains who paid men to permit themselves to be bitten by bugs and other insects so that the insects might not die of starvation.

Obedience to the Right

One way to know is to obey. Even our primary conceptions of moral duty depend for their vigor and clearness upon our practical attitude toward duty. Nothing so clears them as doing what we know to be right and eschewing what we know to be wrong. That brings us to a solidity and simplicity of convictions which we can reach neither by observing men's experience nor by logical reasonings. It keeps us in touch with reality, and dissipates the vapors which otherwise becloud the mind. Other processes may bring us to conclusions which we cannot deny, but which have no power over our lives; this gives us conclusions which act upon us as motives and helps to farther right action. For, as George Eliot says, "the finest reward of doing right is the power to go forward to right action which is more difficult."

New Year's Resolution

HERE'S a New Year's resolution
Any one can make and keep;
It will help one's constitution,
And enable one to sleep.

"I will try to keep from fretting
When I cannot see the sun;
I will try to keep from getting Into quarrels I may shun.

"I will try to keep from grieving
Over troubles that are past;
I will try to keep believing
Things will all come right at last.

"I will try to keep from sighing
When I ought to smile, instead;
I will try to keep on trying
To deserve to get ahead."

New Year Cavalier

by Helen Gaisford Waterman

FENTON DUMONT was bored with the party. All right welcoming in the New Year so smugly for people like these—but he was an adventurer, a cavalier, and the formal drawing room, the lovely ladies so ready to smile upon him, the classical music, the slow, pompous talk of the men suffocated him. He stepped to the balcony.

It had stopped snowing. In another hour the year would be dead. A grand year. But another would be beginning. He slipped over the balustrade, wound his leg around a pillar, and slid down to meet it. To the east, far away, the year was already new, and so he set off in that direction.

He was almost half way across the bridge before he noticed the girl, but then he strode quickly to her side. "Please don't," he said gently. She started. "I should only have to jump in after you, and can't you imagine how cold I'd be?" he ended, and shivered with clown-like intensity. "I might even catch my death," he continued lightly, but the girl looked back to the river, and he realized his error. "You may want to die," he said earnestly, "but I don't. Please!"

"Then leave me be," she answered. Her voice was soft and musical, but passionately desperate.

He gathered her in his arms and kissed her. She struggled fiercely. He kissed her again, and again, pinning her arms to her sides with his strong clasp. And suddenly she went limp in his arms, and cried against his shoulder. He took off his overcoat and wrapped it around her, for she was shivering. "Why did you come off without your coat and hat?" he chided, and stroked her soft hair.

Her Voice Was Soft and Musical, But Passionately Desperate.

Behind him, bells and whistles proclaimed another year. "Happy New Year, lassie," he said gayly.

She dried her eyes. "I'm being a fool," she apologized.

"Not at all," he answered, gallantly. "Methinks I behold a restaurant across the bridge. How about some coffee?"

She let him lead her, and he found a corner table. When their order had been placed, he turned to her.

"Why should you love a man like that?"

She looked up quickly, studying him. "How did you know?"

"Why else should a lovely girl like you be spending New Year's eve that way? You should be dancing—"

She smiled. "I don't know. It seemed terribly important half an hour ago. But I'm all right now. It doesn't matter any more."

"Off with the old," he quoted, "on with the new. This is the season for lovers as well as years. The old is off?"

"Yes."

He took her hand. "The new—would like very much—to be on." His gaze caught and held hers. "May I take you home now?"

She nodded her thanks. Outside, it was snowing again, but they scarcely noticed. At her door, he kissed her, and this time she did not resist. "On with the new," she murmured gently.

"That's O.K. this time," he answered, "but I won't let it happen next New Year's."

The "Glorified Christmas Pudding"

By Alice B. Palmer

A SOFT carpet of fresh snow sparkled in the sun and the whole of Christmas was in the room as Lois opened her eyes, yawned contentedly and then suddenly remembered the great conquest of the day—"the Christmas Pudding!"

"Oh Em," she shouted, radiant with joy and keen with excitement. "Wake up! Wake up! It's Christmas!"

"What's that?" murmured Em, sleepily. "Oh yes, hurrah for the fun! Is the pudding done?"

Every year, as far back as Lois and Em could remember, they had looked forward with youthful anticipation to the Glorified Christmas Pudding. 'Twas a Swedish rice delicacy, in which an almond had always been concealed. Tradition had proclaimed that the lucky person who came upon the holiday nut in his Christmas pudding was to be the first one married. What fun it had been through the year.

"Well, girls," spoke mother, beaming with the holiday spirit, "who is to get the almond in the Christmas pudding? This is leap year, you know."

Lois and Em giggled, knowingly, exchanging winks, as both were secretely engaged to be married.

Soon mother was busily engaged in the dishing up of this delicious pudding. It was being formed into cone-shaped mounds, resembling Christmas snow.

All eyes were now focused expectantly upon the rich creamy mountains of rice and they could scarcely wait until they dipped their spoons into its foamy depths. Lu was blinking at Em and carefully chewing each individual rice kernel, so as not to miss the almond. Em was slyly winking at mother and smiling confidently. Father was too pleased for words as he calmly viewed the whole situation with satisfied enthusiasm, secretly hoping that he would not come upon the almond.

Where on earth was the Christmas almond? All had quite finished with no sign of the coveted nut. A strange silence pervaded, coupled with a surprised sense of dismay and disappointment.

"Julia," called mother, to the girl in the kitchen, "have you eaten your rice pudding yet?"

"Yes, Mrs. Allen," promptly responded Julia.

"What is the matter, my dear, you look so upset?"

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Allen, but I almost broke my tooth on a strange nut I found in the pudding."

A louder roar of laughter than was ever heard before, permeated the holiday atmosphere as one by one they tried to explain the Christmas almond to Julia. As the laughter ended, the "Glorified Christmas Pudding" once more faded away into tradition.

Arkansas Twenty-Fifth State; Settled in 1686

By act of congress, signed by President Andrew Jackson on June 15, 1836, Arkansas became the 25th of the sovereign states.

Hernando de Soto, the tireless Spanish explorer, was the first white man to place foot upon the soil of what afterward became Arkansas. In 1541, notes a writer in the Washington Star, more than half a century before the founding of Jamestown, New Amsterdam and Plymouth, he landed at a point near what is now Helena, on the banks of the Mississippi river, and remained there about one year, describing the country as "a fair and pleasant land."

The French explorers, Marquette and Joliet, coming southward from Canada, saw this country when the civilization of the Atlantic seaboard was still in its infancy. The territory was claimed for France by La Salle, who took possession of all the country "watered by the Mississippi and its tributaries."

The first settlement was made by Lieut. Henri de Tonti, a follower of La Salle, in 1686, at the juncture of the Arkansas and Mississippi rivers. Later, in 1763, France ceded the territory to Spain, in whose possession it remained for 37 years. In 1800 it was repossessed by Napoleon Bonaparte through a secret treaty with Spain. Three years later it passed into the possession of the United States under the purchase of the Louisiana Territory by Thomas Jefferson.

Qualifications Needed for Rhodes Scholarship

The British diamond king and colonizer and administrator in South Africa, Cecil John Rhodes, who left the bulk of his large fortune in trust to support German, American and British students at Oxford University, his alma mater, specified the following general qualifications required of the applicants:

Scholarship counts for 30 per cent, character for 30, success and interest in athletics and manly outdoor sports for 20, and interest in one's fellows and instincts for leadership, 20.

The candidate must be an unmarried male citizen of the country where he resides, between the ages of 19 and 25, and must have completed at least two years of work in a recognized degree-granting institution of higher learning.

The methods of selection are subject to revision. The Rhodes Trust, which has headquarters in London, leaves the nomination of scholars to local committees, whose action is subject to ratification by the trustees. No written examinations are held, the applicants being judged by their records, by references from persons who know them and by the showing made at a personal interview with the selection committee.

Designed Miss Liberty

Frederic Auguste Bartholdi, the sculptor who designed the figure of Miss Liberty of the Statue of Liberty and whose skill wrought it, died on October 4, 1904. He was born in the city of Colmar on Aril 2, 1834. On the hundredth anniversary of his birth his native city staged a great celebration in his honor. In Colmar are several examples of his works include the great red stone Lion of Belfort, in the French town of that name mear the Swiss border; a statue of Lafayette in Union square, New York city, and a group statue of Washington and Lafayette in Paris. The last-named work of art was unveiled nine years before Bartholdi's death.

Kidnaping of Chiang Kai-shek May Bring on Warfare

WAR clouds again gathered over the Far East when Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, dictator of of China, was kidnaped at Sianfu, Shensi province, by troops commanded by Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, former war lord of Manchuria. The mutinous soldiers demanded immediate declaration of war against Japan; a pledge from the Nanking government to recover all lost territory, including Manchuria, and reorganization of the Chinese Nationalist party, the Kuomintang, so that Chinese communists might be admitted to membership.

Gen. Chiang Kai-shek

Japan professed to believe that Chang's action was promoted by Russia, and officials in Tokyo said forceful steps by Japan might be necessary. The naval command directed its China squadrons to be on guard lest a Chinese civil war result.

Maj. Gen Kita, Japanese military attache at Shanghai, declared that Marshal Chang's troops had taken a frank stand for communism, which compels Japan "to make a firm and determined stand from the viewpoint of Japan's national defense."

The soviet news agency Tass in Moscow issued an official denial of reports that Russia had conspired in the Chinese crisis, but diplomats in the Far East were of opinion that Moscow would intervene if war should break out between China and Japan. Japanese action would be based on the reported setting up of an independent government at Sianfu by Marshal Chang with the support of soviet Russia.

There were reports that Chiang Kai-shek had been killed by his captors, but Marshal Chang telegraphed Acting Premier Kung: "I have cherished an affectionate regard for the generalissimo for eight years. I assume full responsibility for his safety."

Peace Proposal Is Signed by American Republics

REPRESENTATIVES of the 21 American republics gathered in the conference at Buenos Aires all signed two measures designed to maintain peace, security and nonintervention in the Western world. These projects are:

A plan for maintenance of peace and security which provides for consultation in the event of war within the American continents or war abroad which menaces American peace.

A reiteration of the resolution of the 1933 Pan-American conference, for nonintervention by one nation in another's affairs. This carried also a Mexican amendment for consultation if intervention appears necessary.

Proposed Law to Mobilize Industry in War Time

WITH the approval of Secretary of War Woodring and Secretary of the Navy Swanson a bill has been drafted for the mobilization of industry in war time. It would confer upon the President power to draft industrial management, commandeer manufacturing plants, fix prices, ration the distribution of commodities, and regulate or close exchanges.

This plan is a revision of the program for industrial mobilization submitted by the War department to the war policies commission in 1931. It does not take into consideration the tax bill to "take the profits out of war" which was put through the house last session, but it is recommended by the War and Navy departments that tax provisions be not so drastic as to "hinder, hamper or destroy the more important mission of producing munitions as required in war."

Fair Competition Act Is Asked by Berry's Council

SOMETHING very like the old NRA is the plan for control over the management of business favored by the council for industrial progress sponsored by Industrial Coordinator George L. Berry. The council, not very well attended by employer representatives, approved the report of a committee asking enactment of a general "fair competition act" prohibiting business from operation if it did not follow government edicts regarding price, advertising, wage, and hour standards or other conditions laid down.

A new administrative body would be empowered to investigate and prosecute violations of the act. This same agency would set up minimum wages, maximum hours and fair trade practices for any industry or trade.

The hearing of complaints would be before a sort of industrial supreme court vested with equity powers, including the power of issuing permanent and temporary injunctions.

American Millionaires in 1934 Numbered Only 33

ACCORDING to an income tax analysis given out by the bureau of internal revenue, thirty-three Americans received incomes in excess of one million dollars during 1934, or a decrease of seventeen millionaires from the year before.

This group of 33 millionaires enjoyed an income of $57,775,000, but they were forced to pour $32,211,000 into the coffers of the United States treasury. They paid a tax of 59 per cent on their surtax net income.

One lone individual in the United States had an income of more than 5 million dollars for 1934. The internal revenue tables showed that this person is a resident of New York, but the identity is hidden, for no names are named in this report.

President's Son Probably Will Be His Secretary

IT IS believed that James Roosevelt, oldest son of the President, who has been with him on the South American tour, will serve as one of his father's secretaries and his general aid, without salary and maybe without title.

The President is said to feel he must have at his side some one who knows him intimately and who can perform many of the confidential little errands which were performed by Mr. Howe and Gus Generich, both now dead.

Plan to End Electoral College System

MEMBERS of the electoral college met in the capitals of their respective states and went through the empty formality of casting their votes for Presidential candidates — 523 for Franklin D. Roosevelt and 8 for Alf M. Landon. About the same time it was announced in Washington that a move to abolish the antiquated electoral college system had been started and would have the approval of many members of both houses of congress.

Senator Norris

Leaders of this plan are Senator George W. Norris, Independent, of Nebraska, and Representative Clarence Lea, Democrat, of California, both of whom have previously advocated a constitutional amendment making the change, substituting a system whereby state electoral votes would be divided among presidential candidates on the basis of their relative popular vote strength in the state.

Under the present system President Roosevelt, polling approximately 27,750,000 votes, received 523 electoral votes. Governor Landon, polling approximately 16,680,000 votes received 8 votes. Each Roosevelt electoral vote represents the desires of 53,000 voters. Each Landon vote represents the wishes of 2,085,000 voters.

Under the proposed amendment the electoral votes in the last election would have been divided: Roosevelt, 322; Landon, 194; others, 15.

"Even disregarding the last election, in the average election of the last sixty years over 45 per cent of the voters of the country, being all those who voted for minority candidates in all the states, have been disregarded in computing the final results," said Representative Lea. "Not only are the minority votes disregarded but the electoral votes represented by them are cast for their opponents."

Britain Defaults Again but Hints at Parley

GREAT BRITAIN again defaults on its war debt to the United States, but intimates it would like to re-open negotiations for reduction of the debt. This time the British government does not state it has found no new reason to warrant a resumption of payments. All the other debtor nations also defaulted except Finland, which as usual proudly paid the installment due.

Mediation in Spanish War Is Proposed

FRANCE and Great Britain united in an invitation to Germany, Italy, Russia and Portugal to join them in an effort to end the Spanish war by mediation.

The announcement of the plan came on the eve of the meeting of the League of Nations council, summoned to Geneva to consider the Madrid-Valencia government's appeal against Germany and Italy because of their recognition of the Fascist rebel junta. It is the hope of France and Britain that the Spanish people will be permitted to decide by ballot whether they shall have a Fascist or a Socialist government

Better Farm Program Promised by Wallace

MEMBERS of the American Farm Bureau federation, assembled in Pasadena, Calif., were told by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace that the government would provide a better farm program than the AAA; but he also said the farmer must be willing to accept "small increases in the imports of certain agricultural products."

"In the cause of peace," he said, "the farmers of the United States must learn to say 'yes' as often as possible to agricultural imports from Pan-America, while at the same time reserving the right to say 'no' when any vital branch of agriculture is likely to be menaced by too great imports."

The federation conferred upon Mr. Wallace its highest honor, the award for distinguished service to agriculture.

Edward Abdicates and George Is the King

LOVE and the British constitution are the winners in the great contest that has stirred the vast empire to its furthest borders. Edward VIII, steadfast in his determination to make Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson his wife, abdicated as king of Great Britain and emperor of India, and his brother, the duke of York, reigns in his stead as George VI.

George VI

Edward's fateful decision was communicated to the house of commons by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin. Haggard and deeply moved, the man who has borne the brunt of the struggle on behalf of the cabinet and parliament handed the speaker the royal message and the speaker read it to the half stunned members. This is what Edward said:

"Realizing as I do the gravity of this step I can only hope that I shall have the understanding of my peoples in the decision I have taken and the reasons which have led me to take it.

"I conceive that I am not overlooking the duty that rests on me to place in the forefront the public interest when I declare that I am conscious that I can no longer discharge this heavy task with efficiency or with satisfaction to myself.

"I have accordingly this morning executed an instrument of abdication in the terms following:

" 'I, Edward VIII of Great Britain, Ireland, the British dominions beyond the seas, king, emperor of India, do hereby declare my irrevocable determination to renounce the throne for myself and my descendants. My desire is that effect should be given to this instrument of abdication immediately.

" 'In token thereof I have hereunto set my hand this 10th day of December, 1936, in the presence of the witnesses whose signatures are subscribed.' "

There followed a request that the accession of his brother to the throne be expedited, and accordingly enabling legislation effecting the abdication and the accession of the new king was promptly introduced and put through the house of commons and the house of lords.

The new king was proclaimed with the traditional ceremony following an assembly of the accession council made up of privy councilors and other distinguished persons.

That evening the ex-king went on the air to broadcast a message of farewell to the half billion people who had been his subjects.

King George's first official act was to make his brother Edward duke of Windsor. The entourage of the abdicated monarch seem to prefer to call him Prince Edward. For the present he is in seclusion at the castle of Baron Eugene Rothschild not far from Vienna.

In most questionable taste was a radio broadcast by the archbishop of Canterbury after the affair was all over. The primate scored Edward for seeking his private happiness "in a manner inconsistent with Christian principles of marriage and within a social circle whose standards and ways of life are alien to all the best instincts and traditions of his people."

Parliaments of all the British dominions passed legislation ratifying the abdication of Edward and the accession of George. But the Irish Free State, as had been expected, adopted measures almost eliminating the last vestiges of its adherence to the empire. The dail eireann erased the name of the British king from the Irish constitution, abolished the office of governor general, the king's representative, and described limited functions for George VI of England in the foreign affairs of the Free State.

Germany Adds New Ship to Growing Navy

WITH the launching of the Gneisenau, her second 26,000-ton battleship, Germany moved another step toward her goal of a navy large enough to bottle up the Russian fleet.

Berlin correspondents believe the new German fleet will have reached 420,000 tons by 1942. It will possess no less than five 35,000-ton battleships, to which can be added two 26,000-ton battleships, three existing 1,000-ton pocket battleships and fourteen light and heavy cruisers, including three more 10,000-ton boats.

Making a Choice—

◆ Independence and Loneliness or Dependence With Ties of Affection

TO MOST persons there comes sometime in their lives the opportunity for a choice between independence and loneliness or ties and affection. The wise mature person thinks long before choosing the former above the latter. There are many young people, however, who feel so sure of themselves and their ability to "get along all right" that they are irked by the least restraint. They throw it off, only to discover later in life that affection is worth the curtailing restraint and dependence entailed. Companionship has been their portion up to the time of their decision that dependence is what they must have, at any cost. They have no idea of what loneliness means.

Separation.

The adult who is separated from his family because of distance, domestic estrangement, or who has outlived the other members, realizes to the full what it means to be alone. It is when estrangement causes the separation that there are times when the loneness is bearable or agreeable, but these times are interrupted by hours when the feeling of loneliness creeps over him (or her), and companionship, though with but a small degree of affection, is craved.

Individuality.

Human nature is so constituted that people cannot live in the same atmosphere and always see eye to eye. There is wisdom in this plan. Individuality would be quelled if what any person thought (however beloved) could always be accepted without dissent by those around him (or her). Nor can actions of even those dear to us, invariably meet with our approval, whether expressed or unexpressed.

It is when we learn to permit personal differences without censure that companionship, in the home or out of it, develops best. Even when children are young, they must be allowed a modicum of such freedom or when older they will long to break away, and if they do then there is loneliness in store for the youth, and sadness left in the home.

Divorce.

Married couples, when they contemplate divorce, have the choice between independence plus loneliness, or dependence, each on the other with affection restored, or remaining less than could be desired. It may be there is incompatability, but it should be remembered that no two persons, married or single, can live together under the same roof and always be congenial. However, this does not signify that at heart affection is gone. Separation means loneliness for one or both of them.

Families.

Within a family there is sure to be some dissension at times—young folk may quarrel and adults dispute. But when these times are over, the ties of affection, the associations that intertwine, and the fabric of their lives so closely woven together, should prove a firm foundation for continued companionship. The door to loneliness should remain barred.

LARSONS ENTERTAIN

Mr. and Mrs. Richard M. Larson entertained at dinner last Sunday the following group of relatives and friends: Mr. and Mrs. Austin Lindholm of Strandquist; Mrs. C. L. Sandberg and son, Robert, of Holt; Mr. and Mrs. John Scholin and family; Mr. and Mrs. Emil Larson, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Mosbeck, Mrs. Lena Hallstrom and Thomas Larson.

RETURN GAME CARDS

Sportsmen of the state are asked to cooperate with the division of game and fish by filling out and returning the postcards received when they purchased their 1936 hunting or trapping licenses.

The reports indicate in what counties the person reported hunting, trapped, or fished; whether ample game and fish were found; how many birds were crippled or lost; and whether or not a dog was used while hunting.

This information will be used by the division in making studies of game conditions in Minnesota.

CHRISTMAS BUCKLES

By Luella B. Lyons

TIMOTHY BROWN knew not a soul in Hartsburg well enough to merit an invitation to a Christmas dinner, for he had opened the little shoe repairing cubby hole in the postoffice building only ten days previous to the holiday. And the little restaurant served no turkey either, for they had probably figured everyone would be eating elsewhere.

Rather blue and unhappy, Timothy slipped back to his workbench, there to get caught up on the avalanche of work that had poured in upon him. The first pair of slippers—yes, he remembered the pale, thin little girl that had brought them in. "My aunt bought them for 25 cents at an auction of second-hand things in the city and sent them to me; but they do need repairing before I can wear them. But I've only 25 cents to my name—could—would you repair them for that amount, Mr. Brown?" Of course, he assured her that it wouldn't cost that—not to her, of the sad and wistful eyes!

"Why, I may be a shoe rebuilder, but if those buckles aren't worth a fortune then I'd better get out of this business," he shouted to the empty little room as he suddenly discovered the winking little buckles were not of the dime store variety.

Luck was with him when he sent a messenger for the poor girl owner of the second-hand slippers, and at the jeweler's home the pair were in luck—the expert in gems told them that the buckles would positively remove the girl out of the pauper class, for they were really worth a fortune.

Happy and merry Christmases may come and go, but Timothy will never be lonely again, for the lucky little girl later said "yes" to Timothy, not out of gratitude but because of love at first sight.

KEEPING TREE FRESH

IF A Christmas tree is set in water when it first comes into the house and is kept in water while it is part of the Christmas decoration, it will remain fresh and green for at least a week longer. Water should be replaced as it evaporates. If the base of a Christmas tree is trimmed with a sharp knife just before it is mounted, the pores will be left open, allowing water to rise in the stem to the living cells which are still trying to provide the tree with food and moisture. Spruce and fir retain their needles longer than most other Christmas trees.

HIGHLANDS MARK SILVER WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Mike Highland entertained a group of relatives and friends at their home last Sunday on the occasion of their silver wedding anniversary. The ceremony which united Charlotte Benson and Mike Highland took place at the home of the bride's parents in St. Hilaire on December 28, 1911, with Rev. M. S. Gjerde officiating, and they have resided here since that time.

For the anniversary gathering Sunday, the Highland home was beautifully decorated in pink and white. In the dining room where a two course dinner was served, with plates laid for forty guests, a large wedding bell was suspended in the center of the room. A huge wedding cake served as centerpiece at the table. Rev. M. L. Dahle was present and brought a congratulatory message to the honor guests. Following his talk the following program was given:

Solo	Corliss Walhood
Piano Solo	Amanda Aarstad,
Vocal solos, "I Love You Truly" and "Silver Threads Among the Gold	Ben Rosendahl
Piano Solo	Carmine Highland

Those present at the festivities were: Mr. and Mrs. John Hoiland, Mr. and Mrs. S. Aarestad and family, Mr. and Mrs. George Aamodt, Mrs. A. M. Olson, Eleanor, Irene, Elsie, Walter and Sam Olson, all of Halstad; Amanda Aarestad and Corliss Walhood of Fargo; Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Moe and family of Thief River Falls; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Collins, Mr. anu Mrs. Ben Rosendahl and family, Mrs. Amelia Dahl, Mrs. Geo. Bakko and Rev. and Mrs. M. L. Dahle of this village. Friends in the community join in extending congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Highland on their silver anniversary.

A. Bilden returned this week after spending a few days at the home of his son, Howard, at Minneapolis. He left again yesterday by car to visit relatives in South Dakota, and will later spend the balance of the winter with his son, Clifford, at Enid, Okla.

RONALD ELROY JOHNSON

Ronald Elroy, eighteen months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elroy Johnson died Christmas Day after being ill a few days of pneumonia. Funeral services were held Monday at Mito church near the home of Mrs. Johnson's parents near Angus, and interment was in the church cemetery. Sympathy of friends is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Johnson in loss of their only child.

INSURANCE ACT GIVEN U. S. O. K.

Formal approval of the Minnesota unemployment insurance act, passed by special session of the legislature last week, has been granted by the federal social security board. The approval permits employers in this state to deduct from their federal tax payments contributions made into the state fund created by this act. Minnesota officials now hope to obtain a treasury order extending the collection date of unemployment insurance taxes from January 31st to March 31 as collection of state taxes would be very difficult before the latter date.

Unemployment Insurance Act Gets Federal O. K.

Formal approval of the Minnesota unemployment insurance act was granted Tuesday by the federal social security board in Washington.

The approval permits Minnesota employers to deduct from their federal tax payments contributions made into the state fund created by the act passed at last week's special session of the legislature.

Minnesota officials now hope to obtain a treasury order extending the collection date of unemployment insurance taxes from January 31 to March 31, since collection of state taxes would be difficult before the latter date.

The Minnesota delegation also sought to obtain a federal grant for $22,225 administrative expenses. The state act affects 325,000 employees.

FARMERS RECOVER BAD CHECK MONEY

Brainerd—Checks totaling $320 have been recovered for Crow Wing farmers to whom they were tendered for payment of stock purchased in the southern part of the county. The checks were issued to the farmers by a Minneapolis man who was buying stock and farm products, paying for the products with checks which came back from the bank with the notations that no funds were there to cover them. After threats of prosecution were made, the money was recovered by the county attorney.

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Adolph Satterberg received a carload of soft coal this week.

Mrs. Ida Anderson left Saturday evening for Minneapolis for a visit at the home of her sister, Mrs. R. Wallen.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Satterberg returned Monday night after having spent the week-end with relatives and friends in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The crew engaged in excavating basements for new houses to be erected on re-settlement lands, is now working on the Riley farm east of the Carpenter place in River Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Seipp and son of Hanley Falls visited with Mr. and Mrs. O. Gunstad here for a short time Saturday. Mr. Seipp is publisher of the Press at Hanley Falls.

Fine Christmas tree programs were given in the Norwegian and Swedish Lutheran churches Christmas Day, and at the Evangelical Mission church Saturday evening.

J. H. Johnson and Vernon Johnson, father and brother of Elroy Johnson, came Monday from Audubon to be present at the funeral for Ronald Elroy, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Elroy Johnson.

After spending Christmas at home, Miss Huldah Gigstad left Saturday to spend a week with relatives in and near the Twin Cities before returning to her work as instructor in the city schools at Moorhead.

An epidemic of influenza or lagrippe seems to be sweeping over this section. Many people in this vicinity have been ill, and more are being reported each day. The illness does not appear to be severe, and by exercising due care, a person gets over an attack in a few days.

Thru courtesy of Postmaster H. L. Holmes, the postoffice was opened Christmas day morning and regular distribution of mail was made. While this served to cut short his holiday somewhat, this kindness of the postmaster is greatly appreciated by patrons of the office.

GROW LEMONS IN OTTER TAIL CO.

Fergus Falls— This winter there'll be lemon pie at the Pressley Lewis' in Otter Tail county. And the lemons will come from their own tree, proving the fact that citrus fruit thrives in Minnesota. Recently they exhibited an unusually large lemon, cut from their lemon tree when it was 19 below zero the night before. This is the first time the tree, which now stands two feet in height, is bearing fruit. As a five inch seedling it was brought three years ago from Michigan. The tree is full of fragrant blossoms, so there may be quite a few lemon pies.

Mrs. Hilda Gigstad and daughter, Evelyn, spent Monday at the Robert Black home at Thief River Falls.

Owing to low stage of water in the river at this point, ice for supplying the creamery is being secured at Red Lake Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. George Gibeau of Sauk Center, visited here Friday at the home of Mrs. Gibeau's sister, Mrs. Myles Jackson.

Miss Grace Dahle leaves today to resume her school teaching work at Rhame, N. D., after having spent the holidays at home.

Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Graham and daughter are expected home today after spending tne holidays with their relatives at Bertha and Wells, Minn.

There is still a supply of community calendars available at the Spectator office. Those who have not received a copy, may have one by calling before supply is exhausted.

Ardell Olson, compositor and lintoype operator in the Journal office at Fertile, spent Christmas and until Sunday evening here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ordean Olson.

Theodore Johnson came Tuesday from Turlock, Calif., accompanying the remains of his father, Swan Johnson, here for burial. Theodore will visit a short time with his brothers and sisters here before returning to California.

MOOSE GETS EVEN WITH MAN BY SMASHING AUTO

Bemidji—The belief that kindness is its own reward which the superintendent of the Headquarters ECW camp in Itasca State park once had, has gone with the winds. A big bull moose, which 700 members of the camp considered their friend after raising him and providing a nice clean pen for him for seven years, showed his gratitude by running into the superintendent's car. Damages totaled $50. Details of the moose's activities after escaping his pen included a sudden dislike for the superintendent, the first person he met, with results that he chased him and heading for the new Chevrolet car scraped his itching horns against it. When the cook came out with a pail of biscuits and tossed them at the moose, he picked up the biscuits as they lit in the snow and when they were gone, he chased the cook into the woods. When someone laid the trail with a pail of potato peelings, the moose followed right back into his pen, where he is perfectly at home. Through the incident he has won a great deal of respect from members of the camp.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Not many hours will elapse after this issue leaves the press before pealing of bells will herald the coming of the New Year. As this time draws near, the publisher takes occasion to thank all subscribers and friends for the numerous courtesies extended during 1936. We also extend to you all our best wishes for the coming year, and express a hope that health, happiness and a fair share of prosperity will be your lot in the New Year.

ICE GLAZE ADDS TO ROAD DANGERS

Fog, snow, sleet and rain, especially in central Minnesota, has covered highways with a glaze of ice that makes auto traffic quite hazardous. In this section a good share of the ice on highways disappeared during thaws last week, but there are still some slippery spots. Sanding operations have helped a lot to alleviate conditions in this part of the state, but it still is wise for motorists to keep their speed somewhat below that usual in summer driving.

SWAN JOHNSON RITES ARE HELD

Funeral services for the late Swan Johnson, pioneer resident of this community, who died December 23rd at his home at Turlock, Calif., were held yesterday at the Erickson & Lund funeral chapel at Thief River Falls. A large number of old friends and former neighbors from this section attended the service to pay their last respects to the deceased. Interment was made beside the resting place of a young son who died many years ago, in the cemetery east of the village. Sympathy of friends thruout this community is extended to the Johnson family in their time of sorrow.

JOHN WESTERLUND DIES

John Westerlund, one of the prominent pioneers of Garvis township west of Plummer, passed away at a Crookston hospital Sunday night. He suffered a stroke the middle of last week and which caused his death. Funeral services will be held at the home today (Thursday) beginning at one o'clock.

He was born in Sweden 67 years ago. He came to this country while a young man and had resided in the Plummer vicinity for over forty years.

He is survived by his wife, three sons and four daughters. Mrs. John Konickson is a sister.

BENSON TAKES OATH MONDAY

Governor-elect Benson will take his oath of office next Monday to succeed Hjalmar Petersen who has been governor since the death of Gov. Floyd Olson. The 1937 session of the Minnesota legislature will convene next week, and Governor Benson will address a joint meeting of both houses on Wednesday.

Theo. Skatrud and family motored down Sunday from Argyle and spent the day visiting at the Harry Winter home.

Woodrow and Glenn Wilson and Tim Lardy, who all attend Dunwoody Institute at Minneapolis, motored up last week to spend Christmas vacations at their respective homes. They plan to return to school the latter part of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Arne Vik left yesterday for a short visit with relatives at Minneapolis before going to Excelsior Springs, Mo., where Mr. Vik will take treatments for rheumatism which has bothered him the past year.

Co. Commissioner Paul Roy was at Thief River Falls this week to preside at a special meeting of the county board called to consider matters in connection with old age assistance applications.

Your Creamery

The creamery, organized and built by the people of this community because they saw a need for co-operative marketing of their farm products, can grow and prosper only in the same proportion as it is patronized by the people of the community. The Triumph Over Death

BUT the death on the cross was not the end of Jesus; in a profound sense it was rather the beginning. The Bible tells us how after three days Jesus arose again from the dead, and his resurrected body was seen in one place after another by certain of those who had followed him on earth.

The first recorded appearance was that seen by Mary Magdalene at Jerusalem on the morning of the Resurrection day. That afternoon Jesus appeared also to Peter, and to two disciples who may have been hiding at a village called Emmaus, not far from Jerusalem. That same evening ten of the disciples were visited by the spirit, and a week later all eleven disciples saw the resurrected Jesus. (The twelfth disciple, Judas Iscariot, had betrayed Jesus to the Romans when they came to arrest him at Gethsemane, and had afterwards hanged himself in shame.) During forty days these various appearances occurred in Jerusalem and in Galilee, and at the end of that time Jesus ascended into heaven with the solemn promise that soon he would return once more to the earth.

And then a new sect of Judaism gradually arose in Jerusalem and Galilee. It was not yet a new religion, for its followers were strict and pious Jews who differed from their co-religionists only in that they believed the Messiah had already come. They had no idea of preaching their beliefs to the Gentiles, for they firmly believed that the only door into their brotherhood was through the profession of Judaism and through the rite of circumcision.

The converts, old and new, lived together as in one family. No doubt they were all very poor, and they shared in common the little which they possessed. They were firmly convinced that in but a little while their Savior would return, and the Kingdom of Heaven be established on earth, and for that reason they would not concern themselves much about earthly things.

The first missionary to preach to people outside the fold of Jewry was a man named Philip, himself one of the Hellenized Jews. Driven from Jerusalem by persecutors of the sect, he went up and down the countryside, spreading the tidings that the Messiah himself had already come and was now waiting to come a second time. The path he followed is traced on the map shown above. He halted in Cesarea, and there he remained some twenty years, no doubt continuing to spread the gospel all the time.

A second missionary to dare to accept Gentiles into the fellowship of the Nazarenes was none other than Peter, who had been chief of the disciples. After the death of Jesus he became virtually the head of the little sect in Jerusalem, and he seems at first to have been opposed to the idea of preaching the gospel to non-Jews. But after some years he went forth to visit the little church which Philip had established, and on this journey he was completely converted to the policies of the Hellenists. At Cesarea he formally accepted into the sect a Roman centurion named Cornelius, baptizing him in the name of Jesus, without first requiring the man to become circumcised.

The act did not pass unnoticed, however. When Peter returned to Jerusalem he had to justify his action to the strict Jews in the sect. He was not deposed from his position at the head of the Jerusalem brotherhood; but many of the members remained bitterly opposed to the new tendency.

Conversion of Saul of Tarsus

THE greatest of all the missionaries was a certain Jew named Saul, or Paul, a native of Tarsus in Asia Minor. He had first come to Jerusalem to study under the rabbis there, for though he was from a Hellenized city, and though his father was a citizen of the Roman empire, Saul was a strict Pharisee.

When first he came to Jerusalem he bitterly opposed the little group of Jews who believed that the Messiah had already come in the person of Jesus, and he joined in the riot against them which ended in the death of one of their chief men, Stephen, and in the flight of many of the others. Even more, he he set out in pursuit of a number of the fugitives when he learned they were spreading their heresy in Damascus. But on the way to that city he saw a vision of Jesus and became himself suddenly converted to the new faith.

When he reached Damascus he joined the fugitives and there began to preach their own doctrine of the risen Christ. For a while he wandered in what is described as "Arabia," but what was probably the desert region to the south of Damascus. From there he returned to Damascus and thence to Jerusalem, where he was accepted into the mother church. Then he returned to Tarsus, his birthplace, and lived in retirement for several years.

Now after the first great riot against the Nazarenes in Jerusalem, the Hellenized element in the sect was scatterd far and wide. Some of its members, as we already know, sought refuge in Damascus; others, like Philip, took to Cesarea; still others found a resting place in the important Syrian city of Antioch. The persecution they had suffered had only intensified their faith in their Messiah, and wherever they settled they continued to preach the gospel of his second coming. At first they preached in the synagogues and only to the Jews, but later they began to preach also to the Gentiles.

When news of this radical development reached Jerusalem there was much concern, for the believers left behind in Jerusalem were all strict Jews. Accordingly they sent one of their number, Barnabas, to investigate the situation in Antioch.

Barnabas was completely won over by what he saw, and instead of returning to Jerusalem with complaints he remained in Antioch to direct the work. In a little while he felt the need for a co-worker, and therefore went over to Tarsus, which was not far away, to persuade Paul to join him. Paul agreed, and from then on for some years the two men worked together in great harmony.

Barnabas and Paul labored together at Antioch for a year, and the organization they developed there became one of the most important in the early history of Christianity.

Paul and Barnabas took with them on this first long journey a relative of the latter whose name was Mark. The three men took ship from Seleucia, about sixteen miles from Antioch, and sailed to the island of Cyprus about sixty miles from the coast. Their first stopping place was at Salamis, where they preached in the synagogue. Then they crossed the island, preaching on the way, until they came to Paphos. Thence they set sail for Attalia in Asia Minor, a distance of about one hundred and seventy miles. Without halting they moved on to Perga, a Greek city about eight miles from the sea, but here their young assistant, Mark, deserted them.

They went on to Derbe, where for a change they were allowed to labor in peace. Thence they might have been able to make their way across the mountains to Tarsus without much difficulty; but they refused. Despite the obvious danger involved, they turned in their tracks and went back to each of the cities they had just visited. And thus they made their way home to Antioch.

The second missionary journey began with an unfortunate disagreement between Paul and Barnabas, and the two men parted company. Barnabas went with Mark to Cyprus, and Paul, taking with him a young man named Silas, or Sylvanus, set out for Asia Minor.

Unfortunately the New Testament has almost no record of the work which Barnabas did. We are informed only of the adventures of Paul, and therefore we are able to follow none other. Starting from Antioch over land, Paul visited the churches of Syria and then pushed on into Asia Minor. He revisited Derbe, Lystra, and the other cities where he and Barnabas had founded little churches on the first journey.

We are not told the names of the new cities which he visited. All we know is that, after wandering for a time in Galatia, Paul and Silas, together with a third companion, Timothy, who had joined them at Lystra, got as far as Troas, the ancient city of Troy. Here they were joined by a fourth missionary, Luke, who later wrote the Third Gospel and the Book of Acts.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Tracy—A downtown brick building, used as a clinic, burned with a loss of approximately $15,000. Some equipment was saved but the structure was ruined.

Hancock—The conversion of the Hancock National Bank to a state bank with capital of $25,000 and $10,000 surplus was announced by Robert D. Beery, state banking commissioner.

Owatonna—Chickens, raised as a hobby, won eight prizes at the International Poultry show at Indianapolis for the Rev. Father David Ryszka, rector of St. Hyancinth's parish here.

St. Paul—Minnesota's WPA quota for the winter will be 44,500 instead of 40,000, Victor Christgau, state WPA administrator, announced. The additional 4,500 will permit the retention of drouth-stricken farmers on projects.

Minneapolis—Five masked, heavily-armed, cursing gunmen forced their way into a North side gambling house, cowed more than a score of customers with pistols, lined them up against the wall and fled with $5,000 in cash. The robbery was not reported to police.

Minneapolis—Only about 15,000 of Minnesota's native Chippewas remain of the once thriving nation and the number is slowing decreasing, Harold Searls of the state forestry department told the Minneapolis chapter of the Izaak Walton league at a luncheon.

St. Paul—Motor vehicle registrations in Minnesota have reached an all-time peak, Mike Holm, secretary of state, reported, As of December 1, 803,867 vehicles of all descriptions had been registered, 51,013 more than in 1935. Revenues from the licensing will amount to approximately $8,000,000.

St. Paul—Secretary of State Mike Holm became an assistant to Santa Claus in arranging special gifts of automobile license numbers. Requests usually are for license numbers identical with home residence or telephone numbers. Deadline for applications for special numbers has been set at Dec. 31.

Wadena—A farm youth, arrested by an operative of the state bureau of criminal apprehension, pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery and was sentenced to a year in prison. The youth gave the name of George Manson. He is 19 years old. He confessed to charges of cashing two forged checks in Wadena stores.

Preston—Investigators barred evidence strengthening robbery as the motive for the mysterious slaying of Knute and Sievert Olson, bachelor brother farmers. Melvin C. Passolt, superintendent of the state bureau of criminal apprehension, disclosed after a conference with Sheriff Knute Inglebret that the $830 recovered was taken from the body of Sievert.

Alden—Nearly 500 ducks, poisoned by lead shot pellets found on lake bottoms have been found dead or too sick to fly on Bear lake in Freeborn county the state game and fish department revealed. Experts, investigating the report of Game Warden Andrew O. Larson of Alden, found pellets in the birds' gizzards. Examination indicated they were suffering from lead poisoning.

Stillwater—Legislation authorizing either the development of penal camps or the establishment of a third penal institution for male offenders was recommended by the state board of control in its sixth biennial report. With a cell capacity of 1,224, Warden J. J. Sullivan of Stillwater state prison said in his sub-report, there are 210 less cells than prisoners. The prison population is 1,434.

Minneapolis—The fastest railroad run ever made between Minneapolis and Chicago was clipped off by the new seven-car Zephyr train of the Burlington road, bearing a party of 100 Twin City business men on a good will tour. The run was made in 5 hours 22 minutes and 10 seconds. The average speed for the 431 miles was 80.2 miles an hour. The top speed was 110 miles an hour,

St. Paul—The state government will have to find at least $14,600,000 in new revenue every year; its financial condition is serious; its tax system must be overhauled and modernized. That's what the interim legislative commission on taxes reported in the first instalment of a voluminous report on its findings, the result of long study. Later, specifications and recommendations will be submitted. The report will go to the regular session, which opens January 5.

Duluth—A supreme court ruling in favor of the Mesaba range iron ore mining companies in St. Louis county gave the concerns another victory in their fight for lower tax valuation of reserved properties. The high court upheld 41 out of the 43 mining cases appeared from the St. Louis county district court. In the lower court the companies gained a 15 per cent reduction of the $104,000,000 valuation assessment levied by the state when the court ruled the actual valuation at $88,000,000.

Gold Spring—An early morning fire swept through the main street, causing damage, estimated between $60,000 and $75,000, to a dry goods store and office building and forced three families to flee into below freezing temperatures scantily clad. The fire, believed caused by an overheated furnace, was discovered at 2 a. m. in the building occupied by the Maurin department store, doctors' and dentists' offices and apartments. Damage to the building was estimated at $30,000 with the remainder of the loss incurred by the store and offices.

David's New Year's Inspiration

by Alice B. Palmer

DAVID had escorted Dorothy May to the New Year's grand ball for the last three years and they had danced the old year out and the New Year in, while whispering sweet "nothings" into each other's ears. But this year David was possessed with the New Year's spirit. He felt a strong desire to make someone else happy.

"What on earth is the matter lately, David, you seem to be so exuberantly happy?" spoke mother, in her kindly observant way. "Has Dot promised to marry you, or are you contemplating a proposal from her?"

"Something better than that, mother. I am planning New Year's resolutions," replied David.

Several days before the great holiday, David found himself in a large department store, buying a new gown for his mother. He felt rather out of place in a ladies' dress section, but with the aid of an understanding saleslady, he soon found just the thing, a golden brown floral design, his mother's favorite color. Then he thought of slippers to match and a pretty nosegay to pin upon her dress, and he was quite finished. He left the store simply bursting with enthusiasm. Just as he turned the corner toward home, he ran into Dorothy. "Why Dot, I'm so glad to see you."

"Looks like you have been shopping, Davy."

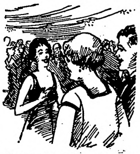
"Yes, but I have something important to ask you, Dot. Would you mind having your brother Joe see you to the New Year's ball? I have something very important to attend to first, but I'll be there later."

"Why David Morely, what do you mean?" said Dot, indignantly. "Are you really breaking the spell of our annual rendezvous?" Then, before he could reply, she continued with pretended indifference. "Very well, I'll go with Jean Raft. I know he'll take me. I suppose you are driving Dolly for a ride. Well, you are welcome to her. Good-by!"

Voices and laughter proclaimed the approach of another happy New Year, as David came charging into the cozy living room where his mother was just finishing the home paper.

"I have your things laid out, Davy, your best shirt and favorite tie."

"You are always so thoughtful, mother, never thinking of yourself," said David, as he chuckled, contemplating the great surprise.



Dorothy Spied Them First and Came Charging Over.

Some hours later David appeared, quite ready for the evening. He did really look charming and mother did not hesitate in telling him so.

"I'm off," he shouted, and then he was gone.

But it was not long before mother heard the loud peal of the door bell. "Who in the world can that be on New Year's eve?" thought she, hurrying to the door. She stepped back in surprise as she saw David, himself, standing there smiling.

"What is it, my boy, have you forgotten something?"

"No, mother, I am your gallant knight, come to take you to the New Year's ball. The cab, without, awaits your pleasure, Madam!" And David laughed merrily. They both roared with laughter.

"To prove that I really mean it, mother, go up and look in your room."

Although she did not comprehend what it was all about, she climbed the stairs with vague misgivings. But when she beheld the beautiful outfit her son had selected for her, she stood still and stared.

The silence was broken by David shouting impatiently from below: "Hurry, mother, or we shall be late for the ball!"

Mother called out, "All right dear," as she slipped into the new finery, truly feeling like a girl again. As she pinned the flower upon her dress, she marveled at David's ingenuity.

An hour later David and his mother arrived at the New Year's ball. Dorothy spied them first and came charging over, flushed and excited.

"Oh, Davy, can you ever forgive me?" she sighed, beaming upon him, adoringly.

David's reply was drowned out by the Happy New Year wishes on all sides of them, but his eyes expressed the joy of an inspiration fulfilled.

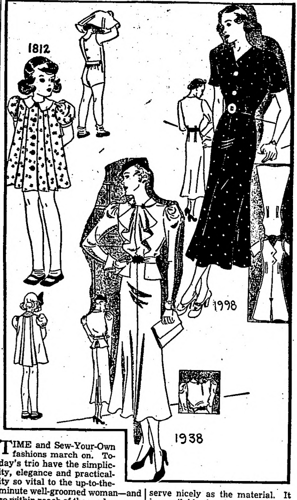
Simple, Elegant, Practical



TIME and Sew-Your-Own fashions march on. Today's trio have the simplicity, elegance and practicality so vital to the up-to-the-minute well-groomed woman—and so within reach of the modern, progressive members of The Sewing Circle.

Pattern 1812—Little Miss Two-To-Five can manage her own dressing with the aid of this frock that buttons down the front. She will be the picture of daintiness too, with such clever aids as princess lines, puff sleeves and an intriguing little collar. The one piece step-in is the essence of practicality—a great boon to the youngster's comfort. This ensemble is available in sizes 2, 3, 4 and 5 years. Size 3 requires 2⅝ yards of 35 or 39 inch fabric and ⅜ yard contrasting.

Pattern 1998—This new dress "belongs" in almost any company. Its great simplicity will endear it to homemakers, and business women alike. It is a combination of charm, good lines and youthfulness. You'll want two versions of this style — one with short sleeves, the other with long. Pique, silk crepe or velveteen will serve nicely as the material. It is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 4⅔ yards of 35 inch material, with long sleeves 4⅞ yards.

Pattern 1938—Daytime distinction takes on a new meaning in this super-styled frock. The squared shoulders, swing skirt and peplum fulness are the important details which give it such perfectly balanced finesse. Yet not one part of it is difficult to cut or to sew. This is a dress which is adequate for every occasion—save the strictly formal.

Available for sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 4½ yards of 39 inch material. The collar, jabot and belt in contrast take ⅝ yard.

Don't miss these grand numbers. A detailed sewing chart accompanies each pattern to guide you every step of the way.

Home Heating Hints

By John Barclay
Heating Expert

How to Check "Chimney Loss," Greatest Waste in Home Heating

WHAT is "chimney loss"? Well, that's a term we heating experts have for heat that goes up the chimney and is wasted.

Yet it's really a simple matter to save money by reducing this loss—convert "chimney loss" to "useful heat," as we call it. Here's the remedy:

Next time you refuel the fire, move the handle of the turn damper (that disc or plate-like damper inside the smoke pipe) 1-16th of an inch toward the closed upright position. Then, if the fire keeps on burning too freely, turn the damper another sixteenth of an inch. Repeat this operation until you find the correct adjustment—one that will deliver the greatest amount of useful heat with the least "chimney loss."

Turn Damper in Smoke Pipe

Once you have found this ideal adjustment of the damper, mark the position on the smoke pipe with a piece of chalk or something that can be plainly seen, and leave the damper set at that mark.

Bear this in mind: The nearer the turn damper is set to the closed position the smaller the "chimney loss" and the greater the volume of "useful heat" that goes to properly heating your home. And, of course, the lower your fuel bills.

Don't Irritate Gas Bloating

If you want to really GET RID OF GAS and terrible bloating, don't expect to do it by just doctoring your stomach with harsh, irritating alkalies and "gas tablets." Most GAS is lodged in the stomach and upper intestine and is due to old poisonous matter in the constipated bowels that are loaded with ill-causing bacteria.

If your constipation is of long standing, enormous quantities of dangerous bacteria accumulate. Then your digestion is upset. GAS often presses heart and lungs, making life miserable.

You can't eat or sleep. Your head aches. Your back aches. Your complexion is sallow and pimply. Your breath is foul. You are a sick, grouchy, wretched, unhappy person. YOUR SYSTEM IS POISONED.

Thousands of sufferers have found in Adlerika the quick, scientific way to rid their systems of harmful bacteria. Adlerika rids you of gas and cleans foul poisons out of BOTH upper and lower bowels. Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika. Get rid of GAS. Adlerika does not gripe—is not habit forming. At all Leading Druggists.

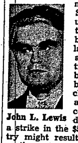
Steel Workers Swing to the Lewis Forces



John L. Lewis

UNDER the general leadership of John L. Lewis the war for unionizing the steel industry and destroying the company unions is now under way. Some 250 company union representatives from the Pittsburgh, the Cleveland - Youngstown and the eastern districts met in Pittsburgh and were told by Philip Murray, chief aide of Lewis and chairman of the committee for industrial union, that a strike in the $5,000,000,000 industry might result "if the industry continues to employ its dog-in-the-manger attitude," in dealing with trade unions.

Thereupon the delegates adopted resolutions unanimously condemning the company union plan as a "farce," and establishing a new organization called the "CIO represenatatives council," with this "declaration of principles:"

1. All steel workers be organized into a national industrial union.
2. Employee representatives use their influence to enroll the steel workers into the steel workers organizing committee's campaign.
3. All steel workers be thoroughly informed by employee representatives who know from experience that the company union is a device of the management and totally unable to win any major concessions for the steel workers.
4. CIO employee representatives remain inside the company union for reasons obvious to all.

The wage demands are:

A $1.24 a day increase for all employees receiving over $5 a day.

A 30 hour, five day week.

Paid vacations of one week for employees of two years' service and two weeks for employees of five or more years' service.

Time and one-half pay for overtime within the regular working week.

Double time for Sundays and holidays.

Flat Glass Industry Paralyzed by Strikes

EXTENSION of the glass workers' strike to plants in Toledo, Charleston, W. Va., and Shreveport, La., brought the flat glass industry almost to a standstill. The closing of these factories is directed against the automobile industry, but the Ford company is equipped to produce its own glass and the other automobile makers are said to have enough glass in stock for a month. It was estimated that 14,300 men were idle at the plants of the Libby - Owens and Pittsburgh Plate Glass companies.

The new strikes were called after leaders of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers failed to reach an agreement with representatives of the two companies concerning strikes already in progress. Libby-Owens also was negotiating for a new union contract, their old one having expired.

Employers said the impasse was reached as a result of the union's determined demands for a closed shop, a checkoff system of union dues, and wage increases.

Glen W. McCabe, president of the Glass Workers' federation, denied the union was demanding a closed shop or that the checkoff system had to be granted.

Senator Peter Norbeck of South Dakota Dies

PETER NORBECK, United States senator from South Dakota since 1920, died at his home in Redfield, S. D., at the age of sixty-six after a long illness from heart disease and cancer of the tongue and jaw. Norbeck, a Republican with radical tendencies, entered politics in 1908 as a member of the state senate. Later he was lieutenant governor and governor of his state and then was elected to the United States senate. In that body he was an insistent advocate of agricultural relief measures.

Norbeck's death reduced to 16 the number of Republicans in the senate, but if the selection of his successor is left to the Republican governor-elect, there would be again 17. However it may be that Tom Berry, the Democratic governor about to go out of office, will be named to fill out Norbeck's term.

Hundreds Are Killed by Earthquake in Salvador

EARTHQUAKE shocks accompanied by volcanic eruptions devastated large areas in central Salvador, killing more than two hundred persons and injuring about four hundred. San Vicente, a city of 26,000, was the center of the temblors, and it was reported to be practically destroyed. Several thousand persons there were participating in a religious procession when the first quake came, and many of them were crushed under falling walls. Other towns in the stricken region were wrecked. Roads from the capital were broken up and communications were destroyed, so that accurate information was slow in coming out.

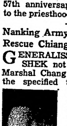
All of the towns affected by the quake are in the vicinity of the San Vicente volcano. The area, important in manufacturing and agriculture, is in the rich tobacco and indigo-growing region.

Gen. Maximiliano Martinez, president of Salvador, hastened to the scene of the disaster to take personal charge of relief measures, and physicians and medical supplies were rushed from San Salvador, together with military detachments

Pope Has Fainting Spell and Grows Weaker

HOPE for the recovery of Pope Pius dwindled day by day. He suffered a fainting spell and was reported to be exceedingly weak. His illness was complicated by high fever and there was danger of influenza. Senator Nicola Pande of Rome, widely known as a specialist on the ills of old age, was summoned by Dr. Amanti Milani, and both agreed that the pontiff must have complete rest. His visitors were limited to the ten cardinals who are prefects of executive bodies of the church and they were permitted to enter the sick room only one each day to obtain the pope's authorization for their most important decisions. The customary Christmas eve audience for cardinals and diplomats was canceled, and the pope also had to abandon his plan to celebrate mass on the 57th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood.

Nanking Army Fighting to Rescue Chiang Kai-shek



Chang Hsueh-liang

GENERALISSIMO CHIANG KAI-SHEK not being released by Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang within the specified time, the Nanking troops moved against the Sianfu rebels. Two of the mutinous battalions were captured and disarmed at Huhsien. It appeared that Marshal Chang really was reduced to negotiating for his own life and safety, and there were reports that he was willing to surrender the dictator and quit the country, as has many a rebellious Chinese war lord before him. T. V. Soong, who is Chiang's brother-in-law, went to Sianfu to attempt to arrange for Chiang's release. American and British governments were concerned over the safety of their nationals in Sianfu if that city should be besieged by the National army. There would certainly be a distressing shortage of food and fuel, and to this would be added the dangers of probable bombardment by artillery and airplanes. Discipline among the mutinous troops is known to be very poor and already there have been many instances of murder and looting.

Japanese military authorities charge that Marshal Chang's revolt was part of a deliberate plan to line up western powers, including soviet Russia, against Japan. The Chinese ambassador to Tokio was told by Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita that the Chinese government would not be permitted to enter into any accord that would make it appear that it favored war against Japan. Arita made it plain that Japan would abandon its waiting policy if Nanking compromised with Marshal Chang.

President Gomez of Cuba Breaks With Batista

PRESIDENT MIGUEL GOMEZ of Cuba and his administration are at outs with Col. Fulgencio Batista, chief of staff and the "strong man" of the island republic. Batista has been insisting on a bill for a 9 cents a bag sugar tax designed to produce $2,000,000 revenue annually for rural schools to be operated by army sergeants. Gomez and his crowd have opposed this legislation, fearing it means the rise of fascism; but it is warmly supported by the farmers, tobacco raisers and canefield workers, thousands of whom marched to Havana to demand the passage of the bill. These people call Batista "defender of the common people" and "savior of Cuba."

The sugar tax bill was passed, but President Gomez persisted in his opposition, and vetoed the measure. The Batista followers demanded his resignation and also prepared to have him impeached by the house of representatives. At this writing it is expected Gomez will quit his office.

Several months ago Batista was quoted as saying he would not be afraid to head a dictatorship "if it were necessary for the good of the country." He may soon be called on to assume that position.

Senator Black Has Plan to Curb Lower Courts

SENTIMENT in favor of legislation to lessen the powers of the Supreme court is growing weaker in Washington because the President seems to be opposed to it, at least for the present. But Senator Hugo Black of Alabama has announced that he will introduce a bill designed to strip the lower courts of their injunctive powers. This measure would prohibit lower courts from enjoining the operation of laws of congress and require them to forward all records and complete transcripts to the Supreme court within 30 days after an appeal.

Half a Billion Wanted for Works Relief

HARRY HOPKINS, WPA administrator, and Harold L. Ickes, PWA administrator, were called into conference with President Roosevelt and plans were laid for seeking from congress an appropriation of $500,000,000 to continue the federal works relief program until next June 30. Hopkins reported that the funds on hand would scarcely last through January and that quick action is necessary if the program is not to be interrupted. The estimate on the money needed was based on the fact that the same amount was taken from WPA funds for drouth relief. Ickes states that his WPA program would release a substantial number of unemployed from WPA rolls.

President Roosevelt Busy Preparing for Inaugural

President Roosevelt

RETURNING to Washington in fine health and spirits after his trip to Buenos Aires, President Roosevelt plunged into a great mass of work that had accumulated on his desk. There were numerous reports on government activities to be read, plans for the inaugural on January 20 to be made, outlining of his inaugural address, and consultation with the full cabinet concerning the program for his second term. Still more immediate was the task of writing his annual message on the state of the nation and his budget message for the coming fiscal year.

The inaugural ceremonies will be simple in accordance with Mr. Roosevelt's wishes, and the traditional ball will be omitted. After consultation with Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the inaugural committee, and Vice President Garner, it was decided that the parade should be limited to units from the army, navy and marine corps and from the West Point and Annapolis academies.

One of Mr. Roosevelt's first duties was a sad one—that of attending the funeral services for August Gennerich, his close friend and bodyguard, who died suddenly in Buenos Aires. The services were held in the White House and with the President were Mrs. Roosevelt, Vice President and Mrs. Garner and cabinet members.

John Hamilton Remains Republican Chairman

JOHN HAMILTON is still chairman of the Republican national committee. At a meeting in Chicago 74 of the 76 members in attendance rejected his resignation, and he responded: "I'm gratified, and I'll keep right on working."

Mr. Hamilton was then voted a salary of $15,000 a year and a base expense account of $10,000 annually, and will be required to put in all his time on the task of rebuilding the party and reducing the deficit. This is the first time a national chairman has been put on a full time salary basis.

Before adjournment Hamilton was empowered to appoint a group of Republicans soon to formulate a plan to bring the party funds out of the red. Treasurer C. B. Goodspeed reported that the campaign expenditures were $6,540,776, and that the deficit was $901,501.

Hitler Suggests Dividing Spain Into Two Parts

IT NOW seems likely that General Franco and his Fascist armies cannot conquer Spain without open and substantial aid from sympathetic nations, and that cannot be given him without grave danger of precipitating a general European war. But Adolf Hitler has devised a plan for solving the Spanish problem and probably will soon offer it to the powers. His scheme is for the division of Spain into two countries, a Fascist state comprising the area Franco now holds and including Madrid, and a republican state centering in Catalonia. To arrange this Germany may propose a general peace conference.

General Faupel, personal aide to General Franco, went to Berlin and told the reichsfuehrer that the Fascista must have more help. But Hitler is moving with considerable caution, though he has recognized the Franco regime.

The Russian government has made official charges that the Spanish Fascists set fire to and sank the Soviet motorship Konsomol and warned them of grave consequences. Newspaper announcements told the Spanish insurgents they were "playing with fire" and called the act a "frightful new crime of incendiarists of war."

Talking to Advantage of Others and Joy to Ourselves in 1937

TALKING is the recognized medium of communication between persons who are together or who, being absent, use a telephone. It is unfortunate having such a marvelous medium at our command that we so often fail to put it to the use worthy of its value. It is possible to send a glow of happiness through the listener when we speak merited words of appreciation. It is possible to solace those in sorrow by words of comfort spoken from the heart. It is possible to make joy doubly gladsome by expressing our happiness in the good fortune of others. Through talking to our children we can spur them on to do fine things, or encourage them in worthy resolves. In short the good we can do by talking in the right spirit is inestimable. By talking in the right way we bring good to others and joy to ourselves.

"Too Much Talk"

It is when we swerve from the best use of the spoken word that we drag it down and harm both ourselves and our hearers. There is an expression "too much talk" which is significant of this very thing. The words speak for themselves, declaring that it would be advisable to cease saying the things we are. It is never said of good words. Of them we could say: Let us have more talk of the same sort, it is needed.

Many Words

Have you ever considered how much is said when derogatory talk is going on? Words are spoken and reiterated over and over again, as if by repetition the unpleasant things would be increased. Unfortunately this is what happens. Unkind or unfriendly conversation, by some perverse twist of human nature, is sure to be repeated, and usually with embellishments. Either the one who repeats it cannot believe her ears, and wonders if anyone else knows about the unfortunate circumstances, or else she finds a strange pleasure in repeating slander. It may be the derogatory words are against someone she dislikes. It may be they are about a total stranger. If the talk was commendatory repeating it would foster fine things. Good things should be given frequent repetition.

Pleasure Giving in 1937

We all could add so much to the pleasure and joy of living during the new year 1937, if we would set a watch on our talk, and by a wishful determination use this great means at our command to help others. It is one of the things that costs nothing and yet which can do such an endless amount of good. It is a way open to all alike.

St. Cloud —The old saying, "every cloud has a silver lining" applied itself in the case of an enterprising local youth who ignored the taxation cloud involved in the social security act and sought out the silver lining. Entering a book store to purchase a bottle of "tattooing ink", he said, "We're all just a number now and it's going to be mighty hard to hang onto that little number card for as long as 40 or 50 years, so why not have it tattooed upon us and evade any possible future argument." The young man plans to tatoo social security numbers of people, and although unfamiliar with the methods he is feeling his way about and intends to set up with the proper equipment as soon as possible. He has confidence of cashing in on Uncle San's recently effective piece of legislation.

LIVESTOCK SALE TO BE CONDUCTED AT WINTER SHOWS

The Red River Valley Livestock association is making final plans to hold a purebred livestock sale during Winter Shows week. According to O. M. Kiser, secretary, the sale will be held Thursday, February 11, in the association's livestock pavilion.

The sale will be supervised by a committee composed of J. R. Sargent, Crookston, chairman; E. E. Carmen, Ada; Andrew Johnstad Beltrami; Emil Lerud, Twin Valley, and O. M. Kiser.

Sale entries will be limited to purebred beef and dairy cattle, sheep and hogs, and every effort will be made to maintain the high standards of breeding and quality set in former years.

The Valley Livestock association will also sponsor the annual livestock and 4-H club show, which will be held during Winter Shows week. Entries from all parts of the Northwest are expected to tax the livestock buildings to capacity. Last year, a fire gutted the main livestock barn just before the opening of the show, but temporary repairs were rushed and the show held as scheduled. This building has been compltely remodeled so that everything is in readiness for the forthcoming event. Prospective exhibitors should write to John Saugstad, Crookston, business manager, for copies of the premium list.

"U" HEAD MAKES BIENNIAL REPORT TO THE REGENTS

Present day youth has been seeking education in steadily growing numbers during the past two years but with 5,200,000 young men and women still out of school and unemployed, no satisfactory solution of the "youth problem" has yet been reached, President L. D. Coffman of the University of Minnesota declared, in his biennial report to the Board of Regents.

"Two years ago in my report I called special attention to the number of young people who were out of work and out of school, and I undertook to analyze the importance of extending and expanding the school system of the country to meet the needs of thousands of young people who are seeking an education or who desire employment," said Dr. Coffman.

"I regret that I cannot report that a satisfactory solution of these problems has been found during the last two years," he continued. "Some progress has been made. There is a remarkable increase in the registration in the high schools, evening schools, and in the colleges and universities of this country, and a smaller number of youth are unemployed than a few years ago."

Citing general figures, the University president asserted that in the United States today there are 20,100,000 young people between the ages of 16 and 24, inclusive. Of these 4,000,000 are now in schools or colleges, 500,000 are in school on a part-time basis, and 7,600,000 are employed on other than work-relief jobs. Of the total, 2,800,000 are married women who are not otherwise employed or attending school, thus leaving 5,200,000 young men and women unemployed and not in school.

Dr. Coffman pointed out that there are various groups, including the American Youth Commission, the Educational Policies Commission which was created by the National Education Association and the Department of Superintendence; and the American Youth Council, which are making serious attempts to study the problems which arise from conditions underlying the figures he cited.

Dr. Coffman proposed, as a part of a new educational technique, joint student-faculty committees to study major social problems. He suggested that at least once in every generation of students, that conferences be held at which world leaders and scholars be invited to discuss such problems as the causes of war, for example, and analyze suggested remedies, in order that future citizens have a better understanding of these phenomena.

BUYS BACK OLD HORSE AT SALE

Frazee—Because he feared that an old brown horse which he formerly owned, would fall into hands of strangers, Tim Wellman bought it back recently at an auction. For many years the horse was one of a team which he employed on his rural mail route, but "time marches on" and eventually the horses were replaced by the more modern and speedy vehicles of transportation. The trusty team was sold but never completely forgotten. When "Flossie", one of the horses, was again put on the auction block, Mr. Wellman, although he has absolutely no use now for her, bought her again instead of having her fall into the hands of strangers who might abuse or overwork her in her old age. The spotted pony which was "Flossie's" team-mate died last summer, or he would probably have purchased it too.

WINTER SESSION OF N. W. SCHOOL OPENS JANUARY 4

The winter term of the Northwest School will open for registration Monday, January 4, and close the last week in March. This has been found to be the most satisfactory time for farm boys and girls to be in school, for they are thus available for spring work at home throughout the crop growing season.

Last fall, 384 boys and girls from fifteen Valley counties were in attendance. As a number of new students will enroll for the Winter term, the attendance for the year is expected to pass 400 for the first time in the history of the school.

Students are urged to take cultural, as well as vocational subjects, to insure a well-balanced course. Hence, emphasis is placed upon English and public speaking, debate, dramatics and music. According to Dr. A. A. Dowell, superintendent of the Northwest School, culture and agriculture should go hand in hand. The farm people are and should be just as much interested in good literature and good music as people engaged in other professions.

Registrar J. W. Mlinar has arranged special classes in agriculture and home economics for students who plan on entering for the first time at the beginning of the winter term.

Poultry Problems to be Topic at Northwest Winter Shows Feb. 9

A round-table discussion of timely poultry problems will be held each day during Winter Shows week, with A. M. Pilkey, Northwest School and station poultryman, in charge. Tuesday afternoon, February 9, will be devoted to poultry housing; Wednesday afternoon, poultry feeding; Thursday poultry health, and Friday, turkey day. According to Professor Pilkey, a comfortable well-ventilated house, free from moisture, is essential for profitable winter egg production. Depression and drouth have played havoc with farm buildings, and the poultry house has been no exception. The time has come when many farmers must give early attention, not only to the poultry house but other poultry equipment such as feed hoppers and water containers. Plans and specifications for rebuilding or improving poultry houses, together with plans for poultry nests, feed hoppers, and water stands, may be obtained through the local county agent or by writing the Northwest Experiment Station, Crookston.

TRAVELER MISTAKES CITY FOR NEW YORK

Red Wing—Entering Red Wing with its brilliantly lighted streets, a stranger thought it was New York and he did not discover his mistake until the following morning. John Kripler of Albernia, British Columbia had train tickets from Vancouver to New York City, passports and a steamship ticket which entitled him to cross the ocean and land at Hamburg, Germany. Jumping from a midnight train at Red Wing he hustled away into the darkness of the night, and failing to return, the conductor notified station attendants and left his baggage. His stop-over made getting to New York in time for the boat's sailing a nip-and-tuck matter. Police who picked him up in the streets of Red Wing in the morning thought him to be suffering from a mind ailment.

GIANT MOSQUITOES IN NATIONAL FOREST

Two Harbors—Mosquitoes in the Superior National forest are not only of a giant variety but also live in snowbanks. Ripley himself would not have believed his eyes when Fred Gowan, a CCC foreman, brought a mosquito into camp recently. He explained that no one has believed his story, but he has the camp superintendent, a forest inspector and two other foremen to testify in his behalf. He finally admitted that he did not have to hit the insect with an axe, but insisted that it was crawling along on the snow. As final proof, the mosquito was produced, pressed between the pages of a field note book.

HAT ROLLS MILES, RETURNED BY AD

Mound—Rolling the distance from one town to the next, from Mound to Seton, did not prevent a woman's $12.00 hat from being found through a 25 cent want ad. When Old Man North Wind whipped a woman's hat from her head and carried it far beyond her reach, she thought it was gone forever. But, reckoning with her resourceful husband, he turned his steps to the office of the Mound Pilot and inserted an advertisement for the return of the hat. A Seton man appeared a few days later with it and carried away a shiny dollar as his reward.

HAULS WRONG HAY STACK BY MISTAKE

Wadena—"I didn't steal the hay, I merely hauled away the wrong stack and I'm darn sorry", said a Wadena county farmer who walked into the sheriff's office to "give himself up". He brought with him the newspaper which contained an item stating that the sheriff was looking for some one who took Frank Kliegel's hay. The hay stack has been returned and all is forgiven.

SNAKE ENJOYS MILD WEATHER

Red Wing— When a garden snake is discovered crawling through foot high snow banks in December with the mercury registering above the freezing mark—what does it mean? For Tommy Christianson, who reported the incident, it verifies predictions that the winter will be mild. Crossing the Vermillion river bottomland, Tommy saw the snake wiggling across the snow-packed-road. Mild temperatures, he believes, lured the reptile from its hibernating den.

THE AFTER-SERVICE

After accurate fitting, next in importance comes the after servicing of glasses during the entire period thru which they are worn. Glasses often become loose, bent, and twisted before the eyes so they cannot give the proper service, and may even be a new source of eye-strain. Dr. Spofford's frequent and regular visits give ample opportunity for this after-service not obtainable in any other way. INVESTIGATE and TELL YOUR FRIENDS OF THIS EXTRAORDINARY SERVICE which is BROUGHT REGULARLY ALMOST TO YOUR VERY DOOR.
